Until July 4th for 25c.

The Democratic Call.

The Democrats of DeKalb county, Indiana, and all those intending to affiliate with them in the ensuing campaign and election, will meet in their respective townships, at the usual places of holding caucuses, on Saturday, the 26th day of April, 1902, at two o'clock in the afternoon, to select delegates to the State convention, to meet in Indianapolis on the 4th day of June, 1902; to the Congressional convention to meet in Kendallville on the 30th day of April, 1902; to the County convention to meet in Auburn on the 8th day of May, 1902, and to the Judicial District convention, the time and place for such last named convention to be hereafter determined.

The basis of representation in each of such conventions, except the County convention, is one delegate for each 200 votes and major fraction thereof, cast for Allen Zollars for Presidential Elector at the election of 1900, and in the County convention, one delegate for each 10 votes and major fraction thereof.

Under this apportionment the various precincts of DeKalb county will be entitled to the number of delegates in said several conventions, as follows:

Representation will be published next week.

Precinct committeemen may change the hour of holding the caucuses in their respective precincts to suit the convenience of the voters thereof, by giving due notice of such change.

Secretaries of the various caucuses will promptly report the proceedings of their respective caucuses to George M. Ralston, Secretary, at Auburn, giving names of the delegates elected to the several conventions.

The Democratic County Convention will meet in convention in Auburn on Thursday, the 8th day of May, 1902, at 10:30 a. m., for the purpose of nominating a candidate for each of the several offices to be filled at the ensuing election, by the voters of DeKalb county, Indiana, and for such other business as may properly come before such convention.

FRANCIS M. HINES, Chairman.
GEORGE M. RALSTON, Secretary.

WILL SLAUGHTER DUCKS NEXT YEAR.

Hayes Ramsey is an amateur hunter and an inventive genius. He had miserably poor luck with the ducks this spring, so his inventive genius has been called into action. He has frequently noticed when hunting in the cornfields bordering the river and sloughs south of town, that stray cattle and horses can pass within a few feet of a flock of feeding wild ducks without alarming the birds in the least. This has given Hayes an idea which he intends to put into use at his earliest opportunity. He is going to procure an intelligent cow and use her as a decoy. Instead of fussing around with a boatload of stupid wooden decoys as he has to do now he will take his trained cow down the river and station himself at some convenient point. Then when the ducks come in and light a quarter of a mile away from him as they invariably do he will start his trained cow toward them and hide himself behind her off side. When near enough he can rest his gun on the cow's spinal column and fill the ducks as full of lead as he likes. He also believes he can teach the cow to act as a retriever and if he is able to do this he can get along without a dog.

STAFFORD.

Arthur Tinstman is working for C. S. Arford.

Some oats and barley were sown week before last.

Mr. Hutchinson and family recently moved to their new home near Alvordton, Ohio, and their many friends will miss them very much.

Fred Blaker recently sold a gray horse to Mr. Decker for $175. Color does not seem to have much to do with the value of a horse, notwithstanding all said to the contrary.

The recent rains and storms have delayed farm work, but there is plenty time for oats and barley yet.

There are some men in this township who are quite advanced in years. Philip Ramsey and Joseph Brown are two of them. The former is in his 79th year and the latter has reached the 86th mile stone.

The friends of Mr. Dawson helped him move his goods from Butler to the Gaff farm which he recently purchased on Saturday week before last. Mr. D. is well spoken of by those who know him and he will be well received by his new neighbors.

In the recent gales fences, trees and many other things were playfully blown about by the fierce winds, but as far as known but little serious damage was done.

John Riser has been in poor health for about a month. He is able to be about again but can not work.

Wm. Wilson went to Auburn on business last Saturday.

John L. Lyon rides in a fine new buggy.

The Farmers' Mutual Ins. Co., are reported to have had some losses lately.

George Riser had a large lot of wood sawed by Grube's machine lately.

There is a report that Wm. Hollinger and others will buy a new threshing outfit for use the coming season. "The more the merrier," perhaps.

For the first time in many years the supreme court of Indiana has disposed of the accumulated cases on the docket, and is "up with its work." Recently thirty of more cases were transferred from the appellate to the supreme court, the latter court being disposed to assist the former in catching up with its work.

We regret to chronicle the death of the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Lee Moltz which occurred Tuesday evening of this week. The funeral was held Thursday afternoon from the house, at 2 o'clock, Elder Drash officiating. We extend our sincere sympathy to the bereaved parents in their dark hours of sorrow.

Monday evening of last week was Florence Campbell's fifteenth birthday. She was reminded of the fact by a sudden and unexpected call at about 6 p. m. by about twenty of her schoolmates togged up in as many different characters. The occasion was very pleasantly enjoyed by them all. After indulging in games and pastimes for a couple of hours and doing justice to some excellent ice cream and cake, they separated for home with a vivid recollection of the event.

A somewhat serious accident occurred on the street Saturday night of last week. Goldie Casebeer, the well known bare back two-horse rider, and her cousin, who lives about two miles northeast of here, were starting home, when their horse became frightened and turning suddenly, threw them both from the buggy. Miss Casebeer was picked up unconscious and carried to Dr. Acker's office, where she soon revived and was able to be taken to the home of a friend. Her cousin a young man, also named Casebeer, suffered much more seriously, having a slight concussion of the brain and other injuries. We have not learned whether he was able to return to his home or not. The buggy was badly damaged.

CARD OF THANKS.

In the dark hours of trouble, human friendship and sympathy are indeed the brightest star. We therefore wish to express our most sincere thanks to the many neighbors and friends who so kindly tendered their service and sympathies during the sickness and death of our darling babe.

ATTRACTIVE WOMEN.

All women sensibly desire to be attractive. Beauty is the stamp of health because it is the outward manifestation of inner purity. A healthy woman is always attractive, bright and happy. When every drop of blood in the veins is pure a beauteous flush is on the cheek. But when the blood is impure, moroseness, bad temper and a sallow complexion tells the tale of sickness, all too plainly. And women to-day know there is no beauty without health. Wine of Cardui crowns women with beauty and attractiveness by making strong and healthy those organs which make her a woman. Try Wine of Cardui, and in a month your friends will hardly know you.

Several of the basket factory boys went to Auburn Tuesday night to attend the play at the opera house entitled, The Run-Away Match.

The frame of James Revett's new house is up, and shows that Jim is a pretty good architect. He done the planning himself.

RUN DOWN.

When a phrase is coined out of world wide human experience it is apt to be brief and expressive. We are "run-down" we say in the endeavor to describe a relaxed physical condition, and all the terminology of medicine could not more expressively describe the actual condition than that every day phrase. It suggests the clock, perfect mechanically, but failing to record the passage of time because it is run-down.

People who have that tired out, run-down feeling will find new life in the use of Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. This great medicine is far more than a tonic. It cures diseases of the organs of digestion and nutrition, and enables the perfect digestion and assimilation of food of which alone all physical strength is made.

"The reason I delayed writing was because I wanted to wait one year after I had taken the medicine before giving my statement, and now I can send a good, conscientious testimonial," writes Mr. Chas. H. Sergeant, of Plain City, Madison Co., Ohio. "During the summer and fall of 1896 I became all 'run-down,' nerves were out of order and stomach out of order. I wrote to Dr. Pierce for advice. He said I had general debility, and advised Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and, thanks to you for your advice, I used six bottles; and since I stopped taking it about one year ago, I have not taken any medicine of any kind, and have been able to work every day. My appetite is good, I can eat three square meals a day, and I do not feel that miserable burning in the stomach after eating. My blood and nerves are in good shape, and, well—in fact, I think I am in pretty good running order."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets keep the bowels active and healthy.

LOOK
MORSE & COMPANY'S
Add over this week, it will pay you.

Morse & Company have formed a strong and permanent resolution that from this day forward they will pay as much and MORE for eggs than any Huxter or wagon dare pay or any territory tributary to Butler. So bring on your eggs and butter to Morse & Co., knowing at all times that we allow no one to pay more for your produce than we do. We propose to make Butler the best market for produce in the country.

We are selling best salt in new full barrels at 90c per barrel.

We are paying 13c per dozen for eggs and 16c for good butter.

We still sell 19 pounds of best granulated or A sugar for $1.00. All other grades proportionately low.

We have the best 10c coffee ever sold in Butler. Try it.

We would also like to have you ask the price and look at our rice. We have the best thing ever offered at the price.

In tobacco and cigars we will simply say we have an elegant line and all sold at rock bottom figures.

Now about Clothing, Boots and Shoes the sale goes on with bargains bigger than ever as all clothing must be closed out to make room for new goods. Come and see us.

SUGAR BEET QUESTION.

Jacob DeGeus of Kalamazoo and C. L. Lockhart of Waterloo were in town last week taking up sugar beets to the people of Butler and vicinity. Regarding the question the Dawn says.

Jacob DeGeus who represents the Sugar Beet Company of Kalamazoo, Mich., has been here for several days looking after the interest of his company. We interviewed the gentleman and found him well informed on the question and disposed to give out his information and tell the why and how the beet crop can be raised with profit to the farmer. Last year, Mr. DeGeus said, was not a favorable year on account of the dry spell, and this taken in connection with the fact that our farmers knew nothing about the culture of beets, makes some of our farmers dissatisfied while others who were successful last year have increased their acerage for the coming season. It is the intention of the Beet company to widen its field of operation and to cover as much of the county as possible, and with this end in view the new contract provides for the delivery of the crop at Waterloo, Auburn, St. Johns, Butler, Moore, Summit and Edgerton. Mr. Lockhart will have charge of the business this year again and will make contracts with the farmers in DeKalb county and will answer all questions that may arise relative to this new and growing industry. The Dawn publisher has seen the beet grown in Nebrask with profit and personally knows that it was a mortgage lifter to farmers who had grown poor raising wheat. It has brought factories into communities and created a home market for what could be raised. The sugar beet industry is like everything else it requires some applications and study to make it a success, and when once our farmers learn how the beet can be raised and the richness of our soil, there will be no trouble in securing the amount of acerage necessary for the establishment of a branch factory some where in the county. We know that many of our farmers claim did not pay last year but the fault lay not in the beet, but in the lack of information of the best raiser and because the proper attention was not given it. The question is of such importance that we will have more to say about it next week. Give the subject careful thought.

SOUTH SIDE.

Grandma Riser has been on the sick list.

Jesse Oberlin is nicely located in his new home.

Mrs. E. Strauss is visiting relatives in Toledo this week.

Henry Tinstman has adorned his home with a new porch.

Wm. Mutzreld has purchased a fine bay mare from Dr. Acker.

Dan Diehl will occupy one of Mrs. Mack's cottages until he is ready to build.

Mr. Diehl, the south side grocer, is moving into the Geisinger house this week.

Mr. Robinson, who is working in Michigan, spent last Sunday with his family.

James Husselman, of Waterloo, visited Chas. and Wes Husselman over Sunday.

Wm. Hampel is preparing to lay a new cement walk. It is to be hoped he has set the ball rolling.

Mr. and Mrs. S. L. Hamlin left Saturday for Goshen, where they will make a short visit with the family of Ira Crow.

Mr. Rainey, an employe of the Wabash, has recently purchased a home of John Campbell, into which he is moving this week.

Jasper Pifers' moved on the place formerly owned by Frank Keller. Mr. Kellers' moved on a farm about five miles east of Butler.

People who has planted garden will have to get out with their shot guns now that the whole south side has turned loose at Blanchy-Lie-Low and Hide and Joupe.

J. H. W. Krontz has sent his parents a picture of himself and four other surveyors who are under him. The picture was taken in a tent in which they are staying. John looks as fat and pleasant as ever.

The south side now boasts of having another factory. Frank Smith, formerly proprietor of the south side grocery, has started a broom factory on Walnut street. He will sell to jobbers and expects to have some ready for market in a few days. Mr. Smith is a business man in every sense and should receive encouragement in his new industry.

IMPURE BAKING POWDER SEIZED

The New York Board of Health Find it Contains Alum and Rock, Declare it Dangerous to Health and Dump it into the River.

The New York papers report that the Health Department of that city has seized as dangerous to health nearly two tons of cheap mixtures sold for baking powder, and dumped them into the offal scow to be destroyed. More of the powder was found in a Sixth ave. department store. The report of the analysis of the Health department stated that it was "an alum baking powder" containing alum and pulverised rock.

The different Health Authorities seem to have different ways of repressing the sale of bad baking powders. In England they have prosecuted the grocers under the general law and broken up the traffic. In Missouri the sale of alum baking powder is actually prohibited by law. In New York they seize the unwholesome stuff and cast it into the river, without any discussion. The latter way is certainly effective.

The alum baking powders are usually offered at a low price ten to twenty cents a pound or with some prize as a temptation to the house wife.

Consumers can protect themselves by buying only high-grade baking powder of established name and reputation. Do not be tempted by the grocer to take something else as "just as good" or "our own brand," for the trials show that the grocer himself is often deceived dy unscrupulous makers and is selling an alum powder without knowing it.

There are several good powders on the market; let the housekeeper insist on having what she knows is right, and not be induced to risk the life of the family for an imaginary saving of a few cents.

RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas, the great command in His infinite wisdom has seen fit to order through the mustering officer death, to remove from our midst our beloved brother, Emery Haley a member of our society a sense of personal bereavement and we who knew him will ever cherish and gratefully remember his efficient services in the work of his Master. Therefore be it Resolved, that we in the death of our brother recognize the hand of our Father who knows the best way and time to call his children home. He knows what fruit is ready for the heavenly garner.

Resolved that we tender our heartfelt sympathies to the bereaved family.

Resolved that these resolutions be spread on record and a copy be presented to the family of the deceased.

REV. FRECH RETURNS TO BUTLER.

By decision of the M. E. Conference Rev. T. F. Frech is returned to Butler for another year making his fifth annual appointment to this charge. The return of Bro. Frech to this place is a source of much gratification to his many friends and the members of the church as well, who were unanimous in desiring his return. He is a popular and able man who had done much for the advancement of the cause in Butler and vicinity.

MARRIED.

On Saturday evening April 12, Hugh Wineland and Nellie Moody, of St. Joe, were united in marriage in Butler, at the home of Dallas Headly, brother of the bride. Only the intimate friends of the parties were present. L. F. Drash, pastor of the Church of Christ, officiated.

Mr. and Mrs. Wineland will make their home in St. Joe.

A BIRTHDAY PARTY.

A very pleasant birthday surprise was given to Mrs. S. S. Stewart the evening of April 14th, by her neighbors. Mrs. Wils Bordner presented a birthday cake in which a miniature doll had been secreted. The lady which got the piece of cake containing the doll was to be given the next party and also furnish a present to the lady in whose honor the party was given

Mrs Craft got the doll and is therefore the next in line of the progressive birthday parties which will occur on April 22nd, unless otherwise decided. A unique program will be furnished for the occasion and every lady invited is expected to furnish something for the edification or instruction of the company.

Over-Work Weakens Your Kidneys.

Unhealthy Kidneys Make Impure Blood.

All the blood in your body passes through your kidneys once every three minutes.

The kidneys are your blood purifiers, they filter out the waste or impurities in the blood.

If they are sick or out of order, they fail to do their work.

Pains, aches and rheumatism come from excess of uric acid in the blood, due to neglected kidney trouble.

Kidney trouble causes quick of unsteady heart beats, and makes one feel as though they had heart trouble, because the heart is over-working in pumping thick, kidney-poisoned blood through veins and arteries.

It used to be considered that only urinary troubles were to be traced to the kidneys, but now modern science proves that nearly all constitutional diseases have their beginning in kidney trouble.

If you are sick you can make no mistake by first doctoring your kidneys. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases and is sold on its merits by all druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar sizes. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also pamphlet telling you how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. Mention this paper when writing Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y.

Eczema for Forty Years.

The Unqualified Statement of a Well Known Attorney, St. Ignace, Mich.

Some of the cures made by Dr. A. W. Chase's Ointment of stubborn and long continued eczema and skin diseases are causing much comment. People are beginning to realize that this Ointment is a wonder worker with all kinds of skin trouble. Attorney James J. Brown, St. Ignace, Michigan, writes as follows:

Dr. A. W. Chase Med. Co. Buffalo, N. Y.—Gents:—I cannot refrain from expressing my acknowledgement for the relief I have felt from Dr. Chase's Ointment. For 40 years I was afflicted with a skin disease which was located in one spot—on my leg. I have spent at a rough estimate five hundred dollars trying to effect a cure, and not until I applied this ointment did I get relief. You are strangers to me and this letter is prompted directly because I want to say and I feel as though I ought to say it. That Chase's ointment has effected a complete cure of my affliction. Three boxes did the work on my leg. I was also suffering from itching piles and applied the ointment which gave the best of satisfaction by affording me rest at night and rapidly causing the disease to disappear. I have received such relief and comfort from the ointment that I cannot withhold expressing my gratitude. I was so long afflicted with the tortures of eczema. I feel now that I am cured, a word of recommendation is due from me. Yours truly,

JAMES J. BROWN.

DR. PIERCE'S INVALIDS' HOTEL AND SURGICAL INSTITUTE, 663 MAIN ST., BUFFALO, N. Y.

Few people are aware of the extent of the Institution presided over by Dr. Pierce or that an important part of his medical enterprise was the establishment of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, where people from afar can be lodged, boarded and treated, with all the privileges offered by the finest hospitals, yet with a personal care and freedom entirely foreign to such institutions. Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute has a staff of nearly a score of physicians, each man a specialist. It has a bacteriological and analytical department second to those of no medical institution in the United States. It has elaborate machines and appliances, together with all the most approved mechanical apparatus, for the vibratory treatment of diseases.

Of late particular attention has been drawn to the possibilty of treating certain forms of disease, mechanically. Whole pages in the newspapers and magazines have been given up to the description and illustration of the mechanical devices in use, and the mechanical treatment of disease has been exploited as if it were a novelty. It may be to many people, but as an evidence of the advanced thought and progressive spirit of Dr. Pierce, it may be mentioned that many of these mechanical devices for the cure of disease have been in use in the Invalid's Hotel and Surgical Institute for a score of years. In this as in everything else, Dr. Pierce keeps his great Institution at the front, with the result that there is a constant stream of persons seeking treatment who come from the farthest states and most remote territories. Often these invalids have gone to the great hospitals of the country and found no benefit, coming to Dr. Pierce as a last resort. It is gratifying to know that the public faith in Dr. Pierce and his methods and medicines is amply justified by the many and remarkable cures which have resulted from his treatment. It may be well in this connection to emphasize the value of Dr. Pierce's offer of free consultation by letter addressed especially to those suffering from chronic diseases. In a great many cases the advertised offers of "free medical advice" have behind them not a single medical practitioner qualified to give medical advice. It is only necessary to point to the medical staff of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute as evidence that Dr. Pierce's offer is genuine as it is free.

A FINE ISSUE.

The May number of The Delineator is the third of the great Spring issues in both fashion and literary features and is the most notable of the season. With the many artistic designs for garments for late Spring wear come advance Summer fashions from the hands of eminent designers, and in attractiveness these styles have probably never been surpassed. An article of especial interest at this season is on graduation dresses. The chief literary contribution is the Educational value of Some Recent Plays, written by Norman Hapgood, the celebrated caitic, and splendidly illustrated. Dr. Elliot's recollections of the child Patti, at the time of her first benefit, make one of the most delightful papers in the series of Notable Women; and in a different vein Clara E. Laughlin tells the story of the gifted Shelley's unfortunate marriage and its results. Two very pictorial as well as practical subjects are Animal Photography, in which some most interesting records of animal life are presented directly from nature, and Basket-Ball, in the series of Athletics for Women, the fine pictures being made from photographs from pictures taken during the play. For the children Lina Beard introduces some new and interesting Pastimes. The fiction is The Hand of Providence, by Luellen Teters, and the Tourney of Hunting Hill, by Harriet Riddle Davis, both of which are beautifully illustrated.

BETTER THAN PILLS.

The question has been asked, "In what way are Chamberlain's Stomach & Liver Tablets superior to pills?" Our answer is: They are easier and more pleasant to take, more mild and gentle in effect and more reliable as they can always be depended upon Then they cleanse and invigorate the stomach and leave the bowels in a natural condition, while pills are more harsh in effect and their use is often followed by constipation. DEMOCRATIC STATE CONVENTION.

The Democracy of Indiana will assemble in State Convention at Tomlinson Hall, in the city of Indianapolis, at 10 o'clobx a. m. on Wednesday, June 4 1902, for the purpose of nominating candidates for State officers, the adoption of a platform, and such other business as may properly come before the Convention.

The basis of representation to said Convention as fixed by the Democratic State Central Committee, is one delegate for each 200, and one delegate for each fraction over 100, of the vote cast for Judge Allen Zollars for Presidential Elector in 1900.

Under the apportionment the Convention will consist of 1547 delegates, divided among the counties as hereafter stated.

The offices for which nominations will be made are as follows:

Secretary of State.
Auditor of State.
Treasurer of State.
Attorney General.
Clerk of the Supreme Court.
Superintendent of Public Instruction
State Geologist.
State Statistician.
One Judge of the Supreme Court for Fifth District.
Six Judges for the Appellate Court.

Wm. H. O'Brian, Chairman.
Joe Reiley, Secretary.

And now an ediot has gone forth from the scientists that the beard of man is an incubator of germs and must go, in the interest of the health of the country. This may be so in some instances, but we have seen beards so besmeared with tobacco spit and drippings from the nasal appendix that no self-respecting, ordinary germ would dare to monkey around in that vicinit y.

HELLER'S TESTIMONY.

Albert Heller, living at 1114 Farnham St., Omaha, says: "I have tried most everything that is used as a preventative or cure for headache, but nothing did me so much good as Krause's Headache Capsules. Others who have used them say the same thing." Price 25c. Sold by Geddes & Harding.

Very often a good, sensible girl will marry a man against the combined advice of her parents and friends. This is the result of blind infatuation. Such girls find out what a sad and serious mistake they have made very soon afterwards and and then they find themselves in a serious predicament. They do not know whether to seek relief in the vorce court or face disappointment and live as best they can. A bright young woman in a neighboring town committed such a grave mistake, but after the spell had been broken and the utter worthlessness of the man she married became apparent to her, she confessed that she never realized during their courtship how near nothing the fellow was.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer one Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

It is a good thing for Fairbanks and Beveridge that U. S. Senators are not elected by popular vote. Mark Hanna should hunt up some children who still believe in Santa Claus and tell them that he does not want to be president. He might telegraph the news to a convention of perpetual-motion inventors or quietly hunt out those who believe the war is over in the Philippines and that the democratic party can smash the trusts. Mark should carefully avoid letting wise boys know it—those, for instance, who were born longer ago than yesterday—because it does not help to boost a man into a high office if it is generally known that he is a celebrated joker.

One of the most hopeful indications of the times is the large increase of organizations for the promotion of kindness to animals. The relief to a long suffering voteless and voiceless class is immense, but apart from the promotion of the well being of the animated world over which man has dominion, the inference that those with criminal proclivities must draw—that if they are not permitted to abuse the so-called lower animals, how much less is it permissable to abuse their wives, children and neighbors—is bound to promote good conduct and to suppress crime.

Their was a large party of Duck Hunters at Hamilton Lake last week from Montpelier, Ohio and they used up all the ammunition in that part of the country and sent to Butler for more. We wonder if they all paid their $25.00 Non-Resident Hunting license?

For the last four weeks we have been unable to supply the demand for extra copies and the supply has been exhausted every week. When you want several copies of the Herald of any particular issue please order them in advance. We shall try to keep a sufficient surplus on hand, however in the future.

We are led to admire the public spirit of the great financiers who are running the thousand and one oil companies in Texas. These men offer great fortunes, sure fortunes for ten cents. They have millions invested in great oil wells and more going down, and in ten days their stock will be worth three or four times its face value.

Impassioned Lover—Tell me, my angel, what to do to prove my love. Oh, that I might, like some knight of old, battle for you, suffer for you, die for you!

Sweet Girl—I wish you would give up smoking.

Impassioned Lover—Oh, come, now, that's asking too much.

Mary Burkhart, a bright young woman of Lane, Kentucky, has announced her candidacy for congress, on the Prohibition ticket. She is the daughter of a wealthy lumberman and well versed in politics. She has started out on a house-to-house canvas, and says there is no law that can prevent her being seated in congress if she gets a majority of the votes.

Bird-Shot For Tiger.

No use to hunt tigers with bird-shot. It doesn't hurt the tiger any and it's awfully risky for you.

Consumption is a tiger among diseases. It is stealthy—but once started it rapidly eats up the flesh and destroys the life. No use to go hunting it with ordinary food and medicine. That's only bird-shot. It still advances. Good heavy charges of Scott's Emulsion will stop the advance. The disease feels that.

Scott's Emulsion makes the body strong to resist. It heals and toughens the lungs and sustains the strength until the disease wears itself out.

FOR AUDITOR.

Believing that with the experience and acquaintance which I have with the taxpayers of this county, I can look after their many interests to a better advantage than I have in the past. While this step I am taking is somewhat unusual in this county, in many counties in the state Auditors have been and are now serving their second term. I will therefore present my name for the nomination of County Auditor before the democratic convention May 8th, for its careful consideration.

FRANK P. SEILER.

DEMOCRAT CALL.

The democrats of Wilmington township will meet Saturday, April 26 at the Town Hall in Butler to select State, Congressional, Judicial and County delegates.

Getting men to work these days is like pulling teeth. Some of them are too tired, others are too lazy, some do not know how, and some won't work at any price, while others are very busy. Its a mystery to us how some men live. They toil not—neither do they spin.

The Herald intends to put on style and is making several needed repairs, such as new side walks, painting the building both inside and out. Our sanctum will soon be a local paradise and we expect it to be a favorite destination with our business men, who want good work at popular prices.

The first installment of taxes, with all road taxes added, is due on or before the first Monday in May, the 5th, the remainder on or before the first Monday in November, the 3rd. If the first installment is not paid at the time indicated, the whole becomes delinquent, and ten per cent penalty and costs of collection added. Pay your taxes on time and avoid the penalty for delinquency—pay before the last day.

I wish to say through the kindness of the Herald, that for the benefit of those who have not had the opportunity and should care to learn the methods of the mandolin I will form a small class in Butler and teach in the mornings only those who are desirous to complete a course shall I presume to teach as no one can learn in one day, but through a term of thirty lessons and continual practice one should become a fairly good player. While the mandolin is not a new instrument as is generally supposed it is an old instrument, and though Beethoven and Mozart have written it, it is only during the past few years that it has become so popular and that an impetus has been given its manufacture and perfection.

The instrument has now become a permanent adjunct to our concert stage. As to my own musical education, at the age of 13 I took up the mandolin, and after winning admiration through out the City of Mexico I was finally persuaded to go to New York for the purpose of finishing the study under Prof. Valentine and by diligent practice and hard study I was found to be master of the mandolin, at the age of 18 I entered the concert stage where I have held my place as a virtuoso of which there are but three, making tours every year Trans-Continental since, my engagements date to all the prominent cities in the United States, Mexico, Australia and a few countries of South America. I wish to say also for the benefit of those who have not as yet heard my playing and care to, either before the public or in this city, I would be pleased to at any time render a few selections for their approval and confirmation of the aforesaid "Master of the Mandolin." Mr. Geddes will assist me by giving any information desired in relation to studency. Below are a few newspaper items:

C. Everette Warriner's performance on the mandolin we have yet to hear equalled. All his numbers were rendered in a style of finish and with such perfect ease that the applause was spontaneous and terrific.—The Globe, Denver, Col.

C. Everette Warriner's second appearance in this city was highly appreciated. The Rock of Ages being one of the many selections and was a true and impressive effect of a church organ. He can justly be termed the wizard of the mandolin.—Republican, Los Angeles, Cal.

Captain Gridley's Mother and Brother Restored by Peruna.

DEWEY'S FLAGSHIP OLYMPIA—CAPTAIN GRIDLEY, COMMANDER.

Mrs. Gridley, mother of Captain Gridley, who was in command of Dewey's flagship, at the destruction of the Spanish fleet at Manila, says of our remedy, Peruna:

"At the solicitation of a friend I used Peruna, and can truthfully say it is a grand tonic and is a woman's friend, and should be used in every household. After using it for a short period I feel like a new person."—MRS. GRIDLEY.

Mrs. Longstreet is the wife of the famous Confederate General, Lieutenant-General James Longstreet, the only living ex-Confederate officer of that rank. She writes as follows to The Peruna Medicine Co.:

"I can recommend your excellent remedy, Peruna, as one of the best tonics, and for those who need a good, substantial remedy, I know of nothing better. Besides being a good tonic it is an effective cure for catarrh."—Mrs. James Longstreet.

Hon. Lucius E. Gridley, brother of Captain Gridley, also speaks a good word for Peruna. In a letter written from 1511 T Street, Washington, D. C., he says:

The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, O.

Gentlemen—"Your Peruna has been thoroughly tested in my family. My mother and wife used it with the very best results, and I take pleasure in recommending it to all who want a good, substantial remedy, both as a tonic and a catarrh cure."—Lucius E. Gridley.

Miss Mary J. Kennedy, manager of the Armour & Co.'s exhibit, Trans-Mississippi Exposition, Omaha, Neb., writes the following in regard to Peruna, from 842 West Sixty-second street, Chicago, Ill.:

"I found the continual change of diet incidental to eight years' traveling completely upset my digestive system. On consulting several physicians they decided I suffered with catarrh of the stomach.

"Their prescriptions did not seem to help me any, so, reading of the remarkable cures perfected by the use of Peruna, I decided to try it, and soon found myself well repaid.

"I have now used it for about three months and feel completely rejuvenated. I believe I am perfectly cured, and do not hesitate to give unstinted praise to your remedy, Peruna."—Mary J. Kennedy.

Congressman Geo. W. Smith of Murphysboro, Ill., writes:

"I take pleasure in testifying to the merits of Peruna. I have taken one bottle for my catarrh and I feel very much benefited. To those who are afflicted with catarrh and in need of a good tonic I take pleasure in recommending Peruna."—Geo. W. Smith.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

J. Wm. Wagner, of Garrett, was in town Tuesday. He is a candidate for County Auditor and is 67 years of age. All his life he has fought for the party and has been in harness since the time of James Buchanan. He is an excellent man and will make a good race.

Sam Thompson, better known as Blind Sam, is one of the best piano tuners and repairers ever in DeKalb county. He has tuned Chas. McMarlin's piano for the past ten years and Mr. McM. takes the pleasure in commending him to all who desire a satisfactory job.

Prof. R. L. Dixon, principal of our public schools, has been offered the Chair of Latin in Berea College, at Berea, Ky. Mr. Dixon is an able young man, a thorough student, and should he accept the position, we predict for him a prominent place as an instructor.—St. Joe News.

The long looked for decision in the Waterloo electric light and water works case was given in the circuit court room Wednesday afternoon, and the finding by Special Judge William Brown, of Angola, was in favor of the defendants. The judge has taken nearly three weeks to carefully consider all the arguments that had been made, and also to investigate all citations that were introduced in the case and he came to the conclusion that the town of Waterloo, the Waterloo Water Co., and the Olds Construction Co. had kept within the bounds of the statutes of this state.

James S. Lowe will be a candidate for county treasurer. He is a clean substantial citizen and would add strength to this ticket.

The citizens of Corunna are working hard to have their burg incoporated and have raised the necessary funds to pay for the survey.—Kendallville Sun.

Hon. J. W. Jackman of Waterloo was in town Wednesday. He will be a candidate for re-election and will be nominated and elected. He is a clean cut citizen and has made a most excellent official.

Mrs. H. McCullough and Mrs. Brunstetter attended the branch meeting of the Womens Foreign Missionary Society that convened Wednesday and Thursday of last week at Ligonier.

Every time you send a dollar away for a purchase that could have been made at home, you take a dollar from the channel that keeps your own community healthy in a financial way. Every time you spend a dollar with a home merchant you have placed it where it may again reach your own pocket. Do you see the point?

The Wabash is having considerable trouble near St. Joe, as the roadbed is soft and the heavy trains keep the track in a very uneven condition. Three small wrecks occurred inside of eight hours Thursday evening one of them near the depot doing considerable damage. Laborers are scarce and it will require a large force of men nearly all summer to get the track in good shape.

BIG RESULTS

Which Have Followed in the Wake of Small Causes.

The moralist who wishes to preach from the text, "Great oaks from little acorns grow," may, if he lacks material with which to illustrate his subject, pick out a variety from those given below, which have been collected from half a dozen lands, and show well how sometimes the most trivial incident may have far-reaching results.

The story of "Treasure Island," one of the best things Robert Louis Stevenson ever did, is all owing to a toy box of paints that Mrs. Stevenson brought home for her little son. Stevenson was teaching the child how to use them and made a daub of color on a piece of paper, and as he looked at it the thought came to him that it looked like an island. He elaborated it, put in capes and mountains, marked a spot where pirates had buried their booty, and finally gave the place the name of Treasure Island. Mrs. Stevenson suggested that her husband write a story about Treasure Island and he did.

Two gunboats sent up the Nile a few years ago in pursuit of slave traders caused one of the worst famines ever known in lower Egypt. When the gunboats got into the marshy district above Khartoum the slavers, in their anxiety to get away, cut channels through the "sudd," the mass of vegetation which lines the main stream of the river. The current carried down this "sudd" until at a narrow place in the river, it collected and formed a dam that held back the water of the Nile and prevented the annual flood on which the Egyptian crops depend. As a result there were no crops in lower Egypt that year and a famine prevailed.

Half a dozen small beetles opened 30 Cornish mines and gave work and big wages to 8,000 miners. The beetles had been brought for some scientific purposes from America and were of the species known as Colorado beetles. They escaped, and their descendants destroyed a million tons of potatoes in two years. Arsenic was found to be the only thing that would destroy them, and British farmers used 1,000 tons a months. Arsenic ran up from $5 to $70 a ton, and Cornwall, where mundic, the ore of arsenic, is mined, benefited accordingly.

Took Them Down a Bit.

A party of young men and women were bicycling along a country road. It was a sketching class, and every eye was wide open for an artistic subject. Suddenly the whole party dismounted with various exclamations of delight and surprise.

Just within the fence on the left grew innumerable graceful stalks, each bearing aloft globes of pale green that shaded into gray and purple.

"How enchanting!" said a young woman.

"How decorative!" said a young man.

"Just what we are looking for," said the teacher, a full-fledged artist.

A gardener was standing near at hand.

"Do tell us," cried a girl, "what those beau-oo-ti-ful things are."

"Which?" replied the gardener.

"Why, those," said the girl.

"Them?" said the gardener, with a chuckle. "Them's onions gone to seed."

Mildred Penland vs Newton Penland, divorce. Upon evidence decree granted to the plaintiff with custody of child and $50 alimony.

Ida Vedstead vs Paul Vedstead, divorce. Decree to plaintiff by default, defendant failing to appear.

Charles W. Hoke was granted a divorce from Katie Hoke, and upon application the defendant was allowed to resume her maiden name, Katie Churchman.

The divorce case of Mary A. Beard vs Levy Beard was dismissed by the plaintiff at her costs.

ATTRACTIVE WOMEN.

All women sensibly desire to be attractive. Beauty is the stamp of health because it is the outward manifestation of inner purity. A healthy woman is always attractive, bright and happy. When every drop of blood in the veins is pure a beauteous flush is on the cheek. But when the blood is impure, moroseness, bad temper and a sallow complexion tells the tale of sickness, all too plainly. And women to-day know there is no beauty without health. Wine of Cardui crowns women with beauty and attractiveness by making strong and healthy those organs which make her a woman. Try Wine of Cardui, and in a month your friends will hardly know you.

The Courier claims the largest circulation of any newspaper in DeKalb county. The Dispatch puts in a chip on its shoulder and contradicts this flatly and will show proof by the list. We will go further and will show the names of more new subscribers with-in the past twenty-six days than all of the papers in the county togeather and further still, The Dispatch will add at least three hundred new names to its list within the next sixty days. We know whereof we talk and do not propose to let any laurels wilt.—Auburn Dispatch.

The Dispatch is probably right as far as the Courier is concerned but it must remember that the Herald is still in the county and we cheerfully accept their challenge. We have no solicitor out either. Name your weapon Mr. Dispatch and put up a $100 and we will do likewise.

The name of Rev. Richard Pengelly, M. D. brings recollections of a Christian life devoted unceasingly and uncomplainingly to good works.

REV. RICHARD PENGELLY, M. D.

He was universally loved and respected in life and deeply and sincerely mourned in death. To the pioneer women of Michigan and the great western prairies the name of Dr. Pengelly was one revered and loved. It was the need of a physician by the pioneers that brought the famous pioneer preacher to study medicine, and as he gained in his knowledge he strove to produce a home remedy that would relieve the wretchedness, the misery and the frightful drains of female weakness when the physician was far away. In doing this he brought forth from his laboratory the now far famed Zoa Phora—christened by the grateful women of the early days of western statehood—"Women's Friend." If you suffer from female weakness, leucorrhea, suppressed or painful menstruation, laceration, weak or lame back, disordered liver or stomach, sick kidneys, rheumatism, neuralgia, nervous headache or highly nervous condition of the body or mind, if your face is pale or your skin rough, your hair falling or you have any other of the many distressing maladies produced by female weakness you will find Zoa Phora the only true tonic. It revives and regulates the menses, revitalizes the nerves, tones up the stomach, brightens the eyes and restores the bouyancy of youthful health and happy disposition. In change of life, preparation for motherhood, or restoring to health after childbirth Zoa Phora has no equal. "I was troubled with nervous headache for eight years," says Mrs Frank P. Scott, Redman, Mo. "Several doctors had treated me but failed to cure. One bottle of Zoa Phora did more for me than all the doctors." Mrs. S. E. Cryile of Salida, Colo., says:—"I cheerfully recommend Zoa Phora for all female weaknesses. Three bottles completely cured me of leucorrhea and ulceration." Get a dollar bottle at the nearest drug store, or send 10 cents to cover postage to Zoa Phora Co., Kalamazoo, Mich., for a free trial bottle. It never fails to cure all diseases of women.

THE WEATHER FOR APRIL.

Harry Daniels, of the Decatur Journal, has become a rival of Prof. Hicks and Prof. Foster, and all the other professional weather-makers. For the month of April he makes the following strenuous announcement:

"April will come in with a shower in one hand a plug hat with a brick under it in the other. From the 1st to the 10th will be what is known as the windy period. During this time cyclones, hurricanes, gales, political speeches, tornadoes, and other forms of atmospheric disturbances may be expected at any hour. During this period it will be judicious for people living in Kansas, Iowa and other sections of the wind belt to chain down their hens and their cows. It would also be well for persons, upon retiring at night, to nail down the bed, which will greatly lessen the chances of it being blown through the window or the roof. During this time it would also be wise for people everywhere to kindly refrain, as much as possible, from believing everything they see in the newspapers. Stories of cisterns being pulled ont of the ground without disturbing the water, of people having their front names blown off, of homemade buckwheat cakes being picked up and carried several feet, of money intended for the poor being blown from the hands of Pierpont Morgan or Russell Sage, of dyspeptics being blown into the next county without losing their temper or any of their personal effects, are all apt to be more or less exaggerated. Women are often not as bad as they are painted, cyclones are often not as windy as they are blown up to be.

On the 11th there will be rain, sunshine and two bank failures; on the 12th there will be sunshine, rain and the British will capture another Boer and two sheep in South Africa; on the 13th there will be sunshine, wind and Kitchener will again regret to report; on the 14th there will be wind, sunshine and a strike by the carpet beaters' union, on the 15th there will be sunshine, wind and the tourist printer will walk out.

On the 16th there will be a severe thunder storm. Pierce, fast, forked flames of fire, flashing furiously, will fiercely flip forth, fearlessly flitting and flickering. Brave men with blanched set faces will crawl under the bed, and fearless, heroic women will grab the cat and fasten themselves up in the pantry.

From the 17th to the 20th there will be cold weather, accompanied by a falling temperature, and during this period we advise farmers and fruit growers to bring in their orchards at night. We especially advise North Dakota and Minnesota fruit raisers to wrap an old pair of overalls around their banana bushes and their eight and one-third cent wormless prune vines.

From the 18th to the 26 will be what we astrologists call the profanitorial storm period. There will be wind storms, snow storms, hail storms barn stormers, and Poet Kipling will cloud up and storm about a column and a half of seventpoint hexameter."

A CONSCIENTIOUS MINISTER.

Dear Sir—Having tried your White Wine of Tar Syrup, I believe it to be an ecellent medicine and can conscientiously recommend it to others.

Respectfully yours, Rev. Wm. Stevenson, Kingsville, Mo.

SOME FREAKS.

We are proud to know that the usual wonders of this wonderful country are still coming up serenely. Down in Kansas is a baby six weeks old that continually says "famine." A tree half walnut and half oak is reported. All right. One man says he fed an old hen on sawdust, which she thought was bran. She laid twelve eggs and sat on them red hot In three weeks she hatched out eleven chickens each with a wooden leg. She sat three weeks longer on the other egg and then tore the shell off to see what was the matter. It was a solid round ball of wood. A man in Mankato reports that his dog gave birth to six wildcats and treed the whole litter. Up in Fulda the village editor swears he saw a rabbit with a dozen horns.

Familiarity Breeds Extortion.

Beware of how you call your physician "doc." A well-known specialist said: "A patient of mine was in here a few days ago. I had done something for him for which I could charge any amount in reason. I had intended to make it reasonable. I sat at the desk with a pencil in my hand. He began to speak to me familiarly, addressing me as 'doc.' Every time he 'doc'ed me I made a mark on a piece of paper and charged him $1 extra for each time. He doesn't know the cost of his familiarity, but I do."

Parents' Responsibility Great

It is the right of every child to be well born, and to the parents it must look for health and happiness. How inconceivably great is the parents' responsibility, and how important that no taint of disease is left in the blood to be transmitted to the helpless child, entailing the most pitiable suffering, and marking its little body with offensive sores and eruptions, catarrh of the nose and throat, weak eyes, glandular swellings, brittle bones, white swelling and deformity.

How can parents look upon such little sufferers and not reproach themselves for bringing so much misery into the world? If you have any disease lurking in your system, how can you expect well developed, healthy children? Cleanse your own blood and build up your health, and you have not only enlarged your capacity for the enjoyment of the pleasures of life, but have discharged a duty all parents owe to posterity, and made mankind healthier and happier.

There is no remedy that so surely reaches deep-seated, stubborn blood troubles as S. S. S. It searches out even hereditary poisons, and removes every taint from the blood, and builds up the general health. If weaklings are growing up around you, right the wrong by putting them on a course of S. S. S. at once. It is a purely vegetable medicine, harmless in its effects, and can be taken by both old and young without fear of any bad results.

A VALUABLE MEDICINE

For Coughs and Colds in Children.

"I have not the slightest hesitancy in recommending Chamberlain's Cough Remedy to all who are suffering from coughs or colds," says Chas. M. Cramer, Esq. a well known watch maker of Colombo, Ceylon. "It has been some two years since the City Dispensary first called my attention to this valuable medicine and I have repeatedly used it and it has always been beneficial. It has cured me quickly of all chest colds. It is especially effective for children and seldom takes more than one bottle to cure them of hoarseness. I have persuaded many to try this valuable medicine, and they are all as well pleased as myself over the results." For sale by S. G. Stone, druggist.

BLACK-DRAUGHT
THE ORIGINAL
LIVER MEDICINE

A sallow complexion, dizziness, biliousness and a coated tongue are common indications of liver and kidney diseases. Stomach and bowel troubles, severe as they are, give immediate warning by pain, but liver and kidney troubles, though less painful at the start, are much harder to cure. Thedford's Black-Draught never fails to benefit diseased liver and weakened kidneys. It stirs up the torpid liver to throw off the germs of fever and ague. It is a certain preventive of cholera and Bright's disease of the kidneys. With kidneys reinforced by Thedford's Black-Draught thousands of persons have dwelt immune in the midst of yellow fever. Many families live in perfect health and have no other doctor than Thedford's Black-Draught. It is always on hand for use in an emergency and saves many expensive calls of a doctor.

Mullins, S. C., March 10, 1901.
I have used Thedford's Black-Draught for three years and I have not had to go to a doctor since I have been taking it. It is the best medicine for me that is on the market for liver and kidney troubles and dyspepsia and other complaints. Rev. A. G. LEWIS.

A DOCTOR'S BAD PLIGHT.

"Two years ago, as a result of a severe cold, I lost my voice," writes Dr. M. L. Scarbrough, of Hebron, Ohio, "then began an obstinate cough. Every remedy known to me as a practicing physician for 35 years failed, and I daily grew worse. Being urged to try Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds' I found quick relief, and for last ten days have felt better than for two years." Positively guaranteed for Throat and Lung troubles by S. G. Stone. 50c and $1.00. Trial bottles free.

NEW BAGGAGE RULES.

Travelers and tourists in the coming season should inform themselves of certain new rules pertaining to the carriage of baggage on the Lake Shore railroad. In the regular allowance of 150 pounds for each passenger the following articles are now included: Steamer chairs, invalid chairs, guns in cases, saddles in bags and ordinary baggage in bundles when securely wrapped in canvas or some strong material to be securely roped. Camping equipments, base ball, golf and such like paraphernalia may be checked too. Articles not to be checked are burial devices, bird cages, band boxes, boxes or barrels of fruit. Dogs may be checked if they are placed in crates if the weight of the dog and crate are paid for. They may also be taken with collar and chain at the owners sole risk, the company requiring the owner to sign a certificate in which they are released from any claims for loss or injury to said dogs. Where there is baggage that must be transferred over several roads the owner should be at the depot at least 30 minutes before train time and if they do not give agents reasonable time baggage may not be sent until the next train. There are twenty-six different roads specified including Michigan, Indiana and Ohio railroads.

BRAIN FOOD NONSENSE

Another ridiculous food fad has been branded by the most competent authorities. They have dispelled the silly notion that one kind of food is needed for brain another for muscles, and still another for bones. A correct diet will not only nourish a peculiar part of the body, but it will sustain every other part. Yet however good your food may be, its nutriment is destroyed by indigestion or dyspepsia. You must prepair for their appearance or prevent their coming by taking regular doses of Green's August Flower, the favorite medicine of the healthy millions. A few doses aids digestion, stimulates the liver to healthy action purifies the blood, and makes you feel buoyant and vigorous. You can get Dr. G. G. Green's reliable remedies at Geddes & Hardings. Get Green's Special Almanac.

Elmer and Omer Vantyle, of Lebanon, Indiana have secured a patent on a rat trap, operated by clock work that is a hummer. When a rat steps on a platform on which the bait is placed its weight pulls a trigger and the clock starts. Three daggers shoot out over the platform with lightening speed, impaling the rat. Immediately a club, operated by the machinery, swipes the dead rat off the platform and the trap is ready for the next rat that ventures to nibble at the bait.

CHRONIC BRONCHITIS CURED.

"For ten years I had chronic bronchitis so bad that at times I could not speak above a whisper" writes Mr. Joseph Coffman of Montmorenci, Ind. "I tried all remedies available, but with no success. Fortunately my employer suggested that I try Foley's Honey and Tar. Its effect was almost miraculous, and I am now cured of the disease. On my recommendation many people have used Foley's Honey and Tar, and always with satisfaction. Sold by Geddes & Harding.

DREADFUL ATTACK OF WHOOPING COUGH.

Mrs. Ellen Harlison, of 300 Park Ave., Kansas City, Mo., writes as follows: "Our two children had a severe attack of whooping cough, one of them in the paroxysm of coughing would often faint and bleed at the nose. We tried everything we heard of without getting relief. We then called in our family doctor who prescribed Foley's Honey and Tar. With the very first dose they began to improve and we feel that it has saved their lives." Refuse substitutes. Sold by Geddes & Harding.

NOW LOOK OUT!

"Take care of yourself," say our friends. "I'll try to," we answer. We do take a little care, yet in spite of warm clothes, rubbers and mackintoshes, an army of people were bowled out by pneumonia and other lung and chest diseases last winter. They caught cold, neglected it, let it fix upon them, were torn by coughs, choked by inflammations and congestions, wasted by fever, tired out by pain and then gave up the fight. The hour you realize that you have a cold on the chest, place a Benson's Porous Plaster where the pain or oppression is felt. If you think two are needed make it two. No harm if you were covered with them. They act quickly and prevent the engorgment of blood in the organs. In this way—with ordinary caution as to exposure—you will break up the cold and avoid a serious sickness. No other applications, or any other form of treatment, will accomplish this as certainly and speedily. Benson's Plasters have a distinct and positive action and are curative to the highest degree. Use them with the same confidence for coughs, muscular rheumatism, the grip (back and chest) and all similar ailments. Women, who are chief sufferers from cold weather complaints, should keep these plasters always within reach. Get the genuine. All druggists, or we will prepay postage on any number ordered in the United States on receipt of 25c. each.

L1134

The DeKalb County Herald
Until July 4th for 25c.

The Democratic Call.

The Democrats of DeKalb county, Indiana, and all those intending to affiiliate with them in the ensuing campaign and election, will meet in their respective townships, at the usual places of holding caucuses, on Saturday, the 26th day of April, 1902, at two o'clock in the afternoon, to select delegates to the State convention, to meet in Indianapolis on the 4th day of June, 1902; to the Congressional convention to meet in Kendallville on the 30th day of April, 1902; to the County convention to meet in Auburn on the 8th day of May, 1902, and to the Judicial District convention, the time and place for such last named convention to be hereafter determined.

The basis of representation in each of such conventions, except the County convention, is one delegate for each 200 votes and major fraction thereof, cast for Allen Zollars for Presidential Elector at the election of 1900, and in the County convention, one delegate for each 10 votes and major fraction thereof.

Under this apportionment the various precincts of DeKalb county will be entitled to the number of delegates in said several conventions, as follows:

Representation will be published next week.

Precinct committeemen may change the hour of holding the caucuses in their respective precincts to suit the convenience of the voters thereof, by giving due notice of such change.

Secretaries of the various caucuses will promptly report the proceedings of their respective caucuses to George M. Ralston, Secretary, at Auburn, giving names of the delegates elected to the several conventions.

The Democratic County Convention will meet in convention in Auburn on Thursday, the 8th day of May, 1902, at 10:30 a. m., for the purpose of nominating a candidate for each of the several offices to be filled at the ensuing election, by the voters of DeKalb county, Indiana, and for such other business as may properly come before such convention.

FRANCIS M. HINES, Chairman.
GEORGE M. RALSTON, Secretary.

As the weather warms up and the balmy evenings come the front-gate girl will take the place of the winter girl and the moonlight strolls and exchange of sweet nothingness over the aforesaid front gate will be unto loving hearts and true what April showers are to new onion beds. The young man will dive down into the farthermost depth of his trousers pocket and jingle his small change as he passes the ice cream parlor on the opposite side of the street.

The big strike of the employes of the Singer Sewing Machine Company, at South Bend, Ind., has brought to light some interesting figures in regard to the wages paid by this wealthy concern. Skilled machinists have filed statements of their earnings, which show them to have received from $1.25 to $1.35 per day. One of the strikers, who neither chews, smokes, drinks, gambles, nor squanders his money in any other way, had just 35 cents left from a month's earnings after paying his household expenses. These figures indicate an appalling state of prosperity (?) among the Singer Company's employes. It is no wonder they are on strike for the betterment of their condition and higher wages.

The policy of muzzling the free speech of all persons in the government service seems to be pushing along merrily. Now the president is reported to have directed Secretary Shaw to call Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Taylor to time for having given alleged "interviews" on a public question. Making it a misdemeanor for any official to let the people know how they are governed is quite in line with imperialistic notions.

Recently the writer heard an old farmer complain bitterly about the hitching places for horses in Butler. He said the idea of making a ditch and partly filling it with rough stones for the horses to stand on and pound their feet to pieces is ridiculous. Many of the farmers know there is more truth than poetry in the complaint. Perhaps if the proper authorities would take the matter in hand some better hitching places could be made. Come let us reason togeather about the subject.

In Girlhood

There is a great need of motherly watchfulness and care. A growing girl needs all her strength, and if she is nervous and melancholy, and loses appetite there is surely something wrong. This is especially true as the young girl approaches that important period of change when the womanly function is established. Timely care and proper treatment at this period may save much after suffering.

The best medicine for young girls who are nervous, melancholy, and irregular of appetite, is Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It cures nervousness, dizziness, and melancholy, promotes the appetite, and gives the body robust health. There is no alcohol in "Favorite Prescription" and it is entirely free from opium, cocaine, and all other narcotics.

"My daughter was troubled with dizziness and constipation and was very nervous for five years," writes Mrs. M. Carter, of 1545 4th Street, N. W., Washington, D. C. "I tried several doctors but they gave her no relief. At times she would eat nothing, had green and purple circles under her eyes, and was melancholy. A woman friend of mine told me to try your 'Favorite Prescription' and 'Pleasant Pellets' which I did. After taking one bottle of each she began to improve and is still improving. People said she looked as though she were going into a decline. She is twelve years old. There are no circles around her eyes now and she is healthy and robust, eats as much as any child, and is growing fatter every day."

Dr. Pierce's Pellets regulate the bowels.

THE INDIANA CLUB.

The Herald editor acknowledges receipt of an invitation from the Indiana Club of Chicago, to attend a Reception and Musical, given in honor of the Indiana Authors, at the Auditorium, Saturday evening, April 26th.

State pride demands that every effort be expended to demonstrate the fact that the citizens of Indiana appreciate the efforts of Indiana Authors to advance its reputation in literature. Five of our distinguished Authors have had their books dramatized and produced at the theatres of Chicago.

The Herald editor is a charter member of the Indiana Club. The program Saturday evening is an interesting one. The address of welcome is by Wm. Penn Nixon of the Intor Ocean, while Geo. McCutcheon the Cartoonist, Newton W. Gilbert, of Angola' Prof. John M. Coulter, Opie Read and other members of the club will be on the program. Responses will be made by prominent Indiana Authors. Among the reception committee will be found Gen. John C. Black, of Illinois, S. E. Morss, of the Indianapolis Sentinal, Robt. S. Taylor, Fort Wayne, Harry New, Indianapolis Journal, Mrs. Frank O. Lowden, Mrs. H. L. Kramer, Mrs. Robt. Shaw and others.

CONDEMNED IN MISSOURI AND CONFISCATED IN NEW YORK.

Judge Clarke of St. Louis has convicted and fined heavily a number of grocers for selling baking powders containing alum.

The week before the Health Department of New York seized a quanity of stuff being sold for baking powder which they found was made from alum mixed with ground rock, and dumped it into the river.

The Health Authorities are thus taking effective means to prevent the introduction into our markets of injurious substitutes in place of wholesome baking powders.

As alum costs only two cents a pound there is a great temptation for those manufacturers who make substitutes and imitation goods, to use it. Alum baking powders can be detected by the health authorities by chemical analysis, but the ordinary housekeeper, whose assistance in protecting the health of the people is important, cannot make a chemical examination. She may easily know the alum powders however from the fact that they are sold at from ten to twenty cents for a pound can, or that some prize—like a spoon, or glass, or piece of crockery, or wooden ware—is given with the powder as an inducement.

As the people continue to realize the importance of this subject and consumers insist on having baking powder of established name and character, and as the health authorities continue their vigorous crusades, the alum danger will it is hoped finally be driven from our homes.

A MUSICAL TREAT.

Misses Gilbert and Brookmeyer Score a Decided Success.

A musical treat was enjoyed last evening by those who attended the concert at the M. E. church, given by the Misses Gilbert and Brookmayer, under the auspices of the Wesleyan Guild. Both young ladies are exceptionally talented and versatile in their accomplishments and it would be difficult to say which pleased their audience most. The recital was indeed a source of exquisite pleasure to lovers of high class music and elocution.

Miss Gilbert is a reader of the remarkable dramatic power and versatility, equally at home in comedy or pathos. Perhaps her greatest charm is in her perfect naturalness and simplicity and grace of manner. A suberb violinist, her selections delighted all with their masterly rendition.

Miss Brookmeyer, pianist and violinist, is an artist of rare ability and plays both violin and piano with the touch of a master. Almost an ideal accompanist, her support of Miss Gilbert's selections was well-nigh perfect. Tonight the ladies will give another recital in the M. E. church with an entirely new program.—Valparaiso Messinger

Mrs. Carrie Fanning, Grand Treasurer of the order of the Eestern Star of the State of Indiana left for the Grand Chapter at Indianapolis, Monday morning. Dr. Fanning Past Grand Patron left for the same meeting Wednesday morning. Dr. and Mrs. Fanning have not only been members of the Grand Chapter for many years but both have filled the highest offices within that body thus favoring Forest Chapter of Butler with two Grand Officers.

SURPRISE PARTY.

Thursday April 17th the following named persons surprised Mrs. Imhoof and daughter at their home 2 1-2 miles northeast of Butler: Mesdames Jemima McCurdy, Savilla Showalter, Wm. Knisely, Wm. Tintsman, Frank Reynolds Sr. and Jr., J. B. Bennett, Isaac Gunsenhouser, Boon Madden, Anna Garber, Etta Wilson, Ella Coil (she says she always counts two), Sadie Nichols and children, Ed Showalter, Helen Thiel and Miss Mary McDonald.

The table was soon groaning under the load of good things from the well filled baskets. Each did ample justice to the dinner. After dinner the time was spent visiting until late in the afternoon. Each seemed loath to leave and wished they could spend many such pleasant days in the country. One who was there.

NO NEED OF WORRYING.

There is no need of worrying, fretting and losing sleep because someone has found fault with what you do. 'Tis the common lot of a man in business. The merchant does not please all his customers; The postmaster is kicked and cussed for alleged mistakes; The railroad agent frequently backed up in a corner and given to understand this and that and the other things; the butcher is forever reminded of his tough steak, and even the ministers find it hard to please all the congregation with his best sermons. The newspaper man gets more than his share of it and is expected to get out a cheerful, newsy paper just the same. A man befriends another for years and is then turned down and abused. Such things are not pleasant, but they always will be so, and the man who goes through them the easiest is the one who pays the least attention to them and goes right along trying to be pleasant and useful.—Ex.

A CONTEMPTIBLE RASCAL.

There is at least one low-down contemptible rascal in this community. He appeared at the stamp window in the Postoffice a few days ago and announced to Miss Ellis, stamp clerk that he wanted fifty cents worth of two-cent stamps. She placed them on the counter and he proceeded at once to tear one off and stick it to a letter. Just then a women came up and he politely stepped aside to make way for her. Miss Ellis waited on the latter, expecting that the young man would pay for the stamps he had taken. Instead of doing so, he slipped around the end of the screen and when she looked for him he was hastily passing out of the front door: and before she could report the depredation the miscreant was lost to view. He may have thought he was beating Uncle Sam but instead he was practically stealing fifty cents from a poor hard working girl. Stamps placed in custody of the stamp clerk of the day's business, she must have the stamps or their equivalent in cash. That is simply the Government's way of doing business. The fellow who beat Miss Ellis out of fifty cents is built right for bigger crimes and no doubt he'll commit them when the opportunity is presented.—Angola Magnet.

THE CITADEL OF THE SUGAR TRUST.

It is now up to the United States senate to demonstrate whether the people or a private commercial trust is supreme in national legislation!

The remarkable revolt in the house of representatives on Friday by which thirty-seven insurgent republicans aided the solid democratic vote to over-throw the speakership oligarchy and pass the Cuban reciprocity bill, with an amendment abolishing the differential rate on refined sugar that has been the nursing treat of the great sugar trust, will be applauded by the plain people from one end of America to the other. It was a complete defeat for the hidebound protection party and a deep, wide stab at the very heart of the heartofore invincible sugar trust.

But the end is not yet. The bill must go to the senate and be dealt with there by a body of men who have in time past been looked upon as the always reliable saviors of the interests of the sugar trust. It has been always in the senate that enough friends of that octopus have been found to keep it alive and attached by all its sucker arms to the sugar bowls and coffee cups of the American public.

Now the issue is so squarely made beteen the interest of the sugar trust and the sugar consumers of the nation that there is no room for the most oily politician to dodge beteen them. The so-called "sugar senators" must come to the scratch and face the issue like men or minions!

The people will watch the action of the senate with intense and purposeful interest. The question is whether the millions of the people shall have cheaper sugar or the sugar trust—a creature of paper stocks and monopolistic control of the sugar refining business of the country—shall continue to fatten on unjust and enormous profits taken from the sugar supplies of every household of the nation?

If the senate juggles with the bill delays it reasonably smothers it utterly or kills it incontinently, the people will never be convinced to other belief than that the measure was done to death by a majority of senators who owed a stronger obligation to the sugar trust than to their popular constituencies. No plausible and sufficient excuse will be accepted from any man who now votes against the bill and so saves the life of the sugar barony!

The democrats in the senate should not let any consideration prevent them from presenting a solid front in favor of the bill. It is the life and death struggle of the sugar trust that is presented by the measure. The people have won in the house. They must not be betrayed and defeated in the senate. If the measure is to die in committee or be emasculated in conference, let on democrat have a hand in the disgraceful deed. For the failure of this bill will arm the national democracy with a battery before which in the battle of ballots this fall, the republican party will go down like an army of paper soldiers.

A GREAT PRODUCTION.

E. J. Carpenter's grand scenic production of "QUO VADIS" than no greater success has ever been accorded a dramatic representation, will be the attraction at Henry's Opera House Auburn, Thursday May 8th.

The stage will be cleared of all scenery belongings to the house, to make room for special sets, draperies, perfect copies of furniture, utensils, ect; in use at that period of the Roman Empire. The customes are historically correct and the Company a well balanced one. James A. Young, and C. H. Farnham, two handsome and talented young actors, assume the characters of "Marcus Vinicius" and "Petronius." Both have had useful experience with various legitimate stars and any two more worthy exponents of these difficult characters could not be found.

The Scenery is by Thomas Neville, and every set is a gem of the painters art. The customes are designed by Descalschi, the famous London costumes are rich and elegant. The furniture and draperies are perfect copies of those preserved in the British Museum. Mr. Carpenter's Company is a large and expensive one and gives a fine representation of Sienkiewicz masterpiece. This will positively be the first time of this production at Henrys Opera House Auburn Thursday May 8th. and large houses should be the rule.

A CONSCIENTIOUS MINISTER.

Dear Sir—Having tried your White Wine of Tar Syrup, I believe it to be an ecellent medicine and can conscientiously recommend it to others. Respectfully yours, Rev. Wm. Stevenson, Kingsville, Mo.

CAUTION!

This is not a gentle word—but when you think how liable you are not to purchas for 75c the only remedy universally known and a remedy that has had the largest sale of any medicine in the world since 1868 for the cure and tacatment of Consumption and Throat and Lung Troubles without losing its great popularity all these years, you will be thankful we called your attention to Boschee's German Syrup. There are so many ordinary cough remedies made by druggists and others that are cheap and good for light colds perhaps, but for severe Coughs, Bronchitis, Croup—and especially for Consumption, where there is difficult expectoration and coughing during the nights and mornings, there is nothing like German Syrup. Sold by all druggist in the civilized world.

A PECULIAR CASE.

Farmer Shaw, of Orange county, owned a sheep killing dog, but was ignorant of the nature of the brute. One morning his household pet was caught in the act of killing a sheep, while seven carcasses were scattered around, and he shot the dog and presented a bill to the county commissioners for the eight sheep killed. The commissioners heard his story and laughed long and loud over the proposition to pay a man for sheep owned by himself and killed by his own dog. Then the farmer began exploiting his knowledge of the law, and the commissioners concluded to call in a county attorney. The county attorney advised the commissioners to settle, and the farmer therefore drew pay for sheep killed by his own dog. It was on application of the new law to which the commissioners were not accustomed, and the board is still unreconciled.—Kendallville Sun.

THE SUGAR BEET QUESTION.

Five years ago, there was but one factory in Michigan. Last year there were thirteen in operation and three more are building this year. This shows that it pays.

If it did not pay, the farmers would not keep at it and keep increasing their area of the crop.

Last year, 75,000 acres were planted in Michigan, two millions were paid out to 17,000 farmers who grew the crops.

There are thousands of acres of splendid land for this crop in DeKalb county, and they hope to secure a good deal of it for beet crops. They furnish seed, and a drill and cultivator, at small cost per acre, and pay $4 a ton for the product loaded on cars. If our farmers find it pays, we believe enough land will be planted in this section to establish a beet sugar factory at Auburn. They seek locations with good railroad facilities. The prospects are that a far greater area will be planted this year than last. We hope our farmers will study up this matter and see their way to raise crops that will be more certain and pay better than wheat.

"A neighbor ran in with a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy when my son was suffering with severe cramps and was given up as beyond hope by my regular physician, who stands high in his profession. After administering three doses of it, my son regained consciousness and recovered entirely within twenty-four hours," says Mrs. Mary Haller, of Mt. Crawford, Va. This Remedy is for sale by S. G. Stone, druggist.

OLD PEOPLE

Do not always receive the sympathy and attention which they deserve. Their ailments are regarded as purely imaginary, or natural and unavoidable at their time of life. Disease and infirmity should not always be associated with old age. The eye of the gray haired grandsire may be as bright and the complexion as fair as any of his younger and more vigorous companions.

Good Blood is the secret of healthy old age, for it regulates and controls every part of the body, strengthens the nerves, makes the muscles elastic and supple, the bones strong and the flesh firm; but when this life fluid is polluted or poisoned and loses its nutritive, health sustaining elements, then there is a rapid decline of the vital powers, resulting in premature old age and disease. Any derangement of the blood quickly shows itself in an ulcer, sore, wart, tumor or some other troublesome growth upon the body, and rheumatic and neuralgic pains become almost constant, accompanied with poor digestion and cold extremities.

SSS

S. S. S. being purely vegetable, is the safest and best blood purifier for old people. It does not shock or hurt the system like the strong mineral remedies, but gently and thoroughly cleanses the blood and stimulates the debilitated organs, when all bodily ailments disappear. S. S. S. is just such a tonic as old people need to improve a weak digestion and tone up the Stomach. If there is any hereditary taint, or the remains of some disease contracted in early life, S. S. S. will search it out and remove every vestige of it from the system.

Write us fully about your case and let our physicians advise and help you. This will cost you nothing, and we will mail free our book on blood and skin diseases. THE SWIFT SPECIFIC COMPANY, Atlanta, Ga.

A VALUABLE MEDICINE

For Coughs and Colds in Children. "I have not the slightest hesitancy in recommending Chamberlain's Cough Remedy to all who are suffering from coughs or colds," says Chas. M. Cramer, Esq. a well known watch maker of Colombo, Ceylon. "It has been some two years since the City Dispensary first called my attention to this valuable medicine and I have repeatedly used it and it has always been beneficial. It has cured me quickly of all chest colds. It is especially effective for children and seldom takes more than one bottle to cure them of hoarseness. I have persuaded many to try this valuable medicine, and they are all as well pleased as myself over the results." For sale by S. G. Stone, druggist.

MRS. L. S. ADAMS,
Of Galveston, Texas.

"Wine of Cardui is indeed a blessing to tired women. Having suffered for seven years with weakness and bearing-down pains, and having tried several doctors and different remedies with no success, your Wine of Cardui was the only thing which helped me, and eventually cured me. It seemed to build up the weak parts, strengthen the system and correct irregularities."

By "tired women" Mrs. Adams means nervous women who have disordered menses, falling of the womb, ovarian troubles or any of these ailments that women have. You can cure yourself at home with this great women's remedy, Wine of Cardui. Wine of Cardui has cured thousands of cases which doctors have failed to benefit. Why not begin to get well today? All druggists have $1.00 bottles. For any stomach, liver or bowel disorder Thedford's Black-Draught should be used.

NOW LOOK OUT!

"Take care of yourself," say our friends. "I'll try to," we answer. We do take a little care, yet in spite of warm clothes, rubbers and mackintoshes, an army of people were bowled out by pneumonia and other lung and chest diseases last winter. They caught cold, neglected it, let it fix upon them, were torn by coughs, choked by inflammations and congestions, wasted by fever, tired out by pain and then gave up the fight. The hour you realize that you have a cold on the chest, place a Benson's Porous Plaster where the pain or oppression is felt. If you think two are needed make it two. No harm if you were covered with them. They act quickly and prevent the congorgment of blood in the organs. In this way—with ordinary caution as to exposure—you will break up the cold and avoid a serious sickness. No other applications, or any other form of treatment, will accomplish this as certainly and speedily. Benson's Plasters have a distinct and positive action and are curative to the highest degree. Use them with the same confidence for coughs, muscular rheumatism, the grip (back and chest) and all similar ailments. Women, who are chief sufferers from cold weather complaints, should keep these plasters always within reach. Get the genuine. FOR AUDITOR.

Believing that with the experience and acquaintance which I have with the taxpayers of this county, I can look after their many interests to a better advantage than I have in the past. While this step I am taking is somewhat unusual in this county, in many counties in the state Auditors have been and are now serving their second term. I will therefore present my name for the nomination of County Auditor before the democratic convention May 8th, for its careful consideration.

FRANK P. SEILER.

DEMOCRAT CALL.

The democrats of Wilmington township will meet Saturday, April 26 at the Town Hall in Butler to select State, Congressional, Judicial and County delegates.

Carnegie advises young men not to strive to obtain more than a competence. He will have to plead very hard with the majority of them to get their consent.

We are dismayed by the action of a jury who recently decided that a a hug was only worth one cent. Besides the fact that it is a lie, it is an awful cheapening of a valuable asset. Just think of it. One hundred for a dollar. A man could go out this beautiful bright spring weather and hug his collar bones loose for fifty cents. Everybody knows a hug is worth more than a cent. Most of us would willingly pay as high as a dime. But here comes a jury and awards a woman who has been hugged one cent. If this is fixed by law as the ruling price, there won't be any other work done this year.

SOUTH SIDE.

Cal Beard has bought the Beerer property formerly occupied by Mr. Gehring, and will soon move into it.

Clyde Oberlin and wife were the guests of Wash Farley and wife, of Hamilton, last Sunday.

Wm. Pifer is remodeling his home and building a fine new veranda.

Chas. Husselman is putting a couple of large windows in his cottage this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Robinson are the proud parents of a new boy since Wednesday.

Curt McBride, of Auburn, is in Butler this week papering his father's house.

Mr. Sawyer, from the country, has bought the Dave Enser property and is now occupying the same.

Mr. Warford has moved into his new home which he recently purchased of Dan Diehl.

Wes Mutzfeld has resigned his position as message carrier, and is working for his father.

S. L. Hamlin and wife are spending a few days on their farm near St. Joe.

Mr. and Mrs. Fisher, of Kendallville' are visiting the lafter's sisters, Mrs. Alfred Beckley and Miss Hensler.

Lon Tinstman has furnished up quite a neat candy kitchen in the Tinstman building.

Miss Bessie Davis is out of school this week on account of sore throat.

THE THRUST OF A LANCE

is scarcely more agonizing than the recurrent pains in the abdomen which follow the eating of improper food or too free indulgence in ice-water. The immediate cause of croups and colic is often the distention of the bowels by gas. Quick relief follows the use of Perry Davis' Painkiller. Careful housekeepers give it the place of honor in the family medicine chest.

SOMETHING FOR NOTHING.

There are many men in the world who believe they can get something for nothing. A few of them may succeed, but most of them do not. It depends a good deal on the size and shape of their ambition.

The man who gets his current news and literature from the pages of a patent medicine almanac and still feel that life is sweet and full of joy and worth squeezing onto has, perhaps, solved the problem of getting something for nothing. But the man who yearns to sit on the knee of affluence and wealth and who strives to get there by the something for nothing route will find himself sooner or later the guest of the county or of the commonwealth. A man may be able to wear off some other man's overcoat or hat, or he may even wear some other man's name at the bottom of his bank checks for a while and be able to pass it off as a joke or a slip of the pen, but people will lose faith in him in time, and some day while he is out in the back yard, scolding the hired man, a large gentleman with a dark, heavy-set moustache and a voice like the snort of perdition will call and take him gently but firmly by the arm and lead him away to the remorse college.

There is a large and legible price-mark on everything in this world and if a man gets anything for nothing, it is because he got it when nobody was looking or because it had a hook concealed within it and a stout line attached to it somewhere. There is nothing in the wide world worth having that isn't worth paying for, and whether a man is working his way into heaven or the state legislature, he must expect to pay for whatever he gets.

NEW RAILROAD.

An Elkhart man, who is apparently overly enthusiastic says the Toledo-Montpelier-Butler -LaGrango-Elkhart Plymouth-Chicago steam line will be built and cars running over part of the line by Oct. 1, 1902. Indianapolis and Pennsylvania capitalists are said to be ready with $500,000 to finance the road. This is a pet scheme of H. Leone Miller, who is one of the dreamers the country is now afflicted with in the way of railroad promotors This road is getting to be a mouldy chestnut and it seems as though more notoriety is craved than anything else. Those who H. Leone Miller are well aware of the fact that his "enterprise" will never reach consummation.—Goshen Democrat.

YEAR FOR LOCUSTS.

Will Come Out of the Ground in May or June.

State Geologist Blatchley has found a 17-year-old locust. This is the year for the 17-year locusts to return, Mr. Blatchley says. They will come out of the ground, he predicts, the latter part of May or the first week in June. The locusts in the pupa stage is a bug. The first stage is the larva, then comes the tpupa, then the mature locust with wings. When the pupa locust crawls out of the ground he attaches himself to a fence or brush or a twig. The sun soon cracks the outer skin in the middle of the back and the locust with wings backs out and leaves the old shell. On each side of the specimen found by Blatchley appears a pad which is the impression made through the outer skin of the wings of the next summer locust. The speciman was about an inch and a half long when first found, but on drying shrank almost one-half. It has enlarged feet for burrowing, and is of a light brown color.

"I would advise people not to plant trees this year on account of the 17-year locust," he says. "For the benefit of those who will plant trees this spring, anyhow, they should be careful not to select too large ones. The only way to protect trees from them is to cover the entire tree with a cheese-cloth, on framework.

BIG HATS FOR MEN.

"Yes, the 'big hat' for men has come back into style, like the cat and the vogue of the 'little derby' has passed," said the manager of one of Washington's big department stores.

"Seems odd, doesn't it, after all of these years of small crowns and narrow, rolled brims, to say adieu to the 'little hat,' and bid welcome to the 'big hat'? Such are the vagaries of fashion. The little hat has abided with us for a long time however, and peace be to its ashes.

The big hat starts its renewed life with the spring and the hot weather instern of the winter. It will be found, however, to be acceptable, but the change is radical. Some of the brims are twice the width of the present style, and the crowns almost edual in increase in height and diameter. Thus far only a few have appeared on the streets, but they will soon blossom out like the flowers in the spring.—Exchange.

SUFFERED THREE YEARS. CATARRH OF STOMACH.

Miss Evelyn Morse writes from 651 Adams Street, Minneapolis, Minn., as follows:

"I suffered for nearly three years with catarrh of the stomach which no medicine seemed to relieve, until a friend advised me to try Peruna. Although skeptical, I tried it, and found it helped me within the first week. I kept taking it for three months, and am pleased to say that it cured me entirely, and I have had no symptoms of its return. I am only too glad to recommend it."—EVELYN MORSE.

Adia Brittain, of Sekitan, O., writes: "After using your wonderful Peruna three months, I have had great relief. I had continual heaviness in my stomach, was bilious, and had fainting spells, but they all have left me since using Peruna. I can now get around and do my housework, and think Peruna the greatest medicine I ever used."—Adia Brittain.

Mrs. Lizzie Blevins, 102 Boliver street, Cleveland, Ohio, writes: "I candidly feel Peruna was the means of saving my life, for I suffered for months from catarrh of the stomach. Two bottles of Peruna cured me."—Mrs. Lizzie Blevins.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

At the anniversary of the battle of the Battle of Lexington in Washington, D. C., last Monday, Congressman Robinson was on the program. He referred to the fight at Lexington as the signal of liberty announcing the freedom from oppression of a people whose inherant ability made them more than the equals of the powers who sought to govern them. He spoke of the pitiless war England is waging in South Africa, and urged the immediate ejectment of the British officers and men who have established a horse corral near New Orleans.

When the Standard Oil Company was leasing all the land is the country one of their agents called on an old farmer, not a thousand miles from here, who bitterly refused to lease his land at any price. When asked his reason for not leasing he replied: "When God made this earth he put that oil there for a purpose. They tell me this earth turns on an axle, and it may be that the oil was put there to grease it. Suppose they pump all of the oil out and and the axle tree gets dry and rusts, and the earth stops turning in the middle of the night, wouldn't we be in a nice pickle?"—Albion Democrat.

The musical entertainment at the M. E. church Friday and Saturday evening under the auspices of the Ladies Aid Society comes highly recommended and is deserving of a liberal support.

The large farm residence owned by the estate of Elden Allman, of Metz, burned last Tuesday noon, caught from a spark from a chimney. Loss about $3000. Insured in J. A. Campbell's agency in Home of New York. The town of Metz had a narrow escape as the wind was blowing at a forty mile gale and almost in line with the fire. A large part of the household goods were saved.

It has come to the condition in Butler that when a family moves out of a house another family is waiting with a loaded dray before the front door to move in, remarked a Butler woman. "Last week a family moved out of a house next us and they stored part of their furniture on our veranda while waiting for the dray. The dray containing the effects of the family that was to move in came along about that time and deposited their effects temporarily on the other end of that veranda. I was on the point of moving our effects out of the back door to give them posession of the place when the last piece of carpet came out of the house and the veranda began to be vacated."

DO YOU GET UP WITH A LAME BACK?

Kidney Trouble Makes You Miserable.

Almost everybody who reads the newspapers is sure to know of the wonderful cures made by Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy.

It is the great medical triumph of the nineteenth century; discovered after years of scientific research by Dr. Kilmer, the eminent kidney and bladder specialist, and is wonderfully successful in promptly curing lame back, kidney, bladder, uric acid troubles and Bright's Disease, which is the worst form of kidney trouble.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is not recommended for everything but if you have kidney, liver or bladder trouble it will be found just the remedy you need. It has been tested in so many ways, in hospital work, in private practice, among the helpless too poor to purchase relief and has proved so successful in every case that a special arrangement has been made by which all readers of this paper who have not already tried it, may have a sample bottle sent free by mail, also a book telling more about Swamp-Root and how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. The regular fifty cent and dollar sizes are sold by all good druggists.

Eczema for Forty Years.

The Unqualified Statement of a Well Known Attorney, St. Ignace, Mich.

Some of the cures made by Dr. A. W. Chase's Ointment of stubborn and long continued eczema and skin diseases are causing much comment. People are beginning to realize that this Ointment is a wonder worker with all kinds of skin trouble. Attorney James J. Brown, St. Ignace, Michigan, writes as follows:

Dr. A. W. Chase Med. Co. Buffalo, N. Y.—Gents:—I cannot refrain from expressing my acknowledgement for the relief I have felt from Dr. Chase's Ointment. For 40 years I was afflicted with a skin disease which was located in one spot—on my leg. I have spent at a rough estimate five hundred dollars trying to effect a cure, and not until I applied this ointment did I get relief. You are strangers to me and this letter is prompted directly because I want to say and I feel as though I ought to say it. That Chase's ointment has effected a complete cure of my affliction. Three boxes did the work on my leg. I was also suffering from itching piles and applied the ointment which gave the best of satisfaction by affording me rest at night and rapidly causing the disease to disappear. I have received such relief and comfort from the ointment that I cannot withhold expressing my gratitude. I was so long afflicted with the tortures of eczema. I feel now that I am cured, a word of recommendation is due from me. Yours truly,

JAMES J. BROWN.

Dr. Chase's Ointment is sold at 50 cents a box at all dealers or Dr. A. W. Chase's Medicine Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

HAS HIS TROUBLES TOO.

"When I have anything to say remarked Henry Watterson the other day," "I write it; then I put it in my pocket. After a while I take it out, read it and write it again Once more I put it away. Then I write it again and send it down to the printer and have it put in type. When I get the proof I run over it closely and write it again, and again it goes to the printer. Afterward it is sent to me again and in a revised proof. Then I make the last corrections and send it down again. And then, he continued, with a heavy sigh "the confounded printer gets it wrong."

THE OCTOPUS.

PROMISING OUTLOOK.

Speaking of the promising outlook of the growing of wheat in Cass County, the Logansport Pheros indulges in some timely observations that are general in their aspect. With becoming seriousness that paper says: "Let us hope that there may be an abundant yield and that the farmers may get a good price for the crop. Agriculture is the foundation of Americas wonderful presperity. The products of the farm load our transportation lines with marketable wares. Besides supplying our own people with the best the earth affords our farmers have sold to people of other lands millions upon millions of dollars worth of food supplies every year for many years past. When the farmers prosper, the people engaged in other occupations prosper. A single crop failure would paralyze business. It is little wonder then that there is anxiety over crop conditions from planting time until the harvest is garnered. The happiness and prosperity of all the people depends in a great measure upon nature's generosity and the labor of those who till the soil. The farmers of this section are better circumstanced than usual for the reason that the earth has produced abundantly of recent years and a high price level for farm products has prevailed."

$100 REWARD, $100.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity, Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer one Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

THE WAY IT SPREADS.

This smallpox business is getting to be quite the thing. Only recently an agent took in the town of Albion with a well developed case of the disease. In several places school teachers have gone ahead imparting information to their pupils beteen scratches: and now comes a report from Illinois that the groom at a wedding where two hundred guests were assembled was suffering from smallpox when the nuptial knot was tied, being informed by a wise guy with the perfix of "Dr." to his name that he had a mild case of chickenpox. It is not surprising that the disease is increasing under such conditions. In fact the wonder is that it is not more prevalent. That it is not, is undoubtedly due to the good results of vaccination which has robbed the disease of its terror.—Columbia City Post.

BETTER THAN PILLS.

The question has been asked, "In what way are Chamberlain's Stomach & Liver Tablets superior to pills?" Our answer is: They are easier and more pleasant to take, more mild and gentle in effect and more reliable as they can always be depended upon Then they cleanse and invigorate the stomach and leave the bowels in a natural condition, while pills are more harsh in effect and their use is often followed by constipation. ROBINSON VS DOLE.

Sanford B. Dole, Governor of Hawaii, was before the House Committee on territories this morning and discussed at some length Delegate Wilcox's bill to apportion the term of office elected at the first general election in the Territory of Hawaii and went into a wide discussion of the affairs of Hawaii. His statement touching the election of senators did not differ materially from the statement made earlier in the week on the same subject before the Senate Committee on Pacific Islands and Porto Rico.

In answer to a question from Representative Robinson, Governor Dole said there was to much politics in in some cases in Hawaii. Chairman Knox remarked that the committee did not want any political discussion. The committee would like the governor's view he said. Considering the Wilcox bill which had been reported Governor Dale said he differed with the committee on several provisions of the measure.

"After annexation and before the organic law were there not a number of long leases of public lands? asked Representative Robinson.

The reply of the Governor was that he could not tell.

Some of Governor Dole's statements in reply to Representative Robinson's questions were a bit contradictory. The great body of laborers on the Hawaiian plantations, he said, were Chinese, Japanese and Portuguese, an ignorant class but he thought it might be gradually superseded by American laborers of a more intelligent order under the homestead system.

Mr. Robinson wanted to know if Governor Dole thought there was a field for American labor in Hawaii. He replied that there was a limited field for skilled labor and that for unskilled labor there might become a gradually growing field. He said he had desired to encourage American settlers to take up small holdings. There has been but few Americans in the island, and these, Governor Dole said, were principally speculators, teachers and professional men. They had done little toward farming.

A REAL SPRING POEM.

The sun is shining on the hill, the bee is on the wing. I hear the sound of rippling rills, the birds begin to sing. The lambs are skipping o'er the mead, the crocusses appear, the congressmen send out their seed, to show that spring is here. The crow is nesting in the wood, the winter season's past, the hens are trying to be good, and hatching the eggs out fast. The farmer buys a riding plow, and sows his crop of oats, the calf bawls for the mother cow, the candidate hunts votes.

Alas, I fear I spoke too quick, the weather changed just then; old winter turned another trick, and now it's cold again. This weather makes the crocus cuss, the pussy willows mew, it makes the warm air oxodus and freezes me clear through. The rippling rills have ceased to rip, the birds can't sing a note, for most of them have got the grip, and trouble in the throat. O winter if you only knew, as in spring's lap you sit, how we would like to strangle you, you would git up and git!

But hold! Another change has come I hear the blue birds sing, again the bee begins to hum its welcome unto spring. The sun shines warm and bright again, the rills resume their rip, and down among the mossy glen the cows begin to slip. Now, listen to the robin trill, and hear the wood nymph pipe, I think it won't be long until young onions will be ripe.

SOME SENSIBLE ADVICE.

With the rapid disappearance of the forests in the state, DeKalb county farmers could add to the value, appearance, general beauty and comfort of their lands by planting shade trees along the road side or in the lanes and fence rows. Fruit trees would be the most desirable and would be of more value in the returns of profit. The spring time should suggest attractiveness on the farm as well as on town property. In California and other localities where the traveler is impressed with the beauty of the country, much attention is given to the planting of trees along the highway. A systematic effort in this particular would add to the value of farm lands far in access of the cost. Every one will admit that it is a pleasure in summer time to ride along the high way where shade trees on either side make such an attractive appearance. The sooner such work is accomplished the sooner benefits will appear.—Waterloo Press.

Zoa Phora Cures Suppressed Menses

The Only Safe, Sure Remedy for Falling of the Womb, Change of Life, Flooding, Laceration, Kidney and Liver Trouble.

It Quickly Relieves the Distress, Cures Female Diseas and Restores to Weak Women, Healthy Vigor--- Large Trial Bottle Free.

MISS CODIE JOHNSON, Indianapolis, Ind.

Women can have health—when they have at hand Zoa Phora, the remedy that does for woman what no other aid on earth can or will do. It gives absolute and permanent relief from the dreadful pain and distress of womb disease, flooding, leucorrhœa and cures leucorrhœa, suppressed or painful menstruation, displacement, kidney, liver and bladder disease and at the same time imparts new strength and vigor, builds up and gives tone to the nervous system. If you are a sufferer and still skeptical write to-day to any of the thousands of women who now bless Zoa Phora for saving their life and making it worth living. It is "woman's friend" all through. Miss Codie Johnson, of 1837 College Ave., Indianapolis, Ind., says: "I have suffered for years with pain from menses. Had to go to bed each time. A friend induced me to try Zoa Phora and it has completely restored me. I am almost entirely free from pain at the monthly sickness. I think all young girls should use Zoa Phora."

Why suffer in silence and alone? Women who drag out a miserable existence, struggling through their housework as though a great weight were fastened about their waist and their shoes were filled with lead can find instant and permanent relief in the use of Zoa Phora. Thousands of well women testify to-day to the marvelous power of this great remedy in bringing them from sickness back to sound mental and physical health. It carries women safely through pregnancy without pain or danger.

Get a dollar bottle of Zoa Phora at the nearest drug store, or the Zoa Phora Co., Kalamazoo, Mich., will send it to you, prepaid, on receipt of price. It is no experiment as hundreds of grateful women testify daily. The doctor will always gladly answer questions. Do not hesitate to write for information.

We will be glad to send you a large trial bottle free upon receipt of 10c to cover postage and packing. Address Zoa Phora Co., Kalamazoo Mich.

RURAL MAIL BOXES.

The senate has inserted a four line amendment in the postoffice appropriation bill, that is of great interest to farmers. It directs the postmaster-general to purchase after advertising metal boxes of uniform size at a cost of not more than 50 cents each, to be furnished free to patrons of rural free delivery. Under the present system, farmers must pay for the boxes, which cost from $1.50 to $3 each, and the government limits the purchase to 14 makes of boxes. A similar amendment was voted down in the house when the bill was up there and it will be for the conference committee to say whether or not it stays in the bill.

ABOUT A SUGAR REFINERY.

Several of our people are wonked up over the sugar beet question and much talk is indulged in regarding a refinery for Butler. That would be all right if we could get it, But as we understand it will depend on the success of the farmers who engage in it this year. Some will succeed and some may fail, but as experience is the best teacher we can tell more about it after the first crop is raised. Should it be a success a strong effort will be made to get a refinery located here. The farmers are taking hold of it in good shape and several hundred acres will be put out.

The refineries in Michigan were built in that state because the soil was good, and to secure the bonus passed by the legislature of that state, since declared unconstitutional. The factories were built, and as they failed on the bonus are trying hard to get sufficient beets to operate the various concerns at a profit. The Indiana beet contains more sugar than the Michigan beet, and still we have no refineries—strange is it not?

CROP AND FRUIT PROSPECT.

State Statistician Johnson Monday sent to the printer his report for April.

Mr. Johnson says that wheat is 25 per cent. below the average in condition. These reports, he says, are from ninety-one counties, which practically covers the state. Early sown wheat, he says, is in very good condition, while later wheat has not fared well.

As to corn and oats, Mr. Johnson says they show a good prospect of being up to the average in acreage.

Peaches have been killed everywhere, he says, and in some cases the trees have been injured to a great extent. Other fruits, he says, only promise a fair yield. Much of the clover sown in early spring, he says, has been killed by being frozen after germinating.

SOCIETY WEDDING.

A special from Archbold of April 26th, says:—The first notable society wedding that has taken place for some time occurred Tuesday at high noon, when Miss Rose Levy, of this place, and Mr. Leopold Dreyfus, of Chicago, Ill., were united in marriage. The ceremony was performed at the residence of the bride, and Rev. Chas. Freund, of Toledo, officiated. The youthful bride was becomingly attired in a castor tailor suit. She carried a boquet of bride's roses. A delicious wedding dinner was served soon after the service. Mr. and Mrs. Leopold Dreyfus left for the west on the 4:15 train, and after several months' travel will make their future home in Chicago.

Among the popular attractions of the present season none have achieved greater success than "Si Perkins," which is billed to appear in Butler, at the opera house Tuesday. The play comes to Butler heralded as one of the most laugh-provoking comedies on tour. Though the author's intentions when writing the piece were to create fun, he did not forget to give Cupid a part, and the little god plays sad havoc with the hearts of Si and his sweetheart. The story, as told by the stage mimics, is pretty, full of heart interest, logical, witty and enlists the auditor's attention from curtain-rise to finish. During the four acts several of over specialty artists will introduce the latest novelties in songs, humorous dialogue and grotesque [illegible] some given [illegible]

There often comes a time in the struggle with pulmonary disease when the victim loses heart and gives up hope. The ambition to be up and around gives way before growing weakness, and the sufferer keeps to the bed.

No one who suffers from lung disease should lose heart or give up hope while there is a possibility of cure. In many cases Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has cured lung "trouble" when the cough was obstinate and deep seated, with hemorrhage, emaciation, night sweats and general weakness. A great many men and women are living to-day in the full enjoyment of health and happiness who had been "given up" by doctors, but found a perfect and permanent cure in the use of "Golden Medical Discovery."

"My wife had hemorrhage of the lungs," writes W. A. Sanders, of Hera, Mason Co., W.Va. "She had ten hemorrhages, and the people all around here said she would never be well again. But she began to take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and she soon began to gain strength and flesh. After taking ten bottles she was entirely well. Should you think this would do you any good to publish, just use it, and if any one disputes the merits of this almost omnipotent medicine they may enclose self-addressed envelope with stamp, and I will answer, the same as written in this letter."

YOST & CONROY

Cigar Manufacturers of Fort Wayne Have Disappeared From That City

Last week the HERALD mentioned the fact that A. C. Yost, a partner of R. Conroy in the cigar business at Fort Wayne, had skipped out, taking with him over $400 of the firm's money. Since that time other developments have materialized and the firm's affairs are in the hands of its creditors.

Last Wednesday Mr. Conroy and his wife came to Butler, Mrs. Conroy returning to Fort Wayne on Friday, and we understand that she refused to live with him any longer.

Mr. Conroy left for Toledo and had between four and five hundred dollars in his possession. Efforts were made to locate him, but he could not be found The business of the firm is said to be badly tangled and it is doubtful whether the creditors will realize enough out of the remaining stock to pay their claims in full.

Mr. Conroy and wife were former residents of Butler, he having conducted a cigar manufacturing business at this place, moving to Fort Wayne about a year ago. Both were excellent people, and Mr. Conroy was always credited with being a man of unquestioned honesty and integrity.

Ira B. Madden has proven himself a very efficient road supervisor. Lately he had several culverts put in on the Proctor road, and he has the sides plowed ready to roll in, grade up and make the road in proper shape. This road has been neglected for years and this improvement will be appreciated by the people southeast of Butler and it will also be a benefit to the town. We are told that Butler has one-fourth of this road to make and to keep in repair.

The rain Tuesday morning put off farm work again, but it was needed for the wheat and grass which is in a crippled condition.

A public ditch petitioned for some time ago and recently acted on by ditch commissioners has been turned down by the farmers interested on account of the excessive assessments reported for them to pay. It affected lands owned by Jeff Boyle, John Tappen, Frank Reynolds, Lester Casebere, Henry Grube, Frank Gaff, H. B. Maxwell, and also we are informed of I. M. Diehl. These farmers prefer to the cost already made to having the ditch made as reported and pay in the aggregate a sum of about $3,500.

Those present were George Thompson and family, Dan Steckley and family, Worth Corbin and family, William Ellis and family and Arthur Steckley and wife. A nice dinner was served at 12 o'clock. Each one presented her with a nice present. They all enjoyed the music and singing, and departed wishing Mrs. Steckley many more happy birthday parties.

More About Buck Creek

TO THE EDITOR:

"Interested Citizen," who is the author of an article published in the HERALD some time ago, wishes a little space in your excellent paper to reply to the article in last week's copy headed "Concerning Buck Creek."

The author or authors of the article in question seem to have unlimited confidence in the surveyor, who it is said, made the specifications referred to whether he is right or wrong, but offers no proof that the specifications are what they should be to insure a good ditch. If the specifications are what they should be and "Interested Citizen" does not know enough to judge them as intimated, why not get the author of the said specifications to analyze them and show that they are correct, and if observed in the making of the ditch the banks will be properly sloped. Confidence may be based on ignorance and it is possible the confidence of the authors referred to is not supported by intelligence.

In order to bring the matter properly before the people we will again write the said specifications. "The dredged part of said ditch shall be cut 2 feet narrower on each bank than the width of a 45 degree slope, the remaining part of each bank to be cut as nearly as possible by offsets of 3 feet, so that after sluffing off, will have as nearly as possible the required width of 45 degrees."

It can be easily observed that there is no provision in the above for an absolute slope of 45 degrees, and that the party who make the said ditch can nearly do as he pleases as to making its banks. It says "as nearly as possible," and if under certain conditions the banks had to be made nearly perpendicular they would still fulfill the specifications. Sluffing off of the banks is spoken of as the means of getting the required slant. Does not every intelligent person who has had any experience with ditches know that when the bank of a ditch breaks off it generally does so in a perpendicular direction. Then, again, what is to become of the dirt that breaks or sluffs off? Will it not go down into the ditch, help fill it up and spoil it? It surely will do so, and then the "dear people" who were heavily assessed to make the ditch in the first instance will be assessed again and this, too, perhaps before the ditch is completed the first time.

This is the case with Cedar Creek now. Nothwithstanding these facts there are people who say that a dredged ditch is cheaper than a ditch dug the old way. It does seem in view of all the circumstances in the case that the author or authors of the article cited above should be called "blind confidence."

The writer has not a word to say against ditching if properly done under a just and equitable law. It is enough for people to be taxed once for a big ditch, without being made to pay twice for it. It is possible to make a big ditch in such a manner as to be a damage to a farm through which it passes instead of a benefit. A floating dredge might be twice as wide as the bottom of a big ditch and the ditch bottom would have to be much wider than specified and the ditch sides would be spoiled in this way.

ABOUT THAT WHICH HAS BEEN AND IS TO BE.

All Sides and Conditions of Things are Shown. Nothing Overlooked to make it Complete.

Ten Hurt in Collision.

Ten men were seriously injured and a score badly hurt in a head-on collision on the Chicago, Lake Shore & South Bend interurban line two miles west of Gary, Ind. But one passenger, on the east bound car, which contained twenty people, who boarded it at Hammond, escaped without injury of some kind. The crash came as the east bound car was running down grade at high speed from the elevated crossing over the Joliet cut-off. The front ends of the two cars were telescoped when they struck. Most of the male passengers were crowded in the smoking sections back of the motormen and it was here that the most serious injuries resulted. A relief car was sent from Gary and ambulances were in waiting when it arrived with the injured. Eight of the more seriously injured were hurried to the hospital, where it was reported that all would recover.

Six Die in Fire at Lenox, Mass.

Six persons lost their lives, three others were badly burned and a property loss of between $200,000 and $300,000 was caused by the fire in the central part of the business district of Lenox, Mass. Four business blocks, two dwellings and two other structures were destroyed in a section bounded by Franklin, Main and Housitonic and Cherry streets. A fortunate shift of wind saved the public library and the fashionable Curtis hotel. The loss of life occurred in the Clifford building, where the blaze started and resulted primarily from a series of explosions among the turpentine, paints, oils and dynamite stored in the cellar of the James Clifford & Sons company, hardware dealers.

Maniac Reckless With Explosive.

Lewis Truhn, a Berrien county, Mich., farmer, while crazed with liquor, created a reign of terror by dynamiting a building, attempting to murder his father-in-law and four other members of his family by stabbing with a knife and also placing the lives of six children in peril near the building he dynamited. Truhn, after creating this havoc and alarm, barricaded himself in his home, where he had stored dynamite and guns, and defined a posse from which he had escaped earlier in the evening. After laying siege to the house for several hours, Sheriff Johnson finally captured the crazed man, who is now in jail at Benton Harbor, Mich.

Gov. Haskell Goes Acquit.

Governor Charles N. Haskell, Oklahoma's first chief executive, and the six other promient Oklahomans indicted by the federal grand jury charged with fraud in Muskogee town lots will not have to stand trial. The motion of the defendants to quash the indictments was upheld at Tulsa, Okla., by Judge John A. Marshall, of Utah, in the United States circuit court.

High Wind Wrecks a Train.

Passenger train No. 14, east bound, on the Chicago & Alton, was derailed near Mayview, six miles west of Higginsville, Mo. The accident was caused by the terrific wind storm raging at the time which literally lifted the coaches off the track and rolled them down an embankment. The passengers were shaken up but no one was seriously injured.

C. B. Woodworth Is Dead.

Charles B. Woodworth, one of the pioneer druggists of Fort Wayne, Ind., is dead at his home in that city. Mr. Woodworth was recognized thoroughout the state as one of the leading druggists and served for four years as a member of the state pharmacy board completing his term of service two years ago.

Fatal Wreck on Northern Pacific.

Northern Pacific passenger train No. 16, an overland express from Seattle and Tacoma, Wash., to Billings, Mont., was wrecked at Bristol, near the stampede tunnel. The engineer and fireman were killed and several passengers injured. The mail car and some of the coaches left the track and are in the river.

Gas Blows off Lodger's Coat.

Accidentally Killed Himself.

While handling a loaded revolver at his North Broad street home, Philadelphia, Charles E. Ellis, well-known in street railway and financial circles accidentally shot and killed himself. He was seventy-three years old.

GREAT BUYING WAVE HITS WHEAT BEARS

Patten Scores Triumph as Shorts Force Wheat Values to New High Levels.

KING OF PIT TAKES BIG PROFITS

His Sales Are Reported 2,000,000 a Day—Furious Buying Result of Bad Crop Reports.

A tremendous wave of buying swept over the Chicago wheat pit Wednesday and Thursday, swamping the few remaining bears and, amid scenes of the wildest excitement, lifting prices for all deliveries to new high levels. May wheat sold at $1.26¾, the highest price since the Leiter deal, and the top figure during April in more than twenty years. Trading was of a spectacular character all through the session and millions of bushels were handled. Excited shorts paid any price demanded for the May in order to cover their sales, and but for the selling by the bull leaders much higher quotations would have been established. Bulls took profits on a colossal scale, a veritable panic in the bear camp enabling them to cash in at fabulous profits. Even at the high price of Thursday 1,000,000 bushels were dumped into the pit of the Board of Trade.

There was a riot on the floor of the trading room when the price was chalked on the board at $1.26¾. Early the price had dropped from $1.25¾, the high mark of the day before, to $1.24. Shorts began to think the government crop report, which had sent the price up, had not greatly affected the situation and that prices were going to fall. Suddenly there was a cessation in the offering of wheat on the market. For a moment no wheat was sold. The shorts began to get anxious again. There was a clamor for wheat.

Then a uniformed messenger climbed to the bulletin board and he wrote on the board the highest price seen in the pit in nine years. There was a wild roar in the trading room. Brokers jumped and raced madly about. It was a question of winning or losing a fortune. With the one mark of chalk on the blackboard many lost their all, while others won heavily. Messenger boys rushed wildly through the room to find the floor representatives of big brokerage firms. For an hour wheat changed hands with the rapidity of lightning.

It was a day of triumph for James A. Patten. The price he predicted for May last summer was reached and exceeded, and bear traders who have been forecasting calamity for the bull wheat deal were thankfully buying the grain he poured into the pit to relieve the stringency. Conditions are now developing as Patten maintained they would—foreigners are coming for wheat, other sources of supply are failing, and even with prices for the May at the highest level in years, cash wheat is selling at enormous premiums. Patten added to his profits of $5,000,000 which he has made out of the deal. He still declares that he is not trying to corner the market, but is simply taking advantage of the shortage in the crop.

NEW LAND RULING IS MADE.

Entrymen Henceforth Must Prove Both Residence and Cultivation.

In a decision of the general land office in Washington it was held that in order to enable the heirs of a homestead entryman to submit commutation proof of his entry, they must show both residence on and cultivation of the land for fourteen months by the entryman, or the heirs, or partly by both. The same rule, it was held, applies in a case where commutation proof is submitted by the widow of the entryman. The decision is of considerable interest because heretofore it has only been necessary for an entryman or an heir to show either residence on or cultivation of the land for fourteen months. In another decision it was held that when an entryman sells his improvements on the land and relinquishes his entry in connection therewith, he is not entitled to make a second homestead entry under the act of Congress of Feb. 8, 1908.

ENJOINS 3 CENT FARE ORDER.

Missouri Court Grants Temporary Writ at Instance of Gov. Hadley.

Under a temporary injunction granted in St. Louis in the Circuit Court all railroads operating in Missouri are restrained from putting into effect the 3-cent fare which was to have obtained after midnight Friday. The injunction was granted at the instance of Seebert G. Jones, circuit attorney of St. Louis, acting for Gov. Hadley. The petition alleges that the railroads have entered into an unlawful agreement to fix the rates, and thus have failed to carry out their charter requirements in operating competing lines.

RUN CAR IN RIVER TO SAVE GIRL

Men Drive Automobile Over Bank and Avoid Killing Child.

To avoid running over a little girl who was in their path James L. Dinsmore and F. O. Probasco turned their automobile down a thirty-foot embankment and plunged into the waters of Miami River at Dayton, Ohio. The men were driving the car along the top of a levee only eight feet wide when the child was seen a few feet ahead of the car. Probasco, who was driving, said, "Is it the child or the river, Jim?" to which Dinsmore replied: "The river for ours."

MME. MODJESKA IS DEAD.

Famous Actress Expires After Long Illness at Her California Home.

Mme. Modjeska, the famous actress, died Thursday at her extensive estate in California in a stupor, after a hard fight to conquer an illness with which she was stricken several weeks ago.

Mme. Modjeska was born Helena Marie Benda, at Cracow, Poland, Oct. 12, 1844. Her father was a musician of high standing, and two of her brothers have distinguished themselves on the stage. She was married at 16 and went on the stage a year later. Her success was marked. In 1862 she became manager of a theater at Czernowee. Her next removal was to Warsaw, where her husband died, and where, a year afterward, she married Count Charles Bozenta Chlapowski, a young Polish patriot of noble family. In 1875 they came to America, escaping the ignoble censorship of Russia. At San Francisco, in 1879, Modjeska made her debut on the American stage and gave her first performance in the English tongue. In 1879 Modjeska returned to Europe and played in the principal cities of Poland, going thence to play over a year's continuous engagement in London. A few years ago she again went to Europe, and would have played in St. Petersburg, but the Russian censor forbade the performance and gave her and her husband formal notice to leave the country. They had spoken too freely of Russia to be welcome there. After that time Modjeska kept to her adopted country. She delighted cosmopolitan audiences with her Marie Stuart, Rosalind, Helen, Thora, Magda, Camille and Adrienne.

DEATH OF A. C. SWINBURNE.

End Comes to Poet After Brief Attack of Pneumonia.

Algernon Charles Swinburne, the poet and essayist, died Saturday morning in London. He had been suffering with influenza, which developed into pneumonia.

Algernon Charles Swinburne was born in London April 5, 1837, his father being Admiral Swinburne and his mother Lady Henrietta, daughter of the third Earl of Ashburnham. He was educated in France and England, and as a poet he was especially well known for his facile metrical invention. He was a bachelor and lived at The Pines, Putney.

For fifty years Swinburne has written in the light of fame. Some of his poems have been called the most beautiful in the English language. He was regarded as a leader during the Victorian age of literature. But with the advance of years he did not yield his pen. Only last September there was published his last work, "The Age of Shakespeare." The works of Swinburne best known in the United States are "Laus Veneris," "Rosamund, Queen of the Lombards," "Atlanta in Claydon," "Tristram of Lyonesse" and "Mariano Faliero." A recent edition of his works filled eleven volumes.

J. A. PATTEN, SAID TO HAVE MADE FORTUNE IN WHEAT.

JAMES A. PATTEN

James A. Patten, who is said to have gained a fortune out of the recent rise in May wheat, has been conspicuous for several years as a daring and successful Chicago board of trade operator in wheat and corn. He has been in the board of trade business since 1878 and previously served four years as an employe of the State grain inspection department in Chicago. Mr. Patten lives in Evanston, Ill., and was mayor of that city four years, besides serving two terms as alderman. He was born in Dekalb County, Illinois, in 1852, and as a boy worked in a country store and on a farm.

FORMER SENATOR IS CONVICTED.

Marion Butler and Brother Found Guilty of Criminal Libel.

Former United States Senator Marion Butler and his brother, Lester Butler, were convicted in Guilford Superior Court, Winstom Salem, N. C., of criminally libeling Republican State Chairman S. B. Adams. Adams' acts as chief justice of the Indian court in Oklahoma in 1905 were severely condemned by the Caucasian, a paper owned by the Butlers, in its fight against Adams' re-election as chairman of the Republican State Executive Committee. The trial lasted six days, was hard fought, and created widespread interest. Judge Long imposed a fine of $500 upon Marion Butler and $250 upon Lester Butler.

ROOSEVELT MEETS KING.

Monarch Expresses Gratitude for Aid to Earthquake Sufferers.

Theodore Roosevelt and King Victor Emmanuel met Tuesday on the Italian battleship Re Umberto in Messina harbor. The meeting was characterized by the utmost cordiality, and the King took the occasion to express the gratitude of himself and the Italian people for the generous assistance of the American people to the earthquake sufferers.

The Admiral arrived at Messina about 2 o'clock in the afternoon and was saluted by the Re Umberto, with the King on board, which reached there in the morning. Almost immediately Capt. Pfeister, the forfer Italian military attache at Washington and now aid to Admiral Mirabello, was taken to the steamer Admiral in a launch and inquired for Mr. Roosevelt.

To him he said the King sent his compliments, and would have great pleasure in receiving the former President of the United States. Mr. Roosevelt's face lit up with a pleased smile, and, accompanied by his son, Kermit, and Ambassador Griscom, he proceeded at once to the battleship.

The King met the party at the head of the gangway, and he greeted the ex-President effusively, shaking him warmly by the hand. He did not wish, he said, to allow the opportunity to pass of making the personal acquaintance of so distinguished a man. Above all, he wanted personally to thank the ex-President for the help extended by America at the time of the earthquake.

At the close of the interview Mr. Roosevelt went ashore and inspected the ruins of the city, the desolation of which moved him strongly. He then boarded the steamer Admiral, which just at sunset proceeded on its way to Mombasa.

DEATH TAKES HITCHCOCK.

Former Secretary of the Interior Expires in Capital.

Former Secretary of the Interior Ethan Allen Hitchcock died at his home in Washington early Friday. Mr. Hitchcock had been ill for some time, and his death had been expected for several days.

Ethan Allen Hitchcock was born in Mobile, Ala., Sept. 19, 1825. He attended private schools in Nashville, Tenn., and then entered a military academy in New Haven, Conn., graduating in 1855. He moved to St. Louis, Mo., and engaged in mercantile business until 1860, when he went to China to enter the commission house of Olyphant & Co., of which firm he became a partner in 1866.

He retired from business in 1872 and spent two years in Europe. He returned to the United States in 1874 and was president of several mining and railroad companies. In 1897-8 he was Minister to Russia and was made the first Ambassador to that country in 1898-9. He was appointed Secretary of the Interior by President McKinley Dec. 21, 1898, and reappointed May 5,

ETHAN A. HITCHCOCK.

1901, and remained by request of President Roosevelt and was reappointed by him March 6, 1905. He resigned March 4, 1907.

Hurls Four Children from Window.

In Johnstown, Pa., Mrs. William Roberts threw her four small children out of a second-story window and then jumped herself. Not one of the children was seriously hurt, while the mother sustained probably fatal injuries. She is thought to be demented.

Thirteen Hurt in a Train Crash.

Thirteen persons were injured when the rear coach on the Denver and Rio Grande fast train No. 7 was overturned by striking a switch point at Carleton mine, north of Colorado Springs. Every passenger in the car was injured.

Work of Congress

The Senate was not in session Tuesday. Wrangling, confusion, captious objections, personalities and language bordering on vituperation marked the first day's discussion of the Payne tariff bill in the House of Representatives. With practically a full attendance the members were wrought up to a high tension and were prepared to fight to the last ditch for those things which their constituents were demanding. The entire day practically was consumed in discussing the lumber and hides schedules. Led by Mr. Tawney (Minn.), the advocates of free lumber went down to defeat by the narrow margin of six votes, following the striking out of the countervailing duty on lumber. An overwhelming majority was mustered against an amendment by Mr. Scott (Kan.), taking hides from the free list and fixing a duty upon them of 10 per cent ad valorem. The barley schedule came in for a lively discussion, and when the bill was laid aside for the day there were pending two amendments, one raising the rate in the Payne bill from 15 cents to 25 cents a bushel, and the other fixing the rate at 10 per cent ad valorem.

The Senate was not in session Wednesday. The House Republican organization met defeat when by united action of the insurgents and the Democrats, an amendment was made to the Payne tariff bill practically providing for free trade in crude oil and its products. Speaker Cannon tried in vain to prevent the action, but in spite of the special rule limiting the schedules to be discussed, the action was taken. The removal of the duty is intended as a blow at the Standard company. During the day tea and coffee were placed on the free list, the barley schedule was left unchanged, and the duty on barites is doubled.

A bill to provide for the taking of the thirteenth and subsequent censuses was reported to the Senate Thursday. Several resolutions calling on the Secretaries of State, Agriculture and of Commerce and Labor for information concerning duties on sugar were adopted. Because of the numerous committee amendments to the Payne tariff bill the House was compelled to sit until late in the evening in order to insure action on the various paragraphs coming within the scope of the special rule adopted the previous Monday before the final vote is taken. At one time the Republicans were caught napping and an amendment by Mr. Clark of Missouri was adopted fixing the rate of duty on wire of the No. 16 gauge at three-quarters of a cent per pound, but this was thrown out later. Fearing that he might not meet with such success again, Chairman Payne took his Republican colleagues to task for absenting themselves from the chamber and appealed to them to remain in their seats. This was done, with the result that in all the committee amendments he was sustained.

During nearly five hours Friday the bill to provide for the thirteenth and subsequent censuses was under discussion in the Senate. The measure had been amended since its original passage by Congress in the last session, when it was vetoed by President Roosevelt because of provisions allowing Senators and Representatives practically to select employes of the census for appointment. These features of the bill called forth a general discussion in the Senate on the subject of civil service reform and the present operation of the law was denounced by several Senators. As amended by the committee the bill placed appointments in the census under the Civil Service Commission. The Payne tariff bill yas passed by the House by a vote of 217 to 161, after three weeks of consideration. One Republican, Austin (Tenn.), voted against the measure and four Democrats, all from Louisiana, Broussard, Estopinal, Pujo and Wickliffe, voted for it. An attempt by the minority leader, Champ Clark, to recommit the bill with instructions failed. A resolution was adopted that until further orders sessions be held only on Mondays and Thursdays.

The bill to provide for the taking of the next census was passed by the Senate Saturday in a form which, it is understood, will meet the views of the President regarding appointments for census work under regulations by the Civil Service Commission. Efforts by some Senators to allow these appointments to be made upon recommendation of Senators and Representatives without examination received only slight support. The interesting feature was a speech by Mr. Bailey, who said it was reported that if the bill as passed did not provide for appointments under the civil service the President would veto it, and added that if any such "threat" were made it would stir up severe criticism of the President.

HIGH TARIFF VICTOR; PAYNE BILL PASSES

House Refuses to Listen to Protest of Women on Increase on Gloves and Hosiery.

LUMBER TARIFF UNDISTURBED

Oil, However, Is Placed on Free List —Vote of 217 to 161 Passes Measure.

The Payne tariff bill, almost without a scratch, was accepted by the House of Representatives in Washington, with a vote of 217 to 161 Friday night.

It was almost a pure party vote, Congressmen Broussard, Estopinal, Pujo and Wickliffe, Democrats, of Louisiana, who have been with the Republican leaders on almost everything, voted with the Republicans on the final roll call. Justin of Tennessee was the only Republican to go into the Democratic camp on the final vote.

The final days work on the Payne bill proved a series of victories for the Payne Ways and Means Committee. Every feature of the document that was finally accepted had the approval of the committee. Much of this, however, was due to the efforts of the committee to avoid threatening defeats. This was particularly the case in the rates on oil, barley and barley malt.

Committee Submits to Free Oil.

The committee had fought bitterly against putting oil on the free list, but gave up the fight Friday, and it was on Chairman Payne's motion that all duties on oil and oil products were stricken off.

On barley and barley malt the committee had fought against an increase, and in its first fight triumphed. But the votes of the barley men were needed to save the committee's stand on lumber and hides, and the barley and malt rates were increased.

No changes were made in the hosiery and gloves schedule, although the Democrats included this in their motion for a recommitment. It was buried there, however, with a long list of other Democratic demands, including an income tax.

The other changes in the bill, which were made during the last four days by the committee of the whole, were accepted by a viva voce vote. This included putting tea and coffee on the free list.

House Packed.

The House and the galleries were packed for the last day of the fight, and during most of the voting the buzz of conversation almost drowned out the call of the roll. When the subject under vote was particularly uninteresting and no one seemed to pay any attention, the House seemed like a cross between a boiler factory and a session of the D. A. R. Time and again Speaker Cannon almost splintered a gavel in getting the members to listen to the roll calls.

It was a good natured battle, although at the outset there was a storm of parliamentary debate over the methods of procedure. When it got under way, however, things moved more smoothly. There were ten roll calls in all, four on the lumber schedules, one on barley malt, two on hides, one on oil, one on recommitment and one on the final vote. With the exception of the last two, the party vote was badly split.

Illinoisans for Free Lumber.

The first question which was voted on was a motion to put lumber on the free list. Fifty-four Republicans went over to the Democrats on this, and thirty-five Democrats reciprocated. This brought the result to 184 for free lumber to 198 against. Three other free lumber propositions containing minor changes went down to defeat in turn, by votes of 180 to 200, 133 to 244 and 153 to 228.

Then came the barley and barley malt issue, in which the increased rates—already approved by the committee—were put into the bill. Here again party lines were broken. Then came the vote on free hides; eight Republicans joining the Democrats for free hides. On the oil vote, two Illinoisans, both Republicans, voted against free oil.

RICHEST GOLD FIELD FOUND.

District of 22,000 Acres Declared to Be Wealthiest in Mexico.

Word reached Mexico City the other night of the discovery of the richest placer gold fields ever found in Mexico. They are in the State of Oaxaca, forty-three miles from Sierra Blanca, on the Vera Cruz and Pacific Railway. The discovery was made by accident by I. B. Incle. The sands have been analyzed at the University of Kansas and declared the richest ever sent there. The fields extend over 22,000 acres.

PITTSBURG LEADS IN FREIGHT.

Ships Greater Tonnage Than ondon, New York and Liverpool Combined.

Statistics completed by the Pittsburg chamber of commerce show that the freight tonnage of that city for 1907 exceeds that of New York, London and Liverpool combined. Exclusive of freight in transit the rail and river tonnage of Pittsburg for the year aws 161,194,167 tons. Hitherto only estimates have been given, but these are accurate figures.

EXPLOSION KILLS SIX MEN.

One Hundred Cottages Wrecked at Powder Works in New Jersey.

A series of explosions in the Wayne, N. J., works of the DuPont Powder Company killed six men, wrecked a hundred cottages in Wayne and shook the country like an earthquake in a radius of fifteen miles. Nine of the twenty buildings at the works went up, one after another, with terrific explosions. Jerome T. Marsh, who was in the building first wrecked, was killed. He alone could know what caused the disaster.

COMMERCIAL AND FINANCIAL

CHICAGO.

The usual indexes of commercial activity continue to mark progress, although some branches are yet burdened with a surplus of idle capacity. It is highly encouraging to note the sustained rise in payments reported through the banks, together with the absence of heavy defaults in the failure record.

While erratic weather has prevailed Easter trade exhibits a gratifying aggregate in the leading retail lines, the absorption being exceptionally good in apparel, millinery, footwear, novelties and household wares.

High prices for some necessaries have not obstructed the increasing purchasing power, and stocks of seasonable merchandise undergo the normal reduction here and at interior points.

Demands entered by the wholesale branches make a fair showing, reorders being frequent for light weight textiles, clothing and fancy goods, and the forward bookings disclose gain over this time last year for autumn and winter staples, selections being more extended against tariff contingencies.

Near-by visiting buyers again appeared in the markets in large numbers for sorting up needs to be promptly shipped. Road salesmen send in cheering advices from the West, the outlook being regarded quite hopeful.

Mercantile collections are prompt on country bills, and less complaint is heard as to city settlements. Money is yet favorable in cost to borrowers, and this creates more disposition among buyers to secure the best discounts for cash purchases.

Further investment of capital is seen in improvements for business purposes, while the market for real estate and permits for construction denote extending enterprise here and at various places within the Chicago trade territory.

Bank clearings, $254,340,884, exceed those of corresponding week in 1908 by 18 per cent, and compare with $236,080,138 in 1907.

Failures reported in the Chicago district number twenty-one, against twenty-one last week, twenty-nine in 1908 and eleven in 1907.—Dun's Weekly Review of Trade.

NEW YORK.

Trade, crop and industrial reports are still very irregular, but the underlying tone of business generally is slightly more optimistic. All present or future favorable occurrences, however, cannot disguise the fact that some lines of industry are still very much depressed; that the first crop report of the year—that made by the government of winter wheat—is a poor one, indicating a short crop; that buying is still hampered in some sections by unfavorable weather or by the reduced purchasing power of the public, and caution and conservatism still govern commercial operations to a large degree.

Easter trade at retail is classed as fair to good in most parts of the West, fair at the East, but below expectations at the South, and rather poor in Texas, where drought conditions hold back buying demand. Some slight expansion is noted in filling in orders by jobbers, but trade in this line is distinctively of a between-seasons character. In wholesale lines there are indications of more confidence in buying for fall.

Business failures in the United States for the week ending with April 8 were 227, against 204 last week, 254 in the like week of 1908, 194 in 1907, 161 in 1906 and 196 in 1905. Canadian failures number 38, which compares with 23 last week and 28 in the like week of 1908.—Bradstreet's.

Matt

A TALE OF A CARAVAN

By

Robert Buchanan

CHAPTER VII.

The men seated themselves on benches; but Matt moved about the room to get a light. The light, as well as everything else, was a living illustration of the meanness of William Jones. It consisted, not of a candle, but of a long rush, which had been gathered from the marshes by Matt, and afterward dried and dipped in grease by William Jones. Matt lighted it and fixed it in a little iron niche which was evidently made for the purpose, and which was attached to a table near the hearth. When the work was finished, she threw off her hat and jacket, retired to the further end of the hearth, and sat down on the floor.

During the whole of this time Mr. Monk had been watching her gloomily; and he had been watched in his turn by William Jones. At last the latter spoke:

"Matt's growed," said he; "she's growed wonderful. She's a bit changed she is since that night when you found her down on the shore. Why, her own friends wouldn't know her!"

Mr. Monk started and frowned.

"Her friends?" he said — "what friends?"

"Why, them as owns her,' continued William Jones. "If they wasn't all drowned in the ship what she came ashore from, they must be somewhere. Maybap some day they'll find her, and reward me for bringin' her up a good gal—that's what I allus tell her."

"So that's what you always tell her, do you?" returned Monk, grimly. "Then you're a fool for your pains. The girl's got no friends—haven't I told you that before?"

"Certainly you have, Mr. Monk," returned William Jones, meekly; "but look ye now, I think——"

"You're no right to think," thundered Monk; "you're not paid for thinking; you're paid for keeping the girl, and what more do you want? Matt," he continued, in a softer tone, "come to me."

But Matt didn't hear—or at any rate, did not heed; for she made no movement. Then Monk, gazing intently at her, gave vent to the same remark as William Jones had done a few hours before.

"Where have you been to-day," he said, "save on that frock?"

Again Matt hung her head and was silent. Monk repeated his question; and, seeing that he was determined to have an answer, she threw up her head defiantly, and said, with a ton of pride in her voice:

"I put it on to be took."

"To be took?" repeated Monk.

"Yes," returned Matt; "to have my likeness took. There is a painter chap here that lives in a cart; he's took it."

It was curious to note the changes in Mr. Monk's face. At first he tried to appear amiable; then his face gradually darkened into a look of angry suspicion. Matt never once withdrew her eyes from him—his very presence seemed to rouse all that was bad in her; and she glared at him through her tangled locks in much the same manner as a shaggy terrier puppy might gaze at a bull which it would fain attack, but feared on account of its superior strength.

"Matt," said Mr. Monk again, "come here."

This time she obeyed; she rose slowly from her seat and went reluctantly to his side.

"Matt, look me in the face," he said. "Do you know who this painter is?"

Matt shook her head.

"How many times have you seen him?"

"Twice."

"And what has he said to you?"

"A lot of things."

"Tell me one thing."

"He asked me who my mother was, and I told him I hadn't got none."

Mr. Monk's face once more grew black as night.

"So," he said, "poking and prying and asking questions. I thought as much. He's a scoundrel, vagabond."

"No, he ain't," said Matt, bluntly.

"Matt, my girl," said Mr. Monk, taking no notice of her interruption, "I want you to promise me something."

"What is it?"

"Not to go near that painter again!"

Matt shook her head.

"Shan't promise," she said, "because I shall go. My likeness ain't took yet—he takes a time, he does. I'm going to put them things on to-morrow and be took again."

For a moment the light in his eyes looked dangerous, then he smiled and patted her cheek—at which caress she shrank away.

"What's the matter?" he asked.

"Nothing," said Matt. "I don't like to be pulled about, that's all."

"You mean you don't like me?"

"Don't know. That's telling."

"And yet you've no cause to hate me, Matt, for I've been a good friend to you—and always shall, because I like you, Matt. Do you understand, I like you."

So anxious did he seem to impress this upon her, that he put his arm around her waist, drew her toward him, and kissed her on the cheek, a ceremony he had never performed before. But Matt seemed by no means to appreciate the honor; as his lips touched her cheeks she shivered, and when he released her she began rubbing at the place as if to wipe the touch away.

If Mr. Monk noticed this action on the part of the girl, he deemed it prudent to take no notice of it. He said a few more pleasant things to Matt, and again patted her cheek affectionately, then he left the cottage, taking William Jones with him. Ten minutes later William Jones returned alone.

"Where's he?" asked Matt.

"Meaning Mr. Monk, Matt—he is gone!" said William Jones.

"Gone for good?" demanded Matt, impatiently.

"No, he ain't, Matt; he'll be down here to-morrow, he will; and you'd best be at home!"

Matt said nothing this time; she only turned away sullenly and shrugged her shoulders.

"Matt," said William Jones, presently.

"Well?"

"Mr. Monk seems uncommon fond of you, he do."

Matt reflected for a moment, then she replied:

"I wonder what he's fond of me for, William Jones?"

"Well, I dunno; 'cause he is, I suppose," returned William Jones, having no more logical answer at his command.

"Tain't that," said Matt; "he don't love me because I'm me, William Jones. There's something else, and I should just like to know what that something is, I should."

William Jones looked at her, conscious that there was a new development of sagacity in her character, but utterly at a loss to understand what that new development meant.

CHAPTER VIII.

When Matt awoke the next morning the first thing she did was to look around for her Sunday clothes, which on retiring to rest she had carefully placed beside her bed. They were gone, and in their place lay the habiliments she was accustomed to wear on her erratic pilgrimages every day. Her face grew cloudy; she hunted all round the chamber, but, finding nothing that she sought, she was compelled to array herself as she best could.

"William Jones," she said, when she sat with that worthy at a hermit's breakfast of dry bread and whey, "where's my Sunday clothes?"

William Jones fidgeted a bit, then he said:

"They're put where you won't find 'em. Look you now, Matt, you'd best be after doing summat useful than running about after a painter chap. I was down on the shore this morning, and I seen heaps of wood—you'd best get some of it afore night!"

Matt said nothing. A few minutes later her benign protector left the cottage, and a little after he had disappeared Matt issued forth; but instead of beating the shore for firewood, as she had been told to do, she ran across the fields to the painter.

She found him already established at his work. The fact was he had been for some time strolling about with his hands in his pockets, and scanning the prospect on every side for a sight of her. Having got tired of this characteristic occupation, he at length sat down and began to put a few touches to the portrait. Seeing that he was unconscious of her approach, Matt crept up quietly behind him and took a peep at the picture. Her black eyes dilated with pleasure.

"Oh, ain't it beautiful!" she exclaimed.

"So you have come at last," said Brinkley quietly, going on with his painting.

She made no movement and no further sound; so he continued:

"Perhaps, now you have come, you'll be good enough to step round that I may continue my work. I am longing to refresh my memory with a sight of your face, Matt!"

"Well, you can't," said Matt; "they're locked up!"

"Eh—what's locked up—my memory of your face?"

It was clear Matt could not appreciate banter. She saw him smile, and guessed that he was laughing at her, and her fee grew blck and mutinous. She would have slunk off, but his voice stopped her.

"Come here, Matt," he said. "Don't be silly, child; tell me what's the matter, and—why, what has become of your resplendent raiment—your gorgeous Sunday clothes?"

"Didn't I tell you?—they're locked up."

"Indeed?"

"Yes, William Jones done it because he told him. He don't want me to come here and be took."

"Oh! Tell you what it is, Matt, we will have our own way, in spite of them. For the present this picture shall be put aside. If in a day or so you can again don your Sunday raiment and sit to me again in them—if not, I dare say I shall be able to finish the dress from memory. That portrait I shall give to you. In the meantime, as I want one for myself, I will paint you as you are. Do you approve?"

Matt nodded her head vigorously.

"Very well," said Brinkley. "Then we will get on."

He removed from his easel and carefully covered the portrait upon which he had been working. Then he put up a fresh cardboard, and sat down, inviting Matt to do the same.

With the disappearance of the Sunday clothes the girl's stiffness seemed to have disappeared also, and she became again a veritable child of Nature. She looked like a shaggy young pony fresh from a race on the mountain side, as she threw herself on the ground in an attitude which was all picturesqueness and beauty. Then, with her plump, sunburnt hand, she began to carelessly pull up the grass, while her black eyes searched alternately the prospect and the painter's face.

Presently she spoke:

"He says you're a prying scoundrel," she said.

Brinkley looked up and smiled.

"Who is he, Matt?"

"Mr. Monk," she replied, and gave a jerk with her head in the direction of Monkshurst.

"Oh, indeed," said Brinkley. "It is my amiable equestrian friend, is it? I'm sure I'm much obliged to him. And when, may I ask, did he bore you with his opinion of me?"

"Last night, when he come to see William Jones. He said I wasn't to be took no more, because you was a scoundrel poking and prying."

Brinkley began to whistle, and went on for a while vigorously touching up his work. Then he looked up and regarded the girl curiously.

"Mr. Monk seems to be very much interested in you, Matt?"

The girl nodded her head vigorously; then, remembering the odious caress to which Mr. Monk had subjected her, she began to violently rub her cheek again.

"Why is Mr. Monk so interested in you? Do you know?"

"Perhaps it's because he found me when I come ashore."

"Oh, he found you, did he? Then why don't he keep you?"

"He do, only I live along of William Jones."

Again Brinkley began whistling lightly, and working away vigorously with his brush. Presently the conversation began again.

"Matt, what things did you come ashore in?"

"I dunno!"

"You have never heard whether anything was found with you which might lead to your finding your relations?"

"No; no more has William Jones. He says maybe they'll find me some day and reward him, but Mr. Monk says they were all drownded, and I ain't got no friends except him and William Jones."

"Well, since he found you, I suppose he ought to know; and since you have no relations, Matt, and no claim upon anybody in the world, it was very kind of Mr. Monk to keep you, instead of sending you to the workhouse as he might have done."

On this point Matt seemed rather skeptical.

"Well," continued Brinkley, as he went on lightly touching up his work, "perhaps I have done my equestrian friend a wrong. Perhaps his unamiable exterior belies his real nature; perhaps he is good and kind, generous to the poor, willing to help the helpless—like you, for instance."

"Is it him?" exclaimed Matt; "Monk, of Monkshurst! Why, he don't give nothing to nobody. No fear."

"And yet, according to your own showing, he has helped to support you all these years—you, who have no claim whatever upon him."

This was an enigma to which Matt had no solution. She said no more, but Brinkley, while he continued his painting, silently ruminated thus:

"It strikes me this puzzle would be worth unraveling if I could only find the key. Query, is the young person the key, if I but knew how to use her? Perhaps, since the amiable Monk evidently dislikes my coming into communication with her. But it would be useless to lay the case before her, since, if she is the key, she is quite unconscious of it herself."

He threw down his brush, rose and stretched himself, and said:

"Look here, Matt, I'm tired of work. The sun shining on those sand hills and on the far-off sea is too tempting. I shall go for a walk, and you, if you are in the mood, shall be my guide."

She evidently was in the mood, for she was on her feet in an instant.

"All right, master," she said, "I'll go."

"Very well. Tim, bring forth some refreshment. We will refresh the inner man and girl before we start."

Tim disappeared into the Caravan. Presently he reappeared bearing a small tray, on which was a large jug of milk, some biscuits and a couple of glasses. This he placed on the camp stool, which his master had just vacated, and which, when not in use as a seat, served as a table. Brinkley poured out two glasses of milk.

"Here, take the milk and drink confusion to your enemies!"

Matt took the glass of milk and drank it down. Then Brinkley gave some orders to Tim, and they started off. As they had no particular object in view, they chose the pleasantest route, and clearly the pleasantest lay across the sand hills. Not because the sand hills were pleasant in themselves—they were not, especially on a day when the sun was scorching the roads and making the sea like a mill-pond—but because by crossing the sand hills one came on the other side upon a foot path which led, by various windings, gradually to the top of breezy cliffs.

To the sand hills, therefore, they wended their way. Having gained them, they followed a route which Matt knew full well, and which soon brought them to the narrow foot path beyond. During the walks he was singularly silent, and Brinkley seemed to be busily trying to work out some abstruse problem which had taken possession of his brain.

SANTA CLAUS IN RETROSPECT.

A Fine Old Chap, but He Certainly Does Squeeze Pocket Books.

"As I look back on Santa Claus," said the father of a family, according to the New York Sun, "I find myself inclined to be a little peevish with him; just a little.

"He's a nice old man, with his ruddy face and his side whiskers and his jolly paunch, but he's so insistent, so very insistent. You think you've given him all he wants and all he's going to ask for; then back he comes again for more, always wanting more, and asking it with such a manner, with such gravity and humor that you can't resist.

"This year Santa, or he and his authorized agents, all but broke us. We set aside in our minds three months ago the amount that we thought we could afford to spend this year for Christmas, making the amount, so we thought, more than generous. At any rate it was more than we could afford, and then we cut our cloth for the rest of the year according to that depletion of our finances. It was going to skimp us some, but we were going to pull through all right, and we would have done so if we had been able to get through, according to the original plan; pinched, but all right.

"But, do you know that about a month before Christmas had come we found that our Christmas money had run out? About two-thirds of the things bought and the money had run out. We had to make further appropriations, for of course those other things had to be bought.

"So we scraped up some more Christmas money, skimping in other ways to provide it, and started in buying those other things, sure that this time we would have enough. But did we?

"No. Three days before Christmas in the last grand rally to buy the things we had to have it was discovered that we'd got to have more money. A good many things had cost more than we had expected they would and we had kept thinking of more people to whom we must give, and it all took more money. Money, money, money! But we had to find it, and we did, though as a matter of fact it did crowd us hard. We had expected to be pinched, but now we were squeezed and squeezed dry.

"So much for that mild, benignant, humorous and gentle but at the same time vigorous and persistent and persuasive old man with the white whiskers, Santa Claus. When he had got through with us he left us without a dollar.

"But we were glad to have him come around. Perhaps it is well he doesn't come oftener and I guess he knows that, for he's a wise old chap, as well as kindly; he doesn't draw on us except when he knows we are ready to honor his drafts, and so we are glad to see him when he comes at Christmas time. He prompts us to do many pleasant things that in our selfish hearts we might never have thought of but for him."

The School for Servants.

The manager of an employment agency noted with some surprise that a woman in search of a maid asked each of the girls lined up against the wall if she had ever been employed in a minister's family. None of them had been. Then, the New York Sun says, the manager's curiosity prevailed.

"May I ask," said he, "why you are particularly anxious to know if these girls have had an engagement of that kind?"

"Because we are very hard up just now," the woman replied, candidly, "and I must have a girl who is economical. I have found that of all the servants those who have worked in clergymen's families know best how to economize."

That Settled It.

Half-Back—Didn't you see that fellow strike me?

Official—Yes, and you struck back.

Half-Back—Well, he struck me back first.

Ways of Women

No Excuse for Nagging.

Nobody blames a wife for upholding her self-respect and resenting insult, but there is little sympathy for one who deliberately drives a man to deeds of rudeness and violence. Nagging and indulgence in bad temper leave indelible marks on the face of a woman, on her voice and on her character. They shrivel up whatever sweetness nature has put into her disposition and make her unlovely, even in the eyes of those who feel in duty bound to give her affection. It is often hard to maintain silence under provocation, but there is always the open door of escape, you know. A quarrel does not thrive when fed from one side only, and what should be important to every woman with pretenses to refinement is the undisputed vulgarity of bickering. Education and refinement are supposed to lift us so far above vulgarity that even the hems of our skirts are unstained.

Care of the Face.

Pimples and blackheads are very often the result of a superficial cleansing of the face. Hot water opens the pores and soap cleanses them. For this reason they should both be used every day. Before going to bed the face should be washed thoroughly. This should be followed by an application of cold cream rubbed thoroughly into the skin. What remains on the skin should be rubbed off with a soft cloth. In the morning a thorough rinsing with cold water should follow the bath in warm—not hot—water.

Marry American Wives.

Quite a number of foreign diplomats have American wives, among them being Baron Boncheur, M. Jusserand, Don de Mendonca, Dr. Guzman and others. Mme. Jusserand was Miss Eliza Richards, daughter of the late American banker, George T. Richards, but she was born in Paris. The Duchess d'Arcos was formerly Miss Virginia Lowery of New York. Baroness Moncheur was Miss Clayton, daughter of Powell Clayton.

The Simple Life.

A class of some forty young ladies, mid-winter graduates of a Chicago high school, appeared at the commencement exercises arrayed in costumes prepared by their own hands. The material for their gowns purchased "in lump" cost the wearers $1.88 each. Among the class were daughters of the rich and poor, all dressed alike, both tastily and becomingly. Here was no room for envy or pride nor occasion for poor families to sacrifice necessary comforts to procure a graduating costume for the daughter in order that she might compare favorably with her wealthy asociates. The plan is well worthy of imitation.—Bardolph News.

Medical Maxims.

Easy money—see appendix.

Time waits for no prescription.

The path of physic leads but to the grave.

No operation is without dishonor, except in its own clinic.

Now behold three things: doctoring, nursing and nature; but the greatest of these is nature.

Where there's a pill there's a pay.—Life.

Shred the Eggshells.

Eggshells put into coffee without crushing after the beverage is made don't clear it thoroughly. Wash the eggshell carefully before breaking the egg. In making the coffee shred the shell fine with the fingers and mix with the grounds before pouring on the water. The result is a clear, delicious looking cup with the use of even a small part of the shell.

Reducing Flesh.

Whatever else fashion hints there is not the slightest rumor that flesh is to be stylish in the near future. Therefore women who are not thin are keeping up all kinds of methods to make them so. Live on noodles is the cry. Consequently this diet is strictly kept by women who are willing to sacrifice anything to be thin. The latest remedy, however, is to drink camomile tea without sugar, an hour after eating. This is said to cure the most rebellious case, and turn one of barrel-shaped proportions into sylphlike lines.

New Shoe Styles.

The new fabric shoe is one of the most attractive of the new footwear. They are shown in all the popular shades of cravenetted cloth, with the lowers of the same color but satin striped. No more luxurious shoe could be imagined. The white shoes are to be of linen, canvas and kid, and many will be very high boots, although the white-beaded tie will be popular. Suede in all colors still holds its own. One dainty house slipper in delicate colors has set at one side a bewitching little bow of a matching chiffon.

Two Marks of Beauty.

Beautiful eyes and brows are, in one sense, a special gift of nature. Many a plain woman is redeemed by fine eyes; many a pretty face spoiled by red-rimmed, dull, lusterless eyes. But at the same time a great deal may be done to make even unpromising eyes clear and attractive, to render eyes which are only passably pretty really beautiful.

Toques are still large, broad heavy looking.

Strings are being worn on hats, and tied under the chin.

Newest hats are being extensively trimmed on the right side.

Bandeaux will have little use in the hats planned for spring.

To clean wings, wipe off the dust and then sponge with alcohol.

Toques of straw are being trimmed with fancy rims and feathers.

Flowers dipped into paint or gasoline dyes usually come out like new.

Gasoline cleans ribbons and velvet, or a good cleaning fluid may be used.

A little fan-shaped plaiting of real lace is a great help to the satin and fur hats.

If they are worth it, the petals may be touched with a small camel's hair brush.

Black chip should be wiped off with a soft old silk handkerchief, then rubbed lightly with pure olive oil.

Follow the application with a good pressing on the wrong side, in the case of the ribbon, and steaming for the velvet.

Soiled white chiffon hats may be cleaned by using equal parts of French chalk, magnesia and powdered soap. Cover with the mixture, leave on twenty-four hours, and when brushed off the soiled spots will usually come, too.

Upon Being Ourselves.

How few people there are who ever consider that an acquired manner can be as unbecoming as an ill-chosen frock. Those who are forever recommending womankind to cultivate "individuality" must be responsible for an immense number of misguided women who are wearing the wrong kind of manner with painful complacency. The entire sex ought to be cautioned against dabbling in individualities, and young girls, especially, should be protected strictly from every temptation to part with what little real personality they already possess.

A Spring Drink.

When the lassitude of spring gets into your bones try drinking sassafras tea. This is an old, old remedy beloved of our grandmothers and like many another good home nostrum is all to the good. It purifies the blood, acts as a tonic and makes life worth living, after all. To make the tea buy 5 cents' worth of the root at the druggists, pour a quart of boiling water over as much as will go in the palm of the hand, let it steep until cold drain and drink a small cupful morning and evening.

To Keep Young.

It is every woman's duty to keep young looking as long as possible, but unfortunately she does not always know the best way to live up to that duty.

Avoid worry, hurry and getting flustered.

Learn self-control. Anger is a rapid wrinkle-bringer.

Be temperate. Moderation does not only refer to the stomach. Overdoing in any way makes for premature age.

Love the open air. Fresh air is not a fad, it is a necessity if one would keep young.

Get plenty of sleep. Nothing lines the face like nights of wakefulness.

Keep mentally alert. An intellectual back number adds years to her seeming age. Nothing makes for youth like a young mind save perhaps a young heart.

Don't let yourself get sluggish and indifferent. Here is where the benefit of massage, physical culture and a vital interest in life comes in.

The Wife's Duty.

Mrs. Harriet Johnston Wood, a New York lawyer and woman suffragist, says that any married woman who does not add to her husband's comfort in his home should support herself. She has no right to expect her husband to support her if she is not giving him an equivalent.

The Dregs.

When your cup of happiness is full,
I tell you what to do;
Leave a little in the bottom for
The one that follows you.

EXTREME MODELS IN NEW GOWNS.

REVIEW OF INDIANA

William Jones, aged 35, was fatally crushed by falling slate in Fort Branch mine near Princeton. He was married only a few days ago.

Mrs. Rebecca Davis, of Evansville, scratched her finger on a pin several days ago and blood poisoning developed, which caused her death.

J. H. Welker, a rural mail carrier out of Huntington has been suspended for two weeks without pay for working newspaper subscription business as a "side line."

Mrs. Charles E. Emanuel is a candidate for the postmastership at Auburn to succeed Major A. L. Kuhlman, and her candidacy is said to be meeting with much favor.

The funeral cortege of Crawford Cornwell was leaving Terre Haute for the cemetery across the state line, in Edgar county, Illinois, when a son, Earl, died also from pneumonia. Cornwell's brother died a week ago and Mrs. Berkeman, a sister, who nursed all three, is reported dying from the same disease.

The first wireless telegraph and telephone station in Indiana will be on the roof of the Delaware hotel building in Muncie. A contract has been closed by the Radio Wireless company with T. F. Rose, owner of the hotel building and O. P. Bundy, owner of the hotel, for the installation of a tower on the hotel, and the lease has been signed. It will be installed within a short time.

John Hambaugh, a well-known fisherman, living at Clarksville, below Jeffersonville, is opearting a fish wheel on the falls of the Ohio and his device for catching fish is attracting much attention. The device is similar in appearance to the stern wheel of an ordinary river boat, but the wheel is made of wire and the "buckets" are only placed close to the axle. The wheel throws the fish into the fisherman's boat in large numbers.

There is much activity at the winter quarters of the Hagenbeck & Wallace shows, east of Peru, as the 200 workmen are trimming the wagons, clipping the 500 horses and ponies and getting the various other things in readiness for the opening exhibition, which will be given Saturday, April 24, in Peru. Nearly all the performers have arrived and daily rehearsals are in progress. Hundreds of sightseers visit the winter quarters each day.

A timothy haystack, valued at $50, and owned by Fred Krause, of Columbus, was burned and Mr. Krause places the blame on a flock of hens. He believed that the chickens carried matches to the stack and pecked at them until a blaze was started. In support of this rather remarkable theory farmers say the loss of straw and haystacks is often traced to birds and chickens. They say that a chicken or an ordinary song bird will peck at a parlor match until the match ignites, unles it is too wet, and that a fire can easily result in this manner.

Riley Webb and Willie Haskett indulged in a duel with 22-caliber rifles while out hunting on the farm of Haskett's father, near Aroma. The boys' who are only fifteen years of age, had a disagreement over their marksmanship and Webb whipped his companion. Haskett grabbed his gun as soon as he could get away, ran a short distance and, turning, opened fire. Webb was quick on the trigger and the boys were soon shooting at each other in true border style. Only one of the many bullets took effect and that lodged in the fleshy parts of Webb's left fore arm.

The fact that Harry Prentis Christian was not in the care of his father, Harry E. Christian, at the time of the latter's death in Indianapolis last week may cause him to loose an inheritance of $30,000. He provides that his son should have his property, providing he was in his custody at the time of his death. Christian was divorced from his wife a year ago. The court decided that the boy should spend the school year with her, and he is now in New York. Christian said in his will that if the boy wasn't with him his property should go to his sister, Grace Christian. The son is about 12 years old.

Members of the Washington aerie of Eagles are telling of an unusual incident. James W. O'Brien, who was president of the aerie of Eagles, last week instructed the one whose duty it was to arrange the candelabrum and candles for the Eagle ritual on Sunday, memorial day, and told him to prepare the candelabrum to hold seven candles. "Why," said the man, "there are only six dead brothers." "Oh! That's so" said Mr. O'Brien. A few hours later he had added one more to the list of "absent at roll call," having met a sudden and violent death by falling from the second story window of the opera house building.

Tuesday, April 27th, the South Bend News will be edited by women, in fact every department will be in charge of women. The proceeds go to the Children's Aid society and will be used at the Mishawaka Orphans' Home.

James Shaw, living near Shelbyville, has a killed a heron with a beak four inches in length and a topknot seven inches high. The bird had a yellow breast, shading into blue on the back and head. It has been sent to a taxidermist.

The famed "belled buzzard," of Kentucky, Tennessee and southern Indiana, which has appeared at intervals for the last twenty years, was seen on the farm of John M. Pate near Rising Sun last week.

Mrs. Fred L. Hisgen, forty-one years old, died suddenly of heart disease while seated in a chair at her home in Evansville. Her husband is a brother of Thomas Hisgen, of Massachusetts, who was the nominee of the Independence party for president last fall. Mrs. Hisgen was prominent in church work.

Mrs. Adam Oldfather died at Wabash after suffering for a week from pneumonia. She refused medical attention, being of a religious belief contrary to medicine.

Farmers in the vicinity of Waldron are preparing to plant a larger melon acreage this season. The soil is well adapted to the growth of melons and farmers clear $90 to $125 an acre.

At a recent meeting of the Linton city council, it was ruled that women's card games, where prizes were played for, were gambling, and that they must be stopped. This is rather hard on the clubs of the city which put in their time playing cards.

The Fort Wayne & Wabash Valley Traction company has closed a lease, under which the Proctor-Bulger-Franklin Amusement company of Viroqua, Wis., will operate Robison park this season. The company also announces a reduction of the fare to the park.

Efforts are being made to interest the land-owners along the National road west of Greenfield in a petition to have the road between that city and the Marion county line macadamized. This has been done from Cumberland west, and it is proposed to close the gap between there and Main street, which is paved with brick.

When digging his potatoes late last fall, Melvin Miller, northeast of Morocco, left two rows, intending to dig them after. A sudden freeze came and thinking that the potatoes were ruined he paid no further attention to them. Recently while plowing the patch he turned up the two rows and was surprised to find the potatoes sound, only a few being frost-bitten.

J. F. W. Meyer, who for more than fifty years has been a druggist in Fort Wayne, is wealthy, but he is now $1 better off because of some woman's troubled conscience. She sent him $1, saying it was to right a wrong done twenty years ago. Meyer's accounts of twenty years ago show that there are so many others that still owe him $1 that he expresses the wish that other "conciences" may become troubled.

The county commissioners have signed the order for a new court house for Boone county and will meet soon to arrange for preliminary expenses. The commissioners intend to ask later for an appropriation of $250,000 for the building itself. A committee of three will be apointed to act with the board as an advisory committee, and thees six men will have complete charge of the building of the new court house.

A flash of lightning at Columbus frightened a horse which was hitched to a delivery wagon for the Geilker bakery and the animal ran away. It dodged everybody who tried to stop it and finally entered the city cemetery by an open gate. Taking the various driveways in the cemetery the horse continued to run until the wagon caught on a monument and held. Bread and pies as well as cakes and doughnuts were strewn all over the cemetery.

A farmer at 5:30 o'clock one morning last week telephoned to Marshal Wenholdt, of Huntingburg, that he had seen an escaped convict running past his house as fast as his legs would carry him. Then another telephoned, and another, and still another. Marshal Wenholdt started in pursuit in a buggy, and, after driving three miles, overtook the "escaped convict." Frank Seubold, whose parents live in Huntingburg, has been attending a physical culture school, and is home for a visit with his parents. He was out taking his morning exercise and he wore a striped running suit.

C. M. Keller and F. P. Brockman, capitalists, have recently purchased a tract of land at the foot of Fourth street in Columbus, bordering on White river, and now that they own it they are at a loss to tell where their property lines begin and end. An inspection of the old deed for the property states that the survey begins "at a point on Brown street," but neglects to name the point. Then the survey goes to "a sycamore stump," the next stopping place is "a huckberry tree" and in another direction the property line continues to "a redbud bush." The new owners have survey goes to "a sycamore stump," huckberry tree and a redbud bush.

Mrs. Mary Wilson, of Fairmount, has the distinction of belonging to a family which numbers among its members four brothers and sisters who have passed their eightieth milestone. Mrs. Wilson herself being eighty-six. Next in point of age is "Aunt" Sallie Newby, who lives alone on her farm north of Fairmont. She is eighty-four. Benoni Hill, who lives at Hesper, Kas., is eighty-two, and Joseph Hill, of Jonesboro, recently observed his 80th birthday anniversary. These four octogenarians belong to one of the pioneer families of Grantt county, and their history is the history of the county.

C. B. Woodworth, former member of the State Pharmaceutical board, is critically ill of rheumatism, which it is feared may affect his heart action. He has been a leading druggist in Fort Wayne for more than thirty years.

Joseph S. Miller, ex-sheriff of Boone county, and one of the best-known horse buyers in Indiana, fell dead of heart disease at his home west of Lebanon last week. He was fifty-two years old and leaves a widow and two daughters.

Scarlet fever and smallpox, which it was thought had been sucessfully checked some time ago, has broken out in Delphi afresh and is now almost in an epidemic form. The public schools have been closed on account of the numerous cases of scarlet fever.

State authorities have granted the request of Whitley county sportsmen for permission to seine the lakes of that county and remove gars, dogfish and carp. The work will be done within a short time under the supervision of Andrew Vandeford, deputy fish and game warden.

We're Proud to Offer These Clothes—$10 to $25

Only the leading firms in each city are allowed to handle CLOTHCRAFT CLOTHES.

If you know as well as we do, how good these clothes are, you understand why we are so proud to be the firm in this city and to announce the new CLOTHCRAFT styles for Spring.

No other line of clothes is so eagerly competed for by dealers.

Because, after all, wise dealers want to give the best values they can to their customers.

They know as well as you do that honesty is the best policy.

Clothcraft Clothes

So Much for So Little

But we didn't decide to handle CLOTHCRAFT till we knew from top to bottom just what these clothes are and just how they compare with others.

The thing we wanted to know was how they could be so good and yet sell for so little.

For CLOTHCRAFT CLOTHES have the very best style, and their pure wool and fine tailoring are guaranteed. And yet the prices are only $10 to $25.

We Investigated

When we investigated, this is what we found:

An organization that eliminates waste. The most wonderful and up to date clothing factory in America. A factory system and marvelous processes that save on cost without any reduction in value. An output so big that an immense saving is made in the purchase of materials.

And we found that the savings thus made were what paid for the better woolens and better tailoring in CLOTHCRAFT CLOTHES.

Thus we proved to ourselves how these clothes can be at once so good and so low priced.

And thus we became more proud than ever to offer CLOTHCRAFT to you.

Now we want you to see these astonishing clothes. We wish you would come today.

Gity Council Proceedings

The council met in adjourned session on Monday evening, April 12, 1909, with all members present.

Letters from Coal Co., Paving Co. and from J. E. Sturgis were read and placed on file.

The clerk was directed to notify Mr. Sturgis that he could not use the hall for band purposes.

Moved and seconded that the resignation of C. J. Coats as city attorney be accepted. Carried.

Councilman Hoffman reported that the committee had purchased 4,000 pounds lead pipe with the privilege of 4,000 pounds more at the same price, 4¾c per pound, if taken by June 15, 1909, and said purchase was ratified by council.

A remonstrance against paving Depot street was read and placed on file.

Moved and secondad that the paving project shall include Broadway street from the Wabash depot to the north line of lot No 5 in Lingenfelter's addition, and Main street from east corporation line to west corporation line. Carried.

Moved and seconded that the city clerk draw an ordinance requiring property owners having lots or parts of lots abutting on Broadway, Main, Oak and Depot streets to put the house slants and water connections to the lot line of their respective lots. Carried.

E. C. Murphy reported that the cost of making extensions to the water main on North and South Broadway streets would be about 60 cents a foot.

Obituary

David McDonald, son of John and Mary McDonald, was born in Tuscarawas county, Ohio, Aug. 16, 1834, departed this life at his late home in Butler, Ind., April 10, 1909, after an illness of more than two years, at the age of 75 years, 7 months and 24 days.

He was united in marriage to Jane Zeigler, Feb. 26, 1858. To them were born one son and one daughter. He was a soldier of the Civil war, enlisted in Co. H. of the 197th Ohio, April 5, 1865, and received an honorable discharge, Aug. 8, 1865. He was at one time a member of the Zion U. B. church, and during the closing months of his life gave evidence of his peace with God. Mr. McDonald was the last surviving member of his father's family of six children.

He leaves to mourn his departure an aged companion who has toiled with him in the battles of life for more than a half century, also one son, one daughter, six grand children, one great grand child and a large circle of relatives and acquaintances.

The funeral was held from the late home, Monday forenoon, conducted by Rev. O. B. Wells. Interment at the Eddy cemetery north the city.

Use Butler flour.

Grandma Huntington fell down cellar last Saturday evening, cutting her head and hand and bruising her body badly. At this writing she is doing as well as can be expected.

Mrs. George King went to the hospital at Garrett, Tuesday, and will have an operation performed some time during this week. Her daughter, Mrs. Strawser, of Garrett, who has been with her mother, accompanied her to the hospital.

Mrs. Frank Fifer, of Hamilton, returned home Monday after a week's visit with relatives at this place.

H. E. Huntington and wife and Mahala Huntington, of Butler, spent Saturday and Sunday with relatives in this vicinity.

Miss Grace Walker, who has been working for Mrs. Geo. Wagner the past year is visiting friends this week before going to her home at Edgerton.

Miss Zella and Master Boyd Huntington were visiting at Butler the latter part of last week.

Freeman Fifer and wife entertained at dinner, Sunday, F. A. Huntington, wife and daughter, Esther, Clem Mitchell and wife and Grandpa Oberlin.

Bert Rose lost a horse last Sunday morning. Mr. Higley had a horse sick with the same disease, but has recovered. Dr. Hiner was busy caring for three sick horses at once Saturday night.

Mrs. Lewis Wagner is improving in health at present.

B. F. Firestone and wife and Chas. Ratts and wife spent Easter with James Firestone and wife, near Edgerton.

Mr. Mark, of near Auburn, spent last Friday with his daughter, Mrs. Burr Imhof.

Mrs. Ethel Fifer spent a few days this week with her mother.

Weston in Butler

Edward Payson Weston, the celebrated pedestrian, arrived in town Tuesday evening at 7:10, having been just two hours on the road from Edgerton, Ohio.

A crowd of several hundred people greeted the old man at the corner of Main and Broadway and followed him to the Waverly hotel where he was entertained at supper. Mr. Weston ate some toast and drank some milk and two cups of tea. After a brief rest he started for Waterloo.

Weston has passed his 71st birthday, but still remains a wonderful character. He is traveling a distance of 4,500 miles from New York to San Francisco, and expects to make the trip in one hundred days.

Two years ago he passed through Butler on a trip from Portland, Maine, to Chicago, and over forty years ago he visited Butler on a tramp of similar nature. When he struck the city Tuesday night he seemed to be in a feeble condition and staggered up the street like a man who was "all in."

Mr. William Fetter was taken to the Fort Wayne hospital last Saturday night to undergo an operation for appendicitis. The operation was performed Monday, and Dr. Acker, his attending physician, reports him recovering nicely.

O. E. Hamilton and Arthur Haley closed a meeting at Herington, Kansas, last week with 122 additions. From there they went to Fort Scott, Kansas, where they expect to have a great meeting. Mr. Haley has joined forces with Evangelist Hamilton and will be in the west for the next two months, going to Port Arthur, Canada, in June.

YOUNG MEN WANTED

United States Government Railway Mail Clerks $800 to $1200 a Year---Last Notification

Uncle Sam will hold an examination for railway mail clerks in the vicinity of Butler and throughout the United States on May 15. Many ambitious young men, with only a very ordinary school education, can readily pass. The government wants young men over 18 with common sense, to take examinations for railway mail clerks and carriers, and the Government Positions Bureau, of Rochester, N. Y, with its peculiar knowledge of the requirements of the examinations, can fit any young man in a short time to pass. A government position means steady work, good pay, and a yearly vacation. There is time to prepare for the May 15 examinations, and any reader of the HERALD can get full information how to proceed, free of charge, by writing The Government Positions Bureau, 1224 Powers Block, Rochester N. Y., who also prepare men for examinations for postoffice clerks, clerk carriers and rural free delivery carriers. 14-2

A Centennial Event

The Christian church (Disciples of Christ) celebrate what is known as their one hundredth anniversary at Pittsburg, Pa., October 11-19, next. It was near there, at Washington, Pa., that Thomas Campbell published a document known as the "Declaration and Address" in the autumn of 1809, which has become historic. The principles embraced in this document led to a movement that has resulted in the existence of the "Christian church," which now numbers, with six thousand ministers about forty schools and colleges, etc It is a growing church and is one of the most aggressive religious bodies in all the world.

The Christian church has missions in Japan, China, India, Hawaii, Cuba, Africa, Norway, Sweden and Denmark. It has one hundred and sixty American missionaries in these countries, and an army of more than five hundred native preachers and helpers. The church conducts eighteen hospitals in foreign lands, and last year treated more than one hundred and twenty-seven thousand patients. Sixty-two schools and colleges were supported, with an attendance of nearly four thousand. And besides, it feeds and clothes and houses and educates more than four hundred orphans. The membership in these lands now numbers more than ten thousand, and the value of property is about five hundred thousand dollars.

It is believed that two millions of dollars will be raised for all missions and benevolences before the year closes. This is the mark that has been set.

The gathering in Pittsburg in October will doubtless be the greatest religious event in modern times. Halls are being provided to seat no less than thirty thousand people at one time. Fully fifty thousand delegates are expected to be present, perhaps more. There will be representatives from England, Scotland, Scandinavia, Australia, Japan, and perhaps other countries. Altogether, there will be about three hundred speakers during the centennial celebration. They will be among the leading thinkers and orators of the country. Eminent scholars, financiers, politicians and men in all the walks of life will be in attendance.

Don't Be a Knocker

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

If there is any chance to boom business, boom it. Don't pull a long face and drop as though you had a sour stomach, hold up your head, smile and look for better things. Hide your little hammer, and try to speak well of others, no matter how small you really know yourself to be. When a stranger drops in, jolly him. Tell him this is the greatest town on earth—and it is. Don't discourage him by speaking of your neighbors. Lead him to believe he has at last struck a place where white people live. Don't knock.

Help yourself along by becoming popular and push your friends with you. It's dead easy. Be a good fellow and soon you'll have a procession of followers. No man ever helped himself by knocking other people down in character and business. No man ever got rich by trying to make others believe he was the only man in town, or the only man in town who knew anything. You can't climb the ladder of success by treading on others corns. Keep off the corns and don't knock.

You're not the only. There are others, and they have brains and know something as well as you. There's no end of fun minding your own business. It makes other people like you. Nobody gets stuck on a knocker. Don't be one, or two. Be good and if you are in arrears for subscription to the HERALD pay up and renew. If you are not a subscriber lose no time, but become one at once.

Waterloo

Use Butler flour.

Lisle Smith came home from Oberlin, Ohio, last week to look after business affairs during his spring vacation.

G. T. Abbey has so far recovered as to be able to get down town.

Waldo Montavon has returned from Toledo after an extended stay in that city.

Harry Bowman left last week for West Unity, Ohio, where he took charge of the electric light plant.

Mrs. Abbey Barnhart sold the Central House last week to Richard Fee and wife.

Lodi Lochner has accepted a position in J. C. Day's hardware store.

John Duncan, Jr., and family, of Toledo, are visiting with their parents in Waterloo this week.

Edward Highn, who has been at work in Studebaker's factory at South Bend came home Saturday for a few days lay off on account of a lacerated hand.

Wm. Ogle is reported as improving, and if no complications set in he will recover.

W. J. Nodine and family spent several days at Montpelier, Ind., the latter part of the week with relatives.

Mrs. S. B. Lingenfelter left Wednesday for the east.

Robert Lingenfelter, who has been visiting at the home of E. G. Flack, left for Toledo Monday.

Mrs. Bert Flack gave a baby party Wednesday evening in honor of her little son, Ronald's first birthday.

Ed Gengnagel will make extensive repairs and additions on his residence.

"Women Could Get Along"

When in defending his tariff bill Mr. Payne was trying to find excuses for raising the duty on women's gloves to $4 a dozen, with an extra fine for extra lengths, he said:

Women could get along without the kid gloves or fewer pairs of them, use silk gloves and cotton gloves and all that sort of thing. They could keep their hands warm, although they could not cover their pride.

Could they? Wool is a good material for keeping the hands warm; on knit goods of wool a woman will pay from 33 cents a pound duty up to 44 cents a pound and 55 per cent ad valorem; if she tries to economize by knitting her own gloves and mittens she will pay from 27½ cents a pound and 25 per cent added up to 38½ cents and 40 per cent.

Cotton gloves, Mr. Payne, would not satisfactorily warm either the hands or the pride, but they are not too poor to pay tribute. Silk looks better, but silk yarn is to pay 30 per cent; spun silk in skeins from 20 cents a pound and 15 per cent up to 60 cents and 15 per cent. The knitting needles pay 25 per cent.

Probably Mr. Payne would not speak of stockings as a luxury to "cover women's pride," though you cannot always tell what a man will say when away from home influences and trying to explain a tariff bill. Of the stocking tariff Marshall Field & Co., in a circular say:

A group of hosiery manufacturers have received a 20 per cent increase over the 60 per cent rate, making a total of 80 per cent against foreign goods. This would exclude all foreign 25-cent hosiery and would enable domestic manufacturers to raise their prices proportionally.

Women have been "getting along without" because of increased cost of living for some years, and they are tired of it. Such taxes are not merely protective but are almost prohibitive. They do not mean revenue for the government but privation for the consumer and plunder for combining manufacturers.

Reduce the cost of living. Tax wealth, not poverty.

Wedding Bells

A quiet wedding was held at the home of Culla Hanna, in south Butler, Saturday evening, at 7:30 p. m. The contracting parties were Mr. David E. McClellan and Miss Eldora Jennings. Rev. O. B. Wells, in his usual quiet way, performed the ceremony and pronounced them husband and wife.

Mr. McClellan is a native of Troy township and is well and favorably known in this city and highly respected in his home community.

Mrs. Jennings McClellan is a daughter of William Jennings, of Troy township, a lady of splendid deportment and in every way fitted for a companion to the man that wooed her.

They will take up housekeeping on his farm in the Zion neighborhood near the old McClellan home, where they will be at home to their many friends.

Judge Raps Financiers

James Finley, seventeen, was arraigned before Magistrate Crane in the Morrisania court at New York charged with stealing six cents worth of coal from the railroad yards at Mott Haven. The widowed mother of the boy said he went after the coal because it was cold in their home. She and her children, she said, were on the verge of starvation.

The magistrate, apparently affected by the pitiful case of need, discharged the boy, remarking:

"Young man, I am going to discharge you; but I want to tell you something. If you want to steal, wait until you are president of a railroad. Then you can steal anything you want and have no fear of punishment. Until then you must never look at a railroad car, or you might be arrested."

How much is a gallon of paint worth?

Depends on the paint.

The trouble is, paint isn't always paint; there are true and false, paints, and short-measure paints.

How much is a short-measure gallon worth? How much is false paint worth? How much is Devoe Lead-and-Zinc Paint worth?

It is a full gallon; it is all paint, and strong paint, and nothing but paint. It goes farther and lasts longer than any other. Geo. W. Geddes, Agt.

WORTHY OF CONFIDENCE

An Offer Backed Up By One of the Most Reputable Concerns in Butler

We will either cure you of constipation or pay for all the medicine used during the trial. You pay us nothing if we fail. That's a mighty broad statement, and we mean every word of it. We will back it up with our own personal reputation, too. Could anything be more fair and secure for you.

The most scientific, common sense treatment is Rexall Orderlies. Their active principle is a very recent scientific discovery that is odorless, colorless and tasteless; very pronounced, gentle and pleasant in action, and particularly agreeable in every way. This ingredient does not cause any diarrhoea nausea, flatulence or griping. Rexall Orderlies are as pleasant to take as candy and are particularly good for children and delicate persons.

If you suffer from chronic or habitual constipation, or the associate or dependent chronic ailments, we urge you to try Rexall Orderlies at our risk. Remember, you can only get them at our stores. 36 tablets 25c and 12 tablets 10c. The Geo. W. Geddes Drug Store, West Side Broadway, Butler, Ind. It

Inheritance Taxes

The question has been raised whether the national government should pass an inheritance tax law or leave that source of revenue to the states. Many states already have such a law. Indiana would now have one if the republican senate had passed the inheritance tax bill passed by the democratic house at the late session of the legislature The weight of opinion seems to be that the national government should avail itself of an income tax and leave inheritances to be assessed by the states. Perhaps the strongest argument in favor of the general government taxing inheritances is the congestion in a few centers of enormous wealth drawn from all parts of the country. A general tax would reach such "swollen fortunes" for the benefit of all who, in one way or other, had contributed to them. But there is no doubt about the right of the states to assess inheritances and the bill approved by the democrats of the house at the recent session of the legislature was a well drawn measure, which would have been effective as a revenue producer.

District Meeting of Clubs

The first district meeting of the clubs of this, the 12th congressional district, will be held in the assembly room of the court house in Fort Wayne on Wednesday, April 21. Every club member in the district is specially invited to be present. The meeting will consist of two sessions, the morning session convening at 10:30 and the afternoon at 1:30 Dr. Lida Leasure, of Auburn, will give the principal address of the convention. Mrs. W. S. Major, of Shelbyville, president of the Indiana State Federation of Clubs, and Mrs. O. P. Kinsey, of Valparaiso, past president, are expected to be present and give practical talks; also other officers of the state organization will be present. Mrs. J. E. Buchanan, of Auburn, is district chairman.

Subscribers who fail to receive the HERALD regularly each week please notify this office. Don't be bashful, but let us know at once. The paper is printed Thursday afternoon and ought to reach you at least by Friday.

Michael H. Cain, of Indianapolis, has been appointed by Governor Marshall as chief engineer of the state house. Although Governor Marshall is in New York, a commission was issued to Cain in accordance with instructions left with the governor's secretary. Cain will have to make the same fight for the position that Thomas F. Colbert will have to make for the position of custodian. The governor's right to make the appointments is questioned by Auditor of State Billheimer and Secretary of State Sims.

April installment of the sewer tax is now due. Payment can be made to treasurer at Knisely Bros. & Co.'s bank from April 19 to May 1, '09. 8 a. m. to 3 p. m.

Five Years

of Heart Trouble Cured by Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy

"Before I began taking Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy I had been suffering from heart trouble for over five years. I had pains in my left side, and under my shoulder blade, could not sleep on the left side, and was so short of breath the least exertion would bring on the most distressing palpitation. I had scarcely taken a half bottle of the Heart Remedy before I could see a marked change in my condition. When I had taken six bottles I was cured."

MRS. C. C. GORKEY,
Northfield, Va.

If there is fluttering or palpitation it is an indication of a weakness of the nerves and muscles of the heart. It is not necessarily diseased—just weak from over-work. The heart may be weak just the same as the eyes, stomach or other organs. You can make a weak heart strong by taking Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy. Get a bottle from your druggist, take it according to directions, and if it does not benefit he will return your money.

Fortunes are Being Made Near La Junta, Colorado, on Irrigated Lands

How would you like to live in a country where high taxes, high rentals, cold winters, late springs, frequent drouth in summer, floods when you don't want them, high cost of fertilizing worn out soil, unfair benefits assessed for ditching and drainage, uncertainty of prices of your products, etc., are unknown? La Junta, Col., is the place, where the climate is beautiful, mild cultured, sun shiny, late falls, early springs, where you do not have to build expensive barns, where you do not have to tile your land, have fine roads, good schools and churches.

It is the place where 40 acres can be made to yield more profit than 200 acres of the best land in DeKalb county with much less work, where Otero Irrigation Canal afforps you water for your crops when you nee it, and as much as you need, where the climate and the sunshine does the rest, where you can get three crops of alfalfa and a crop of seed, averaging from 3 to 5 tons each cutting, and sells for from $6 to $12 per ton and the seed brings from $20 to $60 per acre. Take a pencil and figure out, if you will, what 40 acres of alfalfa will pay you in one season. These figures are not exagerated by any means and can be easily proven. Where you do not have to replant your seed on account of worms, insects, etc., as there are absolutely none there, where the fruit industry cannot be beaten in the world, the large red apples you see in your store windows came from these orchards. The following from Senator Jack Crowley, one of the most influential and best known men in the west, will give you a good idea of what can be done in the fruit culture:

Senator Jack Crowley took 850 pounds of peaches from one ten year old peach tree and sold the fruit at 6 cents per pound. Two trees netted $99. Eight of these peaches weighed 8 pounds. Mr. Crowley has 80 acres in orchard and has made a profound study of fruit-raising. His 25 acre apple orchard under the Otero Canal is the finest in Colorado. He keeps books on his orchard and has some interesting records. For instance, a four year old cherry tree yielded 45 quarts; at 5 years, 73 quarts; at 6 years, 104 quarts; at 7 years, 123 quarts, and 8 years, 145 quarts. These cherries sold at an average of $400 per acre when four years old; $800 when five years old, and $600 when six years old. Grapes begin bearing in the second year after setting the vines and come into full bearing in the third year; they net about $200 per acre. Senator Crowley says that the soil here will produce larger apples and of better quality than in any other part of the state. He sold his last apple crop for $15,600.

The following from Mr. David Bole, who has resided near La Junta for eleven years and during this time has made a fortune. Came here comparatively a poor man, now owns 160 acre farm. David Bole raised this year 2300 bushels of wheat on 40 acres, and sold it at 86 cents per bushel.

Mr. C. G. Fullmer came here six years ago without any capital whatever, and now owns, among other things, 20 acres of fine land that yields him an annual income of $2,500. Last year he raised 32 tons of beets to the acre, and in addition to the $5 per ton for the beets sold the tops for $35 per acre. This year he had seven acres of cantaloupes and sold a part of the seed for $1,507.50.

R. N. Harris, two years ago, sold his beet crop at a price that netted him $219.02 per acre.

"Less than four years ago," Mr. Thomas J. Fuller says, "I bought twenty acres at $65 an acre. From nine acres of cantaloupes planted the first year, I earned more than the entire cost of the farm, and from the other eleven acres received enough to pay for my house. Have averaged in profits $1,200 per year, and have frequently refused $175 per acre for my land. Came to Colorado from Illinois, but have never written to my friends back there what my twenty acres are earning for fear they would not believe me. A small tract well farmed, is much better than a large place."

From 90 to 105 bushels of oats per acre are not uncommon.

Mr. Ed Woods, this summer planted one acre in cantaloupes from which he realized a net profit of $355.30.

Mr. Walter Heines rented ten acres of the Colorado State Farm between La Junta and Rocky Ford. He planted five acres in cantaloupes which yielded him $1,988.00 clear profit.

Mr. Chas. Gibeson shipped 1500 crates of melons from five acres, and for his early melons received $5.00 per crate.

Instances of this kind could be cited by the hundred. They simply serve to illustrate the enormous earnings from a small acreage.

New land produces the very finest melons. The producers need not wait for years, while fruit trees are coming to the bearing stage, but from cantaloupes and market gardening can easily earn from $100.00 to $500.00 per acre on the tracts adjacent to La Junta.

The foregoing statements are made by reputable farmers who have no land for sale and would have no object in misrepresenting conditions. Space will not allow a full description of these lands, for you see the owner of this paper insists on my paying so much per line for this article and I find am using "some space." I have just returned from La Junta where I have spent some time investigating and would be glad to have you call on me and let me tell you more about the country. Now is the time for you to become emancipated from the long hours in shop, office or store, no bosses, no petty injustices, no health, health-shattering employment and surroundings.

How would you like to be free? Be your own master, own your own farm, where nature works 24 hours in the day every day in the year, where your home is your workshop, when your family are your partners, a bright, beautiful, healthy out door life that makes your muscles firm, your face aglow, your eyes sparkle, your heart full of joy and thankfulness?

Come to my office and talk it over or phone me and I will call on you. Join us on our next excursion, Tuesday, April 6, or the one two weeks later. The expenses will be very little, and if you buy your expenses will be paid both ways. The whole amount paid for your land will be refunded if you become dissatisfied after one year. For further information or descriptive circulars call on me at my office. Interesting descriptive books can also be secured at the HERALD office.

Eat What

You want of the food you need Kodol will digest it.

You need a sufficient amount of good wholesome food and more than this you need to fully digest it.

Else you can't gain strength, nor can you strengthen your stomach if it is weak.

You must eat in order to live and maintain strength.

You must not diet, because the body requires that you eat a sufficient amount of food regularly.

But this food must be digested, and it must be digested thoroughly.

When the stomach can't do it, you must take something that will help the stomach.

The proper way to do is to eat what you want, and let Kodol digest the food.

Nothing else can do this. When the stomach is weak it needs help; you must help it by giving it rest, and Kodol will do that.

Our Guarantee

Go to your druggist today, and purchase a dollar bottle, and if you can honestly say, that you did not receive any benefits from it, after using the entire bottle, the druggist will refund your money to you without question or delay.

We will pay the druggist the price of the bottle purchased by you.

This offer applies to the large bottle only and to but one in a family.

We could not afford to make such an offer, unless we positively knew what Kodol will do for you.

It would bankrupt us.

The dollar bottle contains 2½ times as much as the fifty cent bottle.

The warning is a timely one and the saloonkeepers will have no one to blame but themselves if they lose the support of the men who were instrumental in saving their business for them.

During the year 1908, so figures collected by the state bureau of statistics show, 2,814 fewer couples—or 5,628 fewer persons—obtained licenses to marry than did in the year 1907. Almost 3,000 more marriage ceremonies performed in the year 1907, than during last year. Not only that—there were 120 more divorces in 1908, than in 1907. Eighteen more wives got divorces and 102 more husbands did the same, the total number being 4,253, less than one-sixth of the total number of marriages—26,990. Some disreputable cur has been peeping into widows of Butler residences the past few nights. A load of shot planted where it would do the most good would be about the proper punishment for this crime. Get busy with the shot guns.

T. E Simon will soon remodel his billiard and pool room, and expects to have a place that will far discount all his previous efforts. Mr. Simon is an ingenious fellow and when he attempts a novel feature he always succeeds. His spring opening will be a great feature of the season.

Since the adjournment of the North Indiana M. E. conference, another change has occurred in pastors in the Fort Wayne district. Rev. C. J. Graves, assigned to New Haven, will go to Geneva instead, and Rev. C. King, originally appointed to Geneva, will take the New Haven church.

The Grant county circuit court has issued an order for the property of W. B. Westlake to be sold at sheriff's sale. Mr. Westlake owned several newspapers, including the Hoosier, published at Indianapolis, which has not been coming to subscribers of late. His principal paper is the Marion Leader.

Charles Evans, who lived in Jackson township, this county, was found dead in bed, Saturday morning, by his wife. Mr. Evans had been ailing for three or four years with heart trouble, and for the past few weeks was in a serious condition. Saturday morning Mrs. Evans heard her husband cough and went at once to his bedroom where she found him dead. The body was taken to Auburn where an inquest was held, Dr. Harrison acting as coroner for Fred Briggs who was ill. The remains were shipped to Piqua, Ohio, for burial.

Charles Sefrit is editor of the Washington (Ind) Herald and he is apparently not in the odor of sanctity as sanctity runs in Washington. Last Sunday the Rev. Mr. Davidson preached a sermon on the subject, "Hell and Charles Sefrit," and this excellent divine has since been arrested for bamboozling one of the ewe-lambs of his flock into a bogus and secret marriage down in St. Louis says an exchange. And now we have the enlivening spectacle of Mr. Sefrit standing outside the glass house with his sleeves rolled up and a couple of nice, big loads of cobble-stones right at hand. Some men were just naturally born lucky. The preacher has left for other parts. He deserves a coat of tar and feathers.

The bowling alley man has left town, business not warranting a longer stay in Butler.

Traveling grocery peddlers as well as others should not be encouraged by Butler people. Give your patronage to the home merchants every time. Doubtless they have accommodated you in times past and you should stand by them.

I want to buy a farm, from one to six miles from Butler. If you want to sell send me a full and complete description with lowest price and best terms. Give location so I can look it over. I mean business. (No attention paid to agents.) Address 475 care Herald Office, Butler, Ind. tf

Indications are that the price of bread will be increased. Wheat has reached a very high figure and this will doubtless bring about the advance. Conditions in this country are peculiar. With many thousands of idle men, wages are at a low scale, the price of living is still advancing. The laboring man in Butler, as well as elsewhere, is getting it in the neck.

James W. Anderson, former Montpelier saloonkeeper charged with violation of the county option law, was found guilty in common pleas court of Williams county, by Judge John M. Killits Tuesday, and fined $75 and costs. The case against Anderson was heard by the court, no jury being required by the search and seizure law. Mr Anderson was released under a $300 bond pending prosecution in error, as the case will be taken to the circuit court.

Mrs. G. B. Jones, of Garrett, has presented to the North Indiana conference of the Methodist Episcopal church a house and lot in that city which will be sold and the money donated to the Old Folks Home at Warren, Ind. During the Fort Wayne district conference at Auburn a few weeks ago it was stated that $1,000 had been donated by a DeKalb lady, and it now developes that the donor resides at Garrett. The house and lot is valued at $1,000.

Butler physicians are very much disturbed at the increasing number of reputable citizens who appeal to them for prescription that contain liquor and strange as it may seem the remedy is not for themselves but for some member of their family. The situation is becoming so acute that the doctors have agreed among them to cut out all that line of trade. The medical state board has revoked the license of a large number of physicians in this state for doing that same kind of business. Pleasant Lake has a physician whose license was taken from him for this identical cause.—Waterloo Dawn.

Thinking that he would embarrass Governor Marshall by furnishing alleged evidence that there was gambling at French Lick, Attorney General Bingham sent to him a card indicating that a part of the program of the Colonial club there would be keno. He stated that he did not know whether the governor would be interested, but that he might do as he pleased. He then informed the reporters that the governor had all the information. When interviewed Mr. Marshall said that he had told the attorney general that as soon as he gave him the name of his informant the prosecutor of Orange county would be furnished with the evidence and the names of those who had given it, and that if he did not do his duty then the governor would take action.

Was Your Ancestor and Mine Been Found at Last?

SHOWN BY THE DEVELOPMENT THREE STAGES IN EVOLUTION, AS OF THE SKULL.

Skull of Man of To-Day. Skull Found Recently. Skull of Man-Like Ape.

SCIENTISTS have been digging in the caves and buried cities of the earth for years in an effort to discover the facts about the beginning of the human race. In France they recently made a discovery that comes nearer to proving that man has climbed by slow stages up from lower animal forms than any discoveries previously made. They have found a skull, part of the skeleton and some of the implements of a primitive man estimated to have lived 400,000 years ago—a man of lower type than any that has been discovered before, nearer like human beings of to-day than like the highest species of apes of to-day. This discovery still leaves many "missing links" to be found before the chain of evidence proving man's descent—or ascent—from the ape shall be complete; but it is the greatest step in that direction taken in a generation.

Years ago an American poet named John Greenleaf Whittier wrote a poem beginning:

"I am. How little more I know!
Whence came I? Whither do I go?"

In that second line he asked the two questions that have chiefly concerned the minds of thinking men since men became sufficiently developed to think at all.

Not much progress has been made in answering in any scientific way the second question—the "Whither do I go?"—though belief in a hereafter, a future life, at least for the souls or the spirits of men, is almost universal and has been in all ages.

Toward answering the other question—the "Whence came I?"—greater progress has been made by science. The story of the creation, in Genesis, which pictured the first man as having been made by the Deity, scraping together the dust of the earth and molding it into the image of Himself, and breathing into its nostrils the breath of life, once believed literally throughout Christendom, is now regarded, even by the majority of Christians and Bible students, as an allegory.

Search for the "Missing Link."

Darwin, about fifty years ago, wrote the "Origin of Species," tracing man's ancestry back to the monkey or ape. At that time the chain of connection between the lowest known types of man and the highest known types of apes was not complete. There was a "missing link," for which science has been searching.

Various discoveries made since Darwin's book was written have come nearer to filling the gap in the chain. The discovery of the skull and other remnants of a skeleton of a primitive man, just made at La Chapelle-aux-Saints, in France, is the latest of these, and is regarded as the strongest evidence yet found in support of the theory of evolution—the idea that human beings are the result of a long and slow development upward from the lower forms of life. The discovery at La Chapelle-aux-Saints consisted of a prehistoric skull, which has been declared to be the most ancient in the world, that has been found nearly complete, although it was in pieces. The fragments were submitted to the eminent French archæologist, M. Marcellin Boule, director of the Laboratory of Paleontology of the Paris Museum, who was able to reconstruct it with the utmost exactitude. It may be useful to mention here some of the previous results obtained in paleontology. The last very incomplete fossils unearthed during the last century have proved very little.

The first in date is the skull of Neanderthal, discovered in Germany in 1856, a few years before the issue of Darwin's famous work on "The Origin of Species." Of the skull there remained only the cranium, very much flattened, with the eyebrow arches almost as developed as those of anthropoid apes; the face was missing. According to Virchow, it was the skull of a sick man; others said it was that of an idiot. Thirty years later, in 1886, tow professors of Liege, Fraipont, and Hohest, discovered at Spy, in Belgium, two skulls similar to the preceding, and accompanied by the fragments of a skeleton. These fragments suggested bipeds able to adopt a crouching attitude. Two points only were established: These skulls had been exhumed from the Mousterian ground; they were, therefore, contemporary with primitive man; while, on the other hand, their cerebral capacity brought them far nearer to man than to the apes. That capacity was about 1,300 cubic centimeters. Now, the mean human capacity is 1,500; it reaches 1,800 in certain exceptional beings (for instance, Cuvier and Lord Byron), and is as little as 1,400 among the lowest types of Australians. The maximum observed among the anthropomorphic apes is 600.

The skull of La Chapelle-aux-Saints was found in a cave at a depth of sixty centimeters. From the geological section of the ground where it was discovered, and from examination of the chip flints and the bones of animals, reindeer and bison gathered near the human bones, it follows that these latter belong to the same epoch as the skulls of Neanderthal and Spy, namely, the Mousterian epoch. At the same time that the skull was found at La Chapelle-aux-Saints, a Swiss archæologist, M. Otto Hauser, discovered in the Valley of the Vezere a fossil skeleton also belonging to the Mousterian epoch, and the skull of which is very similar to that of the Chapelle-aux-Saints, but far less complete. Here is what Dr. Ludwig Reichardt of Bale says on the subject:

"In the upper valley of the Vezere, in Dordogne, at the foot of a chalk cliff, is the village of Moustier, where since the middle of the last century has been discovered an important deposit of cut flints. It is from that place that the expression 'Mousterian' has been used by archæologists to indicate an age of civilization.

"For several years M. Hauser has been excavating in that region. In November, 1907, he began exploring a deep cave, where he collected at first large quantities of cut flints. On March 7, 1908, one of his workmen unearthed a few fragments of bones. M. Hauser directed their removal with extreme care, and then, in the presence of numerous authorized witnesses, he had some authentic reports written of his discovery. The skeleton was nearly complete, but in such a state that a great part of it fell into dust when they tried to disengage it. They were able, however, to pick up several fragments, notably those of the skull, which was restored by Prof. Klaatsch of Breslau.

Marks of Primitive Man.

"On Nov. 21 last, as a great favor, I was able, in company with an archæologist of St. Gall, to examine the precious remains, which had been brought to Bale expressly for our benefit. The forehead is receding; the jawbone, very prominent, seems to be of an extraordinary strength; the eyes, nearly twice as large as ours, are protected by bony folds such as one sees to-day, less accentuated, in Australian negroes. As the examination of the skeleton has proved, we are in the presence of a young man 18 years of age, measuring about 148 centimeters in height. The limbs are short, compared to the length of the trunk; their proportion is comparatively that which we observe in children. The incurvation of the legs proves that this young man must have walked with bent knees like the old men of our own day. With bodies probably covered with hair, he and his fellows prowled in small hungry groups, in countries rich in game, but poor in vegetable food. A leather belt with which he tightened his stomach during the frequent days of famine was doubtless his only garment. His weapons were rudimentary, a mere cudgel, perhaps, also a spear with the point hardened by fire, which this primitive being knew how to procure by rubbing together two pieces of wood, and tools of flint, which he was already making.

"Last of all, at the same time as the faculty of articulated language, religious feeling commenced to awaken in him. In that last order of ideas the discovery of Moustier has allowed us to gauge in quite an irrespective fashion the mentality of these primitive Europeans. It demonstrates that religious practices and the cult of the dead already existed even at that period, separated as it is from ours by several hundred thousands of years. This Mousterian skeleton certainly represents the most ancient human remains found in a really virgin ground. It is impossible to ascribe to it even an approximate date. However, from recent observations on the mean denudation of Switzerland and of the south of the Black Forest, it seems permissible to reckon his age at a minimum of 400,000 years."

And still the scientists must keep on digging, in their effort to answer conclusively the question, "Whence Came I?"

The cave man of La Chapelle-aux-aints, in France, reconstructed from the skull and skeleton, in accordance with the laws of anatomy, and drawn by Kupka for L'Illustration of Paris. This man, long-bodied and short-legged, could not stand erect, though his knee-pans, unlike those of monkeys, are in front. Judged by the shape of the skull and face bones, he must have looked in life much like the picture M. Kupka has made of him. He is shown lying in wait for prey.

ABDUL HAMID DYING IN TURKISH PALACE.

ABDUL HAMID, SULTAN OF TURKEY.

In Constantinople there is the gravest concern on all sides over the health of the Sultan, Abdul Hamid. Reports are in circulation that he is on his deathbed; that he is being attended by several of the foremost physicians of Europe, but that, they have no hope of prolonging his life beyond a few months at the utmost limit. The aged Sultan, who has lost part of his despotic power to the young Turks and part of his territorial authority to Austria, is said to be afflicted with insomnia and neurasthenia. He is scarcely able to get a wink of sleep, night or day. Surrounded by his most faithful advisers, with physicians brought from Paris and Berlin constantly at his side, the feeble monarch is bedfast. The utmost secrecy, so far as official reports go, is maintained about his condition. In truth, the official reports are directed toward leading the people to believe that the Sultan is as vigorous as he was ten years ago. This was strikingly illustrated at his last public appearance. When he rode through the streets he seemed to be strong, but it is disclosed that he had been nerved for the ordeal through the administration of powerful stimulants; that he ventured out in violation of the orders of his doctors for the express purpose of deceiving the public as to his health, and that he collapsed on returning to the palace.

Contrary to the general belief of the outside world, which has been told that the young Turkish party has plotted against his life, the young Turks wish Abdul Hamid to live many years. They fear a younger sovereign might throw off their influence and restore a reactionary regime. As long as he remains on the throne they feel assured that the constitution is safe.

WAR AVERTED BY FLEET.

French Deductions from Tour of American Battleships.

Admiration of the American battleship fleet is unstinted in the French press. Its arrival in European waters in the same week as the news of the death of Admiral Rozhjestvensky in St. Petersburg leads to many contrasts between the two voyages which for part of the way, at least, covered much the same route. Rozhjestvensky with a heterogeneous collection of ships and the American admiral with a homogeneous fleet.

French writers insist on two points, the impossibility of France's navy undertaking such a feat and the difference between the conditions at the start and at the end of the voyage. At the start, they insist, war with Japan was imminent; at the end peace is assured, and this, they maintain, is the direct result of the fleet's trip.

M. Berlin, who acted as Japan's adviser for naval construction from 1889 to 1890, and afterward became the head of the French ministry of marine, says it is a veritable feat the Americans have accomplished. To understand this one must know that a modern warship is a highly delicate collection of clock-like machinery which needs constant care. Commercial fleets are made for long voyages, warships are not.

Admiral Cuverville says: "This tour of the world, accomplished for the first time by a powerful squadron, is a bold undertaking successfully carried out which commands all our admiration. That the fleet finishes its voyage intact proves undeniably that America has navy officers and engineers and administration of the highest rank."

WIRE FENCE A DEATH TRAP.

Charles Senft, 73 years old, who had been strangely missing from his home at East Berlin, Pa., for several days, was found dead about one-half mile from his home. His body was found dangling from a wire fence. It is supposed that Mr. Senft, while trying to crawl through the fence, was caught by the wire and held a prisoner until the exposure killed him.

LOCOMOTIVES IN TUG OF WAR.

Engine Held for Taxes Finally Pulled Away by Two Others.

A tug of war between locomotives took place at Arkville, N. Y., when the Delaware and Eastern Railroad Company recovered possession of an engine that had been levied upon for taxes. The seized engine stood covered with official notices and fastened to the tracks with big log chains and padlocks.

The superintendent, with two locomotives and fifteen men, went to East Branch to get the engine. The deputy sheriff heard of their coming, and, gathering five men, swore them in and prepared for war. The railroad men tied what is known in railroad circles as a three-link chain to the drawhead of the stalled engine and began to pull. The officers, one of whom was a former railroad man, had fire up and so much steam that it was blowing off. As soon as the two engines began to pull, the one-time railroad man threw the reverse lever.

For fifteen minutes the great machines tugged and strained, but the lone engine, chained, held its ground. Suddenly the three-link coupling broke, but the railroad men tied up again. For five minutes more the locomotives puffed and snorted. Then superior force prevailed and the stalled engine was started.

WOLVES TEAR LITTLE CHILD.

A weird tale of the North has been brought to Saskatoon, Manitoba, by Fred Allingham and James and Mack J. Curtin, who spent the winter around Moose Lake. A trapper had obtained several young timber wolves which he trained for driving. On one occasion he had been away on a long journey and was finishing a hard day in which the animals had not received any food, as is the custom of treating dog teams while traveling. As the driver of the team approached the shanty that was their home, his 3-year-old daughter ran out to meet them, and the famished animals jumped upon her. In a flash she was dead before the father could lift a hand. Seizing a sharp ax the trapper went at the wild creatures and never stopped until he had killed them all.

Unter den Linden is the center of Berlin and the hub of the German empire. This magnificent boulevard is 198 feet in width, and under the shade of its lime trees the Berliners have a meeting place which is equal in architectural beauty to any in Europe. It is lined on either side with magnificent hotels, restaurants and palaces.

Seated opposite the late James McNeill Whistler at dinner one evening was a patronizing young lord. During a lull in the conversation he adjusted his monocle and leaned forward toward the artist. "Aw, y' know, Mr. Whistler," he drawled, "I pahssed your house this mawning." "Thank you," said Whistler, quietly. "Thank you very much."

Once, when taking breakfast at a hotel in Richmond, John Randolph complained that the eggs were not fresh. "If you want fresh eggs, waiter, always buy them in Chesterfield" (a county just across the James). "How come Chesterfield eggs better'n Henrico eggs sah?" "Because, you rascal, the Chesterfield people are too poor to keep theirs long."

Many eclipses are noticed in the records of all ages. Astronomers can determine accurately when eclipses must have occurred and the eclipse records are proving valuable to histprical students as a means of determining the dates of important events. From these studies P. H. Cowell has found evidence that our year has decreased within historical times.

An economical retainer in which to ship products such as cement, lime and plaster is described in Popular Mechanics. Its halves are separable and can be nested in a compact form for the return journey. The cost of the barrel is about $1, which is a little more than twice that of a wooden barrel, but they are said to be good for at least fifteen round trips, and the room they occupy when empty cuts down the shipping bill one-half.

There were more paupers in England than ever at the end of January, despite old age pensions, the proportion in London being the highest since 1881, according to the government return just published. The total number of paupers in England and Wales was 850,460, of whom 288,831 were indoor. The proportion a thousand of population was 24.1, an increase of .5 from last year and of .3 in indoor paupers. The total in London was 133,226, a proportion of 27.8.

A great deal of attention has recently been given to the cultivation of rubber, on account of the continually increasing demand for it. Prof. Francis E. Lloyd points out that "the inevitable struggle of man with nature" has already manifested itself in this new field. Already a considerable number of parasitic enemies have been discovered, "whose energies appear to be largely concentrated upon cultivated rubber trees." It is another problem for science to deal with.

In response to a demand that they get together the two leading charitable organizations of Chicago, the Bureau of Charities and the Chicago Relief and Aid Society, have effected an amalgamation of forces and will be known hereafter as the United Charities of Chicago. The main reason for the amalgamation is the raising of more funds. At present the Bureau of Charities disburses about $80,000 a year and the Relief and Aid Society about $68,000. It is hoped to raise between $300,000 and $400,000 for the combined organizations.

French children are often on their way to school a little after 7 o'clock in the morning. If they have concluded their lessons by 9 o'clock in the evening it is only by dint of great application. Young men studying for the higher professions have appointments with their tutors at 5 o'clock in the morning in summer time; otherwise they cannot accomplish the mountain of work that lies before them. In all branches of art the labor of the tyro is immense. At the Conservatoire the strenuous life is carried to a point which provokes the astonishment even of laborious German students.—Pall Mall Gazette.

The growing industry of extracting aluminum has stimulated the search for water-power in the British Isles, because the extraction of aluminum is so expensive that only low-cost power can be economically employed. In this respect Scotland, with its mountains, is coming to the front. The water power power plant at the falls of Foyers, in Scotland, has hitherto been the largest in Great Britain, but now a still larger plant, at Kinlochleven, utilizing the rainfall over a tract of fifty-five square miles, is about to be put into operation for the production of aluminum. Its nine hydraulic turbines, each of 3,200 brake horsepower, are the largest water wheels in the British Isles.

The idea prevails that the Arctic regions are always in the grip of King Frost. A careful log kept for the Meteorological Society for six months, with temperature observations taken at 8 a. m., 12 noon, 4 p. m. and 8 p. m. shows during that period that as far north as 77 degrees north latitude, or about 2,000 miles to the north of Ottawa, the average temperature at noon worked out at 33.85 degrees Fahrenheit. The greatest cold noted was on Oct. 28 at 8 a. m., in the seventieth degree of north latitude, 18 degrees Fahrenheit. The greatest heat occurred on Sept. 2 at noon in the same latitude, and was 53 degrees Fahrenheit. The temperature observations were kept from May 1 to Oct. 31.

PERUNA

For Catarrh of the Throat of Two Years' Standing.

"I was afflicted for two years with catarrh of the throat. At first it was very slight, but every cold I took made it worse.

"I followed your directions and in a very short time I began to improve. I took one bottle and am now taking my second. I can safely say that my throat and head are cleared from catarrh at the present time, but I still continue to take my usual dose for a spring tonic, and I find there is nothing better."—Mrs. W. Pray, 260 Twelfth St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

Had No Objections.

He had held one of the fattest jobs in the gift of the local political boss, and when he died there was an unseemly scramble for his position. The first man to reach the boss had no particular claim upon him, but merely placed his faith in the adage of the early worm.

"Guv-ner," said he, "do you think you would have any objections to my getting into Jones' place?"

"Oh, I'm sure I have no objections," was the unfeeling reply. "None in the world, if the undertakers and coroner are willing."

FIVE MONTHS IN HOSPITAL.

Discharged Because Doctors Could Not Cure.

Levi P. Brockway, S. Second Ave., Anoka, Minn., says: "After lying for five months in a hospital I was discharged as incurable, and given only six months to live. My heart was affected. I had smothering spells and sometimes fell unconscious. I got so I couldn't use my arms, my eyesight was impaired and the kidney secretions were badly disordered. I was completely worn out and discouraged when I began using Doan's Kidney Pills, but they went right to the cause of the trouble and did their work well. I have been feeling well ever since."

Candid and Canonical.

The following anecdote of Uncle Joe Cannon is told by A. E. Thomas in Success Magazine:

In some ways he's an engaging old despot, is Uncle Joe, and occasionally his victims have to laugh, even while they agonize beneath his yoke. On one occasion an unusually large number of Republicans happened to get hungry about the same time, while for some unknown reason the Democratic appetite did not require attention. Catching the Speaker napping, the Democratic floor leader, perceiving that he had a majority, called up a bill and pushed it to a vote. The Speaker strung out the voting in all of the various ways that are known to him, but at the end of the second roll-call the Democratic votes were still in the majority. Though the rules of the House expressly forbade such a thing, a third roll-call was ordered by the Speaker, a proceeding which called out a red-hot protest from one of the Democratic leaders, who demanded to know the reason for the Speaker's extraordinary action. The Speaker genially advised the protesting Democrat.

"The chair will inform the gentleman, said he. "The chair is hoping that a few more Republicans will come in."

A gale of strictly non-partisan laughter swept over the House, and before it had entirely subsided enough Republicans had been rounded up by the hurrying scouts to fulfill the Speaker's wish so candidly expressed.

SICK DOCTOR.

Proper Food Put Him Right.

The food experience of a physician in his own case when worn and weak from sickness and when needing nourishment the worst way is valuable:

"An attack of grip, so severe it came near making an end of me, left my stomach in such condition I could not retain any ordinary food. I knew of course that I must have food nourishment or I could never recover.

"I began to take four teaspoonfuls of Grape-Nuts and cream three times a day and for two weeks this was almost my only food; it tasted so delicious that I enjoyed it immensely and my stomach handled it perfectly from the first mouthful. It was so nourishing I was quickly built back to normal health and strength.

"Grape-Nuts is of great value as food to sustain life during serious attacks in which the stomach is so deranged it cannot digest and assimilate other foods.

"I am convinced that were Grape-Nuts more widely used by physicians, it would save many lives that are otherwise lost from lack of nourishment."

Absolutely the most perfect food in the world. Trial of Grape-Nuts 10 days proves. "There's a Reason."

AFTER SUFFERING TEN YEARS

Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

MARLTON, N.J.—I feel that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has given me new life. I suffered for ten years with serious female troubles, inflammation, ulceration, indigestion, nervousness, and could not sleep. Doctors gave me up, as they said my troubles were chronic. I was in despair, and did not care whether I lived or died, when I read about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; so I began to take it, and am well again and relieved of all my suffering."—Mrs. GEORGE JONDY, Box 40, Marlton, N.J.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotics or harmful drugs, and to-day holds the record for the largest number of actual cures of female diseases we know of, and thousands of voluntary testimonials are on file in the Pinkham laboratory at Lynn, Mass., from women who have been cured from almost every form of female complaints, inflammation, ulceration, displacements, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, indigestion and nervous prostration. Every suffering woman owes it to herself to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial.

If you would like special advice about your case write a confidential letter to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. Her advice is free, and always helpful.

Pays to Have an Incubator.

Six years ago we purchased a 100-egg incubator and every season it has been set five or six times and have never had one failure nor one bad hatch. The hatches are always in the nineties with the exception of once when we only got seventy-eight chicks. Our hatches are about the same each time each season through. We nearly always have from ninety-two to ninety-six chicks, seldom lower than ninety-three, more often higher than that, and always such strong, lively chicks, almost never a cripple among them—seldom one in 500. Our incubator has not had the advantage of being kept in a cave or cellar, but we have done so well with it that we have purchased another of 120 and one of 240-egg capacity, as we are going into the business more extensively.

We can truthfully say that the incubator is a great time and labor saver and a money maker. It is one of the best investments any farmer or any one who raises poultry can make. Who would care to go back to the slow way of raising chicks with the sitting hen when it can be done with the incubator so easily and so well? With the hen the season of hatching is soon over with, while with the incubator the early fries for market can be sold when the market prices are best and the early pullets hatched that will be wanted for fall and winter layers. We do not have to wait on the sitting hen to hatch out a few chickens when we have the incubator to hatch them by the dozens.

A good incubator will pay for itself over and over the first season of its use. It is indispensable in the poultry business. To all those who contemplate purchasing I would say, don't get one that is too cheap. Get a good one, even if you do have to pay more. The good ones are the cheapest in the long run. There are some incubators that have to be watched closely to give results, but these are the thin-walled kind that will not hold even temperature. Our incubator does not get any watching after it is once set going. We leave for an all-day visit any time—even at hatching time—and it takes care of itself.

For the amount invested an incubator will make more money than any machine I know of.—Mrs. L. E. Brack.

Handling Manure.

It is pertinent also to here refer to the trials conducted by the Cornell Agricultural Station to demonstrate the losses to stable manure when exposed to leaching and weathering. A pile of manure that contained elements worth $5.48, after being exposed for five months was worth only $2.03. Leaving manure in piles in the field is an antiquated method that should never be practiced, for the reason that it results in fertilizing the spots where the heaps lie too heavily, giving them fully three times as much of the fertilizing elements as they need, while three times as much ground receives less than it needs, or not enough to make a showing. Where manure is allowed to lie in heaps on a field for a few weeks or a month, it is an impossibility to spread it so as to get an even distribution of organic matter and of the elements of fertility. It is preferable to spread the manure direct from the wagon with a fork, although this is by no means an up-to-date way of handling it. For the most economical results, manure should be hauled direct from the barn as soon as it is made and scattered over the fields by means of a spreader. In this way, and in this way only, can the full value of manure be saved, provided, of course, enough bedding is used in the barn to nicely absorb all the liquid excrement, the plant food of which amounts to nearly one-half of the total in the manure and liquid excrement.

Do Not Let Your Dog Lick You.

A London veterinary surgeon says few people are conscious of the risks they run by permitting dogs to lick their hands and faces. They are liable to get infected with a dangerous kind of worm, which, in man, forms cysts in the brain, liver and other parts of the body and is known as the "hydatid." The worm itself exists in the dog. The danger is so well known to hygienists that a by-law exists which renders the keeping of a dog in a slaughter house illegal. Only a little while ago a case of this disease occurred in London in a dog breeder.

When to Plant Cherries.

About the best time to plant cherry trees is in early fall or very early in spring. It is better to plant in October, even before the leaves fall, stripping the leaves off, than it is late, just before winter sets in. In fact, many trees would do better than they do, were they set early, stripping their leaves, not waiting for the leaves to fall.

Dairy Notes.

Talk over dairy matters with your neighbors.

Never use milk utensils for anything but milk.

Insist upon pasteurization of the skim milk if you are delivering milk to a creamery.

Don't abuse the nervous cow. That isn't the way to handle her.

Sow some peas and oats to help out when hot weather comes. Then put in some fodder corn planted thickly in the row.

If milk shows a deposit of dirt at the bottom of the can it should not be used. Dirty milk should not be given to the babies.

Germs, it is said, multiply faster in pasteurized milk than in any other kind. Therefore keep the pasteurized milk in a cool place and use it as soon as possible.

Exercising a Bull.

The accompanying cut furnishes an excellent plan for exercising a bull. A large, strong post is sunk into the ground and securely set. On top of this post is placed an iron plate somewhat similar to that used on the bolster of a sleigh or wagon through which the king bolt passes. A long sweep, evenly balanced, is placed upon the top of this post and pinned by means of a long rod, or, as we might say, king bolt. The sweep is necessarily large at one end and small at the other, which makes it possible to balance with one end comparatively short and the other long. The bull is tied to the rope attached to the further end of the long arm, and in that way can have a large circle to move in. The supporting post should be above the ground high enough to carry the sweep above the bull. For a time the bull may attempt to free himself, but if the post and sweep are made properly and securely there will be no danger and he will soon settle down to exercising in a much better manner.

The Value of Tile Draining.

Tile properly placed makes soil dryer in wet weather and more moist in dry weather. This is difficult to understand until we consider the nature of the soil.

Soil in proper condition is porous, something after the manner of a sponge. It will hold water up to a certain point without leaking. Until it becomes thoroughly saturated, it contains air as well as water. Air is warm and air is needed by plants in the process of growth.

Tile leads the water away quickly in the spring so the air can penetrate the soil and warm it so seeds will germinate and grow quickly. Undrained land, if low, fills with water in the spring to the saturation point and the excess of moisture passes off in vapor through the process of evaporation. It requires a great deal of heat to warm the water sufficiently to cause it to pass off in this way. That heat is lost.

After evaporation has dissipated the moisture and the soil becomes dry enough to work it breaks up in clods, because it has baked down and packed together like mortar. It is almost impossible to prepare a good seed bed in such ground.—Agricultural Epitomist.

Country's Rainfall.

The total rainfall of this country, including snow and that on water areas, was given as 215,000,000,000,000 cubic feet a year. Half or more is evaporated. About one-third flows into the sea. The remaining one-sixth is either consumed or absorbed. Of the 70,000,000,000,000 cubic feet flowing annually into the sea, less than 5 per cent is used for power. It is estimated that 85 to 95 per cent of the volume is wasted in freshets or destructive floods. There are in the United States proper 232 streams navigated for an aggregate of 26,115 miles, and as much more is navigable by improvement.

A Very Cheap Gate.

A light, useful and durable gate can be made of sassafras poles and barbed wire as shown in the cut. Set a strong post 4 feet in the ground in the middle of the gateway and balance the gate on it. The lower rail is made of two forked sassafras poles securely nailed together so as to work around the post.—W. H. Thompson, in Farm and Home.

Alcohol from Peat.

Alcohol is obtained from peat by treating the fiber with sulphuric acid and fermenting with a special yeast. A ton of dry peat yields forty-three gallons of pure spirit at one-fourth of the cost of potato alcohol.

Hints for the Farmer.

Lime sweetens the soil as generous deeds sweeten the soul.

Use the hatchet on the old rusty cans. At least don't use them for milk or cream.

Keep the sick animals away from the rest of the herd. Put them in the "pest-house."

When lice get a foothold spray the hogs; also spray the pens and burn all the rubbish.

The scrub cow is the cow that will not respond handsomely to good feed and good care.

It is equally as dangerous to work a horse too soon after feeding as to feed too soon after work.

When a man makes a failure of what he undertakes it's bad luck. When he succeeds it's good management.

The average yield of corn in the United States is thirty-five bushels per acre. It ought to be twice that.

Don't tie to the man who approves of your every opinion. Neither take his advice, because he doesn't think.

Why not sow early maturing beets along with your turnips? They give good results and stand as much cold.

THE HOUSEHOLD

Prime Jelly.

A very delicious dessert is made with prunes as a foundation. Steam the prunes until they are soft. Then take out the stones and fill them into a wet mold. Turn over them a jelly made of a cupful of sherry, a tablespoonful of lemon juice, the juice of two oranges and half an ounce of gelatine soaked in half a cupful of cold water and dissolved in half a cupful of boiling water. Serve with whipped cream.

Apple Fritters.

One cup flour, one and one-half teaspoonfuls of baking powder, two level tablespoonfuls of sugar, two-thirds cup of milk, one egg well beaten, two medium-sized apples cut into small, thin slices. Sift together the flour, baking powder and sugar, add gradually the milk, then the egg. Beat well and stir in the apple. Drop by spoonfuls into deep, hot fat. Drain on brown paper and serve with maple syrup or a sweet sauce.

Arrowroot Milk.

Mix two or three tablespoonfuls of arrowroot with half a pint of cold water; stir it well to clean it; let it stand for a few minutes and pour off the water. Stir in some pounded sugar; boil a pint of milk and pour it gradually upon the arrowroot. Stirring well at the time, let it come to a boil. Or water may be used instead of milk, with the addition of a few drops of lemon essence and a little nutmeg.

Chile Con Carne.

Cut a pound of fresh pork into inch squares and parboil. Soak five chiles in hot water, take out the seeds and veins, wash them well and put in a mortar. Pound to a pulp, adding a little garlic, black pepper, two cloves and a cooked tomato. Fry this in hot lard; then add the meat, with some of the liquid in which it was boiled, and a little salt. Cover and let it cook down until it is rather thick.

Baked Hominy.

Mixed into hot boiled hominy (either large or small grained), a little cream and three beaten eggs and two tablespoonfuls of sugar. Bake in individual ramquins and when the custard is set sprinkle over the top of each some crumbled pop corn sprinkled with melted butter and a little sugar. Return to the oven to brown slightly. Eat with sweetened cream or honey, or maple syrup.

Corn Muffins with Sour Milk.

Sift together a cup of corn meal, a cup of graham flour and a teaspoonful of salt, a teaspoonful of butter and two tablespoonfuls of sugar. Mix to a batter with one cup each of sour milk and cream. If one has no sour cream use a cup with melted butter. Bake in hot, and substitute the other fourth of one cup with melted butter. Bake in hot well greased muffin tins.

Pickle for Tongues and Meats.

Place the tongue or meat in a pan with sufficient water to cover it. Add to it a tablespoonful of brown sugar, two tablespoonfuls of salt, one of saltpeter and a clove of garlic. Place the pan on a good clear fire, and when the liquor has boiled remove it and let it cool. When cold put the tongue back into the pickle and turn it daily for a fortnight, when it will be ready.

Brazilian Stew.

Cut a shin of beef into small slices, dip these in vinegar, and stew very slowly. No water is required, because in three or four hours over a slow fire the meat will have given abundant gravy and be as tender as a chicken. Serve with little roast onions and braised carrots.

To Keep Apples.

Wrap each apple in a piece of newspaper and pack them in a box and put in a cool place. They will keep for three or four months.

Short Suggestions.

It is better to cook too slowly than too fast.

Vinegar diluted with water will remove grease from a stove.

Marble should be washed with ammonia and water rather than with soap and water.

A great many blemishes on wall paper may be removed with a rubber on a lead pencil.

The bureau drawer can be made to open easily and noiselessly by rubbing it with common soap.

Dried lemon peel sprinkled over coals will destroy any disagreeable odor about the house.

Combs soon warp and break if washed with water. A good stiff nail-brush cleans them well.

A weak solution of turpentine poured down the water pipes once a week will drive the water bugs away.

To cool an oven while baking never leave the door open, but cool it by the drafts or removing one of the plates over the oven.

If you scorch a garment when ironing it rub a lump of dry starch on the mark, then sponge it off. Repeat till the yellow disappears.

Half a lemon dipped in salt is excellent for cleaning copper articles. Oxalic acid, too, is equally successful both for copper and brass.

An India-rubber hot water bottle is easily cleaned. Wash it well with luke-warm water and soap, rubbing on the soap with a piece of flannel.

Remove grease stains by saturating the spots with alcohol rather than benzine. Alcohol does not leave a ring around the spot afterward. Wash with cold water.

One often hears complaints that the boiler ruins and iron molds the clothes. To prevent this, as soon as the boiler is emptied rub well with soap. This will not only prevent rust; it will also help to make suds for the next boiling.

THE IMMORTAL 9TH.

How Seventeen Members of a Regiment Tried to Take Port Arthur.

In the grand assault commencing Aug. 19, the immortal Ninth Regiment of the Japanese army was ordered to cross the field to the foot of the slope on which lay, dead and dying, many of them of the regiment which had gone before. The colonel, Takagagi, surveying the task set for his regiment, sent back a report that it was not feasible, says Richard Barry in Everybody's. The brigade general, Ichinobe, replied hotly that one regiment was enough to take one battery.

Takagagi stepped out of the ravine, in which he had been seeking shelter, at the head of his command. Before he had been marching, as colonels usually do, in the rear, while his line officers led the advance. Now he leaped forward up the slope, out in front of his men. A dozen paces from the ravine he fell with four bullets through his breast. The lieutenant colonel took up the lead and was shot a few yards farther on. The majors were wiped out. Every captain but one went down.

The last captain, Nashimoto, in charge of D company, found himself at length under the Chinese wall with seventeen men. Looking down upon the shell-swept plain, protected for the moment from the sharpshooters above, with that handful of heroes, a mile and a half in advance of the main body of the Japanese army, he grew giddy with the success of his attempt.

Of a sudden he concluded that he could take Port Arthur with his seventeen men. He started in to do it. There was only the wall ahead—the wall and a few machine guns—beyond, the city itself—a five minutes' run would have brought him to the citadel. He scaled the wall and fell across it—his back bullet-broken. Eight of his men got over, scaling the height beyond, called Wangtai, or the watch tower, a place to which the Russian generals formerly rode on horseback to survey the battlefield. On the slope for three months in full sight of both armies the eight lay rotting. The Russians referred to them as "the Japanese garrison."

SHORT METER SERMONS.

Suggestion.

Suggestion is a method of awakening the powers of the subconscious mind so that they may assert themselves and accomplish great results.—Rev. C. F. Winbigler, Baptist, Washington.

Using What We Have.

You have something of life, something of truth, something of reverence, something of the sense of duty, something of loyalty; then use what you have.—Rev. E. L. Powell, Christian, Louisville.

Paying for Religion.

The value of our church services will be greatly enhanced when it costs us money. It's an enormous misfortune to get your religion for nothing.—Rev. R. S. MacArthur, Baptist, New York City.

When Virtue Comes.

Virtue comes only when a man stands at the parting of the ways between right and wrong, and turns his back on the wrong and chooses the right.—Rev. G. L. Cady, Congregationalist, Dorchester, Mass.

Looking Back.

Looking back usually results in going back. The man who holds on to the past of which he is ashamed will some day find himself back in the old place of shame.—Rev. P. M. Strayer, Presbyterian, Rochester, N. Y.

Hard Thing to Do.

It is easy to be happy when singing the doxology in church, but the harder thing is to sing when people act to as to tempt us to swear or to hire some one to swear for us.—Rev. J. H. Hobbs, Episcopalian, Utica, N. Y.

God-Centered.

When human lives learn the blessing there is in becoming God-centered instead of self-centered the hard things of life will have their bitterness taken out of them.—Rev. S. N. Watson, Episcopalian, Akron.

The Vision of the Ideal.

We have to keep a clear light shining in any dark place; we have to keep the flag of righteousness and purity flying here; we have to maintain the vision of the ideal before us.—Rev. Charles F. Aked, Baptist, New York City.

Wrong Start.

The weakness and insufficiency of much of our thinking is in that we do not start right. We may spend ages trying to reason from the contradiction of life to a kindly God and fail.—Rev. T. E. Barr, People's Pulpit, Milwaukee.

Christianity's Gift.

The gift of Christianity was the revelation of a person who was to make humanity a perpetual institution—God in Christ, in whom God came from heaven down to earth in the incarnation.—Rev. E. Perry, Methodist, Milwaukee.

Right Feeling.

A man is best when right feeling stimulates right thought, in a disciplined and finished manner, and turns upon the feelings and becomes their master directing them with right purpose.—Rev. W. W. Fenn, Unitarian, Cambridge, Mass.

Imagination.

Imagination is the most essential element in any great invention, knowledge, business enterprise and religion. If it was not for the powers of imagination, the nations would be stranded long before this.—Rev. C. K. Carpenter, Methodist Episcopalian, Aurora, Ill.

Champagne Corks.

The manufacture of the best kind of corks, those made for champagne bottles, are never intrusted to machines. The ordinary common cork is made by machinery, but the best work invariably is done by human hands, and the champagne cork cannot be trusted to a machine. All the blemishes in the cork have to be taken into consideration, so this work is done by hand labor.

The amount that people have to learn is entirely too great for their length of life.

TOTAL LOSS OF HAIR

Seemed Imminent—Scalp Was Very Scaly and Hair Came Out by Handfuls—Scalp Now Clear and New Hair Grown by Cuticura.

"About two years ago I was troubled with my head being scaly. Shortly after that I had an attack of typhoid fever and I was out of the hospital possibly two months when I first noticed the loss of hair, my scalp being still scaly. I started to use dandruff cures to no effect whatever. I had actually lost hope of saving any hair at all. I could brush it off my coat by the handful. I was afraid to comb it. But after using two cakes of Cuticura Soap and nearly a box of Cuticura Ointment, the change was surprising. My scalp is now clear and healthy as could be and my hair thicker than ever, whereas I had my mind made up to be bald. W. F. Steese, 5812 Broad St., Pittsburg, Pa., May 7 and 21, 1908."

Philanthropist—Haven't you any sympathy for the unemployed, colonel?

Politician—I don't know any unemployed, sir. Every man of my acquaintance has been working hard for the last two or three weeks trying to land a job in Washington.

Yellow Clothes Are Unsightly.

Keep them white with Red Cross Ball Blue. All grocers sell large 2oz. package, 5 cents.

Great Britain imports annually from New Zealand over 60,000,000 rabbits.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for children teething; softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic. 25 cents a bottle.

The Educated Grocer.

"Say, mister," said the small boy, breathlessly, "take down this order quick; I got to go to school. Two pounds of coffee at 45 cents; three and one-half of sugar at 7 cents; six boxes of cocoa at 24; two dozen eggs at 32, and four pounds of butter at 40 cents. How much does it come to?"

"Four dollars and eighty-three cents, my little man," said the grocer. "What address, please?"

"Gee! Thanks!" said the schoolboy as he made his escape. "That was the only one I couldn't do!"—Success Magazine.

Beautiful Glass Garments.

Spinning glass for practical uses was very well known by the ancient Egyptians, and we are now rediscovering it. Spun glass has long been known as a curiosity. A Frenchman in the middle of the last century developed the process along commercial lines, but died without revealing his secrets. These seem, however, to have been recently re-discovered in Germany.

Glass thus drawn out into very thin threads is flexible and it is thought it will be possible to spin and weave it into clothes. These garments would be incombustible, non-conducting and impervious to acids. They can be beautifully tinted by using tinted glass. The insulating properties of the glass wool would render it valuable as packing where it is desirable to keep in or exclude heat. In this case we should be resorting to the mineral kingdom for our clothes, though as yet we have not these asbestos garments which could be washed by throwing them on the fire.

Only an Excuse.

"The late Claus Speckles," said a San Franciscan, "had one weakness of which he was a little ashamed. He could not resist the appeal of a beggar. Yet he knew that the charity societies are right, and that most beggars are impostors.

"'Have the moral courage of your convictions,' I said one day as I saw him give a beggar a quarter. 'Send these fellows to the charity specialists for investigation.'

"'Moral courage!' Mr. Spreckles murmured. 'That is what we call on when we contemplate a mean action.

"'A school teacher once told her class that the courage which makes us do what we think is right, regardless of the sneers of others, was moral courage, the best kind.

"'Then, if a boy has a box of candy, like me yesterday," said a lad, "and if he eats it all himself, without giving any to people that have no right to it how much they call him mean and stingy—that there's moral courage, ain't it, teacher?'"

No Exact Equivalent.

"It would be correct to say, then, that you are on the water wagon, wouldn't it?" asked the reporter.

"No," said the distinguisher actor "that hardly expresses it. I have merely quit drinking coffee and taken to more wholesome beverages. You might say perhaps, that I am on the milk wagon."

To have more of Health and more of Life, take Garfield Tea! This Natural laxative regulates liver, kidneys, stomach and bowels, corrects constipation, purifies the blood and eradicates disease.

Couldn't Fool Johnny.

Widow Jones—How would my little Johnny like a new papa?

Johnny (aged 5)—Oh, you needn't shove the responsibility on to me, ma! It isn't a new papa for me, but a new husband for yourself, that you are thinking of.—Boston Transcript.

Time is the best test. For over fifty years Hamlins Wizard Oil has been the most popular remedy in the United States for the cure of Rheumatism, Neuralgia and all pain and inflammation.

Classified.

"What kind of people are they—refined or common?"

"Well, I'll tell you. They had a wedding anniversary last week, and he gave her a crayon portrait of himself, and she gave him a mustache cup."—Cleveland Leader.

Suspicious Circumstance.

The grocer had warranted the maple sirup to be the real stuff.

"It doesn't taste like any maple sirup I ever bought," said the customer, who had just sampled it, "and I strongly suspect——"

"Sir!" said the indignant gracer.

"I strongly suspect, in spite of your guaranty, that it's genuine."

BEST STOMACH REMEDY FREE

It is an old saying that if the stomach is sound the whole body is safe, because so much depends upon the proper working of the stomach. Many persons find themselves with a disorder of the stomach which produces dyspepsia or a peculiar state of biliousness.

If you suffer from both stomach trouble and constipation you are on the way to a very serious disease. From just such conditions come appendicitis, rheumatism, skin diseases and similar disorders, because the waste that should have been dispelled from the system through the bowels has found its way into the blood and vitiated it. What is needed at this point is not simply a violent cathartic tablet or salt, which usually does more harm than good, but a gentle laxative tonic like Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which people have been using for these ailments for nearly a quarter of a century. It cured J. C. Lanham, of Warrensburg, Mo., of stomach trouble of long standing, also William Voll, of 903 Ellison street, Louisville, Ky., who had the trouble for fifteen years.

However, if you have stomach trouble you want to know from personal experience what Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin will do for you. If so, send your name to the doctor and a free trial bottle will be sent you. You are urged to send for the free bottle, as the results from it will be the best recommendation of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Then you will do as over two million people did last year—go to your druggist and buy a regular bottle at 50 cents or $1, according to the size you prefer. We could mention hundreds and hundreds of families who are never without it. You can never tell when some member of the family will need a laxative, and then no time should be lost taking Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

If there is anything about your ailment that you don't understand, or if you want any medical advice, write to the doctor, and he will answer you fully. There is no charge for this service. The address is Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 202 Caldwell bldg., Monticello, Ill.

These New Towns in the Northwest All Need Men

Hundreds of new towns are springing up all over the Pacific Northwest.

The big, easy fortunes being made from fruit, farming and stock-raising, are making these towns grow fast. They all need men who know trades—they need you, whether you have money to invest or not.

Never, in the history of America, has the man who works with his hands had such a chance to make money, as is offered in the west today.

You Are Losing Money Every Day You Stay in the East

You would not stay another day in the worn-out East, if you knew even half the truth about the great Pacific Northwest.

Families, who went there penniless 5 years ago, are spending this winter in California. They bought good land at low prices—paid for it gradually—today are independent.

Opportunities are greater now than ever, because the country is more developed.

Ask us on a postal to send you our free book, telling you all about Oregon, Idaho and Washington. We'll also tell you what it costs to go there.

Itch cured in 30 minutes by Woolford's Sanitary Lotion. Never fails. Sold at Stone's Drug Store. Butler, Indiana. 1y

Dr. C. W. Beechler has sold his blooded pacing stallion to Monroe De Vinney, of Lima, LaGrange county, Ind. Potosi is one of the finest horses in Indiana and brought a good price.

Sick headache, constipation and biliousness are relieved by Rings Little Liver Pills. They cleanse the system. Do not gripe. Price 25c. Sold by Geo. W. Geddes. 9-3m

In Nebraska they held a local option election on Wednesday. Eighty-two towns voted "wet" and sixty-eight "dry." Twenty-five towns that were formerly "dry" voted to restore the saloons.

Pinesalve Carbolized acts like a poultice and draws out inflammation. For chapped skin. For cuts, burns, sores, bruises, skin diseases. Should be kept in every home. Price 25c. Sold by Geo. W. Geddes. 9-3m

Dr. H. T. Berkey has purchased the C. A. Newman property on West Oak street now occupied by Judd Gee and family, and will move into the house next week. Dr. Berkey will move his dental office to his new residence some time in the near future. We are pleased to note his increasing business and hope that prosperity will continue with him all through life.

You should not delay under any circumstances in cases of Kidney and Bladder trouble. You should take something promptly that you know is reliable, something like DeWitt's Kidney and Bladder Pills. They are unequaled for weak back, backache, inflammation of the bladder, rheumatic pains, etc. When you ask for DeWitt's Kidney and Bladder Pills, be sure you get them. They are antiseptic. Accept no substitutes; insist upon getting the right kind. Sold by Geo. W. Geddes. 13-1m

The postoffice at Moores station, west of Butler, will be discontinued on April 30. This is one of the old land marks of that section. The patrons of that office will be served by Butler rural mail carriers, one route running from this place for five years having served a large portion of the people there. Postmaster Rudd received notice of the change last Friday. If the people around Moores station would do their trading in Butler they would save a lot of money.

Pineules are for Backache, and bring quick relief to lumbago, rheumatism, fatigue and all other symptoms of Kidney diseases. They are a tonic to the entire system and build up strength and health. Price 50c and $1.00. Sold by Geo. W. Geddes. 9-3m

A tax of 2 per cent on the dividends of all corporations would meet with general approval, but if President Taft imagines such a tax will ever be imposed by the stockholding members of the senate it is time he woke up.

We would like to prove to every sufferer of Kidney diseases that Pineules will bring prompt relief. Backache, rheumatism, lumbago, fatigue and impure blood are merely symptoms of Kidney disorders. The $1.00 size contains 2½ times as much as the 50c size. Sold by Geo. W. Geddes. 9-3m

An item of expense that had to be met by the board of county commissioners this month was that accrued during the siege of diphtheria through which the Samuel Nelson family, of St. Joe, has just passed. The total amounts to over $200 of which sum $75 was for nurse hire. This family lost two children by diphtheria.

Bees Laxative Cough Syrup is instant relief for coughs, colds, croup, whooping cough. It is gently laxative and drives the cold from the system clearing the head and throat. Pleasant to take. Good for hoarseness, and all bronchial trouble. Guaranteed because we know what it will do. 25c, 50c and $1.00 Sold by Geo. W. Geddes. 9-3m

According to a volume in course of preparation by the census bureau, the size of the average family in the United States has decreased from 5.8 persons in 1790, the date of the first census taken in this country, to 4.6 in the same area in 1900. In 1790, families composed of six or more persons represented more than one-half, while in 1900, they represented hardly more than a fourth of the families enumerated.

Woods Liver Medicine is a liver regulator which acts directly on this organ, invigorates and produces natural action. Brings quick relief to sick headache, constipation, biliousness and other symptoms of liver disorders. Particularly recommended for Jaundice, Chills, Fever and Malaria. The $1.00 size contains 2½ times as much as the 50c size. Sold by Geo. W. Geddes. 9-3m

Senator Elkins has voiced his indignation because the republican members of the finance committee are holding hearings on the tariff bill without inviting any of the democrats to be present. This is very good of the senator from West Virginia, but knowing the senator we venture to believe that if he had been appointed a member of the finance committee himself he would never have raised his voice in protest against the exclusion of the minority.

Does not Color the Hair

Ingredients of Ayer's Hair Vigor

Sulphur. Destroys germs that cause dandruff and falling hair. Cures rashes and eruptions of scalp.
Glycerin. Soothing, healing. Feed to the hair-bulbs.
Quinin. A strong tonic, antiseptic, stimulant.
Sodium Chloride. Cleansing, quiets irritation of scalp.
Capsicum. Increases activity of glands.
Sage. Stimulant, tonic. Domestic remedy of high merit.
Alcohol. Stimulant, antiseptic. Water. Perfume.

Show this formula to your doctor. Ask him if there is a single injurious ingredient. Ask him if he thinks Ayer's Hair Vigor, as made from this formula, is the best preparation you could use for falling hair, or for dandruff. Let him decide. He knows.

The number of business places in Lagrange is no larger than it was forty years ago, the population of the town has been stationary for the last twenty-five years and the county lost between 1,500 and 2,000 population between 1890 and 1900, according to the Lagrange Standard.

ManZan Pile Remedy is put up in a tube with nozzle attached convenient for use. May be applied directly to the affected parts reducing and relieving the pain and inflammation. For all kinds of Piles. Guaranteed. Price 50c. Sold by Geo. W. Geddes. 9-3m

I. J. McFadden, of Butler, was in Waterloo Monday on business. His health is some better and he feels fortunate that he is so well as he is. Mr. McFadden reports that taxes in Butler are rather high, with the sewer tax in addition to the regular school and municipal levies.—Press.

A Guaranteed Cough remedy is Bees Laxative Cough Syrup. For coughs, colds, croup, whooping cough, hoarseness and all bronchial affections. Best for children because it is quick to relieve and tastes good. Gently laxative and drives the cold from the system. Sold by Geo. W. Geddes. 9-3m

An exceptionally long time was devoted by the board of trustees of the Indiana reformatory at Jeffersonville this month to the parole question. Eighty-five inmates were examined carefully, and paroles were granted to forty-two, the largest number for two or three years. The number of inmates had reached more than thirteen hundred during the last week or two, and the pressure on the space available is almost more than can be met.

Children especially like Kennedy's Laxative Cough Syrup, as it tastes nearly as good as maple sugar. It not only heals irritation and allays inflammation, thereby stopping the cough, but it also moves the bowels gently and in that way drives the cold from the system. It contains no opiates. Sold by Geo. W. Geddes. 13-1m Under the regime of the former gentle chatelaine of the white house there was a social secretary who shared in all the social pleasures as well as attended to the clerical duties of the position. But Mrs. Taft has informed the social world that she does not expect recognition of her secretary, that she is engaged to perform the duties of a clerk and that she will not appear at all in the social lists of the white house. For this position Mrs. Taft has selected a young woman, a German by birth, of gentle parentage, who speaks and writes German fluently, as well as French and Spanish and English of course, so that, through her clerk, the president's wife will be able to address her communications to foreigners in their native or a familiar language.

The Happy Family Circle

Father and mother, sisters and brothers, soon get to know one another's intimate affairs, and the little bowel and liver disturbances soon become household comment. It is well to remember that in constipation and indigestion, and other troubles of the stomach, liver and bowels a quick cure can be had by the use of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Take it tonight and you will feel perfectly well in the morning. It is absolutely guaranteed to do what is claimed, and if you want to try it before buying, send your address for a free sample bottle to Pepsin Syrup Co., 119 Caldwell Bldg., Monticello, Ill. It is sold by all druggists at 50c and $1 a bottle. 13-1m

The Strain of Life

This is a busy, active world, and the man succeeds best who has the greatest health and strength to fight the battles of life. You can't be healthy, strong and clear minded if you suffer from constipation, dyspepsia, liver trouble, flatulency, heartburn, etc. To cure these diseases take Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, the great regulator. It is absolutely guaranteed to do what is claimed, and if you would like to try it before buying, send your address for a free sample bottle to Pepsin Syrup Co., 119 Caldwell Bldg., Monticello, Ill. It is sold by all druggists at 50c and $1 a bottle. 13-1m

Among the indictments returned at the last session of the grand jury was one against Alfred Kelly and one against George Luce, both of Waterloo, for betting on the election last fall. In the circuit court on Wednesday forenoon they made their appearance and were bound over to the next term of court for a hearing. The bond was $200 in each case. C. M. Brown is surety for Mr. Kelly and Mr. Kelly went on the bond of Mr. Luce as surety. Mr. Luce, it is understood, won the election bet, which was for $50. If, on the hearing of the case, they are found guilty, Mr. Luce can simply turn over his $50 won on the bet to pay his fine. Mr. Kelly, however, will be out the money lost on the bet and also his fine.

Persons have been known to gain a pound a day by taking an ounce of Scott's Emulsion. It is strange, but it often happens.

Notice of Insolvency

In the matter of the Estate of John Henry Secor, deceased. } In the DeKalb Circuit Court. No. 1398.

Notice is hereby given that upon petition filed in said court by John J. Oberlin, administrator of said estate, setting up the insufficiency of the estate of said decedent to pay the debts and liabilities thereof, the judge of said court did, on the 13th day of April, 1909, find said estate to be probably insolvent, and order the same to be settled accordingly. The creditors of said estate are therefore hereby notified of such insolvency, and required to file their claims against said estate for allowance.

Witness the clerk and seal of said court, at Auburn, Indiana, this 13th day of April, 1909.

Friends and Neighbors in Butler Will Show You How

Get at the root of the trouble.
Rubbing an aching back may relieve it.
But it won't cure it.
You must reach the root of it—the kidneys.
Doan's Kidney Pills go right at it;
Reach the cause; relieve the pain.
They cure, too, so Butler people say.

Mrs. J. N. Firestone, R. F. D. No. 3, Butler, Ind., says: "Last fall when I was having a severe spell of backache and was scarcely able to get about on account of the terrible pains through my kidneys, I procured a box of Doan's Kidney Pills. After using them a short time, my trouble disappeared and I felt much better in every way. Knowing Doan's Kidney Pills to be a good kidney remedy, I heartily endorse them."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States.

ROUSING MEETING

Monday Evening and Much Interest Manifested

The City Councilmen All Show a Desire to Push the Pavement Proposition

Monday evening about forty of the representative property owners of Broadway, East Main and other streets assembled in the council room and gave close attention to the deliberations of our city legislators.

Mayor Webster called upon the visitors for remarks and George W. Geddes was the first to respond. He presented the paving proposition in a clear, concise manner, and urged upon the council necessity for immediate action in the matter. Mr. Geddes said that many thousands of dollars in trade had been lost to Butler merchants the past winter on account of the deplorable condition of the city's streets. He said he was aware that the present mayor and council had accomplished much during their incumbency, and hoped they would hurry matters as fast as possible in order that pavements on Broadway and East Main street might be finished before next winter. Mr. Geddes claimed that paving could be done with as much safety and propriety this year as five or ten years hence.

Dr. Shumaker gave expression to sentiments of like nature and said that brick ought to be used as it had been proven from experience in other cities that it was far superior to asphalt. The doctor waxed eloquent on his subject and his remarks were received with a great deal of respect.

Walter Mondhank said he would like to see brick pavements on every street, and would encourage the project in every way possible.

Samuel Noragon was heartily in favor of brick pavements and hoped that they could be finished before next winter.

R C. Campbell said he could see no reason why the contract should not be let at once, and trusted the council would act at the very earliest moment possible.

Attorney E. B. Dunten gave a splendid talk and said that there were a thousand reasons why the paving with brick could not be started at an early day and finished next fall. Mr. Dunten sighted instances where such had been done and the results had been highly satisfactory. He couldn't think of one reason why the work should not be done this summer.

W. H. Oberlin was very much in favor of brick paving, and hoped it would be done just as soon as the proper formalities had been gone through. He said that if in case the council could not see its way clear to accomplish this great work this summer, he suggested that the city erect a quarter of a mile of hitching racks outside the corporation limits for the accommodation of farmers, for it was almost impossible to get into town with a rig of any kind, especially during bad weather.

The property owners present were intensely earnest about the matter. They want the pavements and are willing to pay for them. The conditions are a crying demand for them. The business of the town has wonderfully decreased on account of our bad streets, and it behooves us all to urge in every way the early completion of pavements. It means our commercial salvation.

The HERALD points with pride to the splendid achievements of our present city administration. It has done a noble work, and can still erect a greater monument to their memories as public officials by putting forth every effort to secure pavements on Broadway and East Main street before the coming of another winter.

Let us clear away this horrible nightmare of impassable streets and build something that will be a lasting benefit to rising generations.

Let every public spirited citizen push for this needed improvement earnestly, manfully, conscientiously and unceasingly until the end is achieved.

Attorney Rose Dead

Attorney J. E Rose, the oldest practicing lawyer in DeKalb county, died at his home in Auburn on Tuesday afternoon after an illness of only a few days of neuralgia of the heart. He had been prominent in the affairs of the county for many years. At one time he resided in Butler. His ability as an attorney was known all over the state, and his honorable career as a citizen and as a member of the legal fraternity is worthy of emulation. He was a brother-in-law of Mrs. W. C. Webster of Butler. The funeral will be held at Auburn Friday afternoon.

Killed Near Albion

Cloe, the ten-year old son of Mr. and Mrs. G. C. Keister, living near Albion, was killed last Saturday. The lad was standing by the side of the windmill derrick on the farm when suddenly the governor weight, which had become loosened in some manner, dropped from the shaft, striking the boy on the head and crushing in his skull. The little fellow was carried into the house and medical aid was summoned, but without avail, death occurring almost immediately.

City Council Proceedings

The council met in regular session on Monday evening, April 19, 1909, with all members present except Sawyer. The following bills were allowed, towit:

L. L. & M. S. Ry. Co., freight on coal and Co's service	$ 61 92

Chas. F. Phillips, disinfectants	32 50
Dr. O. H. Swantusch, disinfecting houses	48 00

The marshal was authdrized to use a traction engine in scraping streets.

Moved and seconded that the committee on sewers and drains investigate the drain in the alley between Oak and Depot streets and report at next meeting.

An ordinance requiring all owners of lots on Broadway, Main, Oak and Depot streets to put in water taps and house slants to the lot line in ninety days was passed on 1st reading.

About fifty citizens were present and urged the council to pave Broadway and Main streets this year.

Superintendent made a requsition for some supplies, which were ordered bought.

Adjourned to meet in one week.

ACCIDENTAL HANGING IN COUNTRY NEAR WATERLOO

Tuesday Coroner Fred Briggs and his deputy, Fred D. Webster, were called to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Emile Schiffli, who reside five miles north of Waterloo, to hold an inquest over the corpse of the little son aged 1 year, 7 months and 2 days.

The boy escaped from the house and was absent so long that his mother, becoming alarmed, instituted a search and after hunting for some time for the missing tot finally discovered his dead body hanging in a wagon shed near the house.

It seems the boy had been playing upon some planks there when he must have slipped and fell, his head catching between the boards and side of the shed. Strangulation no doubt resulted in a very short time.

When Mrs. Schiffli found her boy in such a terrible condition she was nearly crazed with grief. She aroused the neighbors who came to her assistance at once.

The parents of the dead boy are highly respected German people, and the sympathy of the entire community is freely extended in this hour of bereavement.

Coroner Briggs after viewing the body and taking depositions of the parents, rendered a verdict of accidental hanging.

Mrs. George Fuller was taken to the hospital at Detroit on Monday by Dr. Harrison and was operated on Tuesday. She is recovering nicely.

William Watson and Lloyd Hursch, two young men from near the Allen county line, pleaded not guilty to having a fish net in their possession in the circuit court Saturday evening and were released under bonds of $200.

MAYOR WEBSTER NOT A CANDIDATE

In an interview with Mayor Webster on Monday the HERALD was informed that he was not a candidate for reelection next fall.

Mr. Webster was emphatic in his statement, and as he is a man who generally says just what he means, it can be taken for granted that he will not be a candidate for another term of office as chief executive of Butler.

Mayor Webster has been faithful in the discharge of his duties, and we believe that he has at all times exerted his best efforts in the city's welfare. When he leaves the cares of office next January he will at least have the satisfaction of knowing that during his administration some achievements have been accomplished that will stand as a monument of credit for many generations.

In the conduct of his office he has been gentlemanly, courteous and painstaking; always extending to those with whom he came in contact that kindly, dignified treatment that characterizes the true gentleman.

He has borne patiently with the criticisms offered against his official acts, much of the fault-finding being of a very unjust nature. We hope that the several months in which he will serve as mayor of this city will be as productive of good results as those passed.

Stafford and East Wilmington

Use Butler flour.

In some places hail as large as hulled walnuts fell last Sunday afternoon during the thunder storm. As far as known it did but little damage.

Last week Mr. and Mrs. Swihart, of Butler, moved into the house on Mr. Scoville's farm with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Moore. They will assist with the work on the farm, in and out of the house this season.

Mr. Headly, who was recently taken ill when in town, is reported better. He will need good health, for we are told that he has rented the Hendershot farm and that he intends to farm his own place and it also this year.

Dr. Hiner, of Butler, seems to be kept busy making visits into the country prescribing for sick cattle and horses. Recently he had a case on the farm of Joseph Wilson.

Fred Ginder has begun extensive repairs and improvements to his large barn. He has raised it up about seven feet and will put a wall under it all and make extensive stables.

William Wilson was at Auburn Monday paying taxes and doing other business. He says many are making journeys to the county seat now for the purpose of paying their taxes before they become delinquent.

After being absent most of the winter Mrs. Best has returned and is making her home the greater part of the time with her children in this vicinity.

There are many fields intended for oats that are not sown. Some are done sowing and some have not sown any yet.

Mr. Robinson and family are moving to their new home in Michigan this week. They have bought an eighty acre farm north of Grand Rapids, Mich. They are excellent people and the good wishes of their friends and neighbors go with them.

John Barber, of near Adrian, Mich., was here last week on business and calling on his relatives and friends in this part of the country where he resided all his life until a few years ago. He is looking well and reports his family well also.

The frequent rains lately are improving the wheat and grass prospects considerably, but still the outlook for a good wheat crop is poor.

George Webster and wife, who spent the winter at their daughters in Edgerton, are again back on their farm for the spring and summer seasons, enjoying their fine country home.

Many residents of Stafford and Wilmington townships have heard with regret and surprise of the death of James Rose, of Auburn. Mr. Rose, we are told, grew to manhood in Stafford. He is known to many and much respected by his many friends. Many think of attending his funeral Friday, at Auburn, at 2 o'clock p. m.

Edward Karle underwent a surgical operation at Detroit on Wednesday. He was accompanied to the hospital by Dr. Harrison.

The farewell ball and banquet given by the Crescendo club last Friday night was a very swell affair. The hall was filled with invited guests, and all enjoyed a fine time. The supper was served at the Waverly hotel The Crescendo club has disbanded for the summer.

J. E. Sturgis expects to return home Saturday from Sharon, Pa., and will be here about one week. Those wishing violin lessons arrange for time. He will do some piano tuning. Those wishing work done leave orders with his wife, phone 204. Prof. Bean has the following to say regarding Mr. Sturgis' tuning: "Your work was entirely satisfactory to Mr. Scoovgard & Co. He expressed himself as pleased. When we want the school piano tuned again we will see you." Dated Butler, Ind., April 7, 1909. 1t

The special services now in progress at the Christian church take on fresh interest as the meeting progresses. M. O. Johnson, of Edgerton, Ohio, is preaching forceful and convincing sermons each evening. The scriptures are handled in an intelligent manner and its messages are shown to be instructive on man's greatest problems. Special music is provided at each service. These meetings will continue through the coming week. Two special services are being arranged for the coming Lord's day. A hearty invitation is extended to everyone to attend these services.

Indian Opera

The Indian opera, "Powhattan" by the home talent of Butler, will be given at the opera house on Monday evening, May 3, under the auspices of the Pythian Sisters who have arranged with Mr. Wm A. Baker, of Chicago, to coach the company and furnish the elaborate Indian costumes.

Rehearsals have been in active progress for the past week, and excellent progress made. The music is said to be tuneful and catchy, and Mr. Baker says the talent of Butler is capable of giving a fine performance.

CAST OF CHARACTERS

Powhattan, king of Virginia, Dr. Kramer—Pocahontas, his favorite daughter, Mrs. H. T. Berkey—Laughing Star, joy of the tribe, Miss Nora Brown—Minnehaha, sweet singer of the tribe, Miss Grace Hendershot—Winona, another sweet singer, Miss Fern Fridenberger—Sunbeam, a little pappoose, Helen Moltz—Moonbeam, another one, Dorothy Tyson—Captain John Smith, a jolly rover, Eugene Oberlin—Captain Rolfe, a young Englishman, Dr. Berkey—Medicine Man, "heap big chief," Coy Pifer—Pathfinder, "heap little chief," M. L. Dannells—Tim O'Flanigan, Irish sailor, D. C. Baker, Jr.—Larry O'Gaff, another one, Paul Wilson—Pianist, Miss Ethel Nimmons—Chorus of Indian maidens, warriors and sailors—Dances by the American beauties, Indian sprites and pappooses—One hundred in the cast.

TWO YEAR OLD BOY BURNED TO DEATH

Harold, the two year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hefty, living five and one-half miles southwest of Butler, was burned to death about six o'clock Tuesday evening.

The parents of the boy were both absent from the house when the terrible accident occurred, Mr. Hefty being away from home and the mother was doing some work in the yard near the house.

A six year old son of the Heftys' who was playing on the lawn, saw the flames through the bedroom window and at once gave the alarm. Mrs Hefty ran into the house, but when she got into the room the clothes were all burned from the boy's body and his person was a terrible sight to behold.

Mrs. Hefty was prostrated, and Dr. Lake, of St. Joe, was called. The physician worked with the woman some time before she could be quieted enough to give her testimony to Coroner Briggs and Deputy Fred D. Webster who were called to the home.

Coroner Briggs says that it is not definitely known whether the little fellow got hold of matches or whether he poked fire out of the stove, but it is presumed that he had secured matches in some way, and these becoming ignited, his clothes caught fire and he was burned to death before assistance arrived.

Mr and Mrs. Hefty are well and favorably known throughout the county. No blame is attached to them, and the heartfelt sympathy of all is freely extended to the sorrow stricken family. The funeral was held Thursday.

Former U. S. Senator David Turpie died at his home in Indianapolis Wednesday morning, of heart disease, aged eighty years.

Frank Abrams and John Nichols will open a moving picture show in the Oberlin building, formerly occupied as a saloon. The gentlemen will remodel the room and fit it up in good style for the business. Mr. Abrams is a vocalist of local fame and has pleased many audiences with his excellent singing. Messrs Abrams and Nichols were at Toledo on Thursday purchasing an Edison machine for the work. The HERALD wishes them unbounded success. They give their first show Saturday night.

Rev. Edmund F. Albertson will deliver a sermon next Sunday morning on the theme, "Butler's Greatest Needs." In the evening he will lecture, the subject being, "Some Celebrated People I Have Met." The people Dr. Albertson will talk about are Cap Hobson, Gen. O. O. Howard, the late ex-President Harrison, D. L Moody and Admiral Dewey. The brotherhood will have charge of this meeting. Good music and a welcome for all. The lodges of the city have been invited to attend.

If the HERALD were to turn out job printing in as slovenly style and as full of errors as a competitor not a hundred miles away, the work would not be accepted and our office would be boycotted. A large bill recently printed and distributed about town would certainly make a star picture for a comic almanac. Prices are given in such a reckless manner that the printer of the bill must have turned the work over to the office devil or else thinks people are a set of dummies. We call attention to just two of the curious sentences. One gives the price of a suit valued $5 00 at $10 75. The other says $0 values go at $6 75.

The K. O. T. M. Interurban association meeting was held at Kendallville Tuesday evening with a good attendance. Supreme Record Keeper L. E Sisler, of Detroit, was present and gave a fine talk for the good of the order. Great Commander M. A. Clapper, of Hartford City, and J. W. Replogle, great record keeper, of Goshen, was there and thought the interurban association was a good thing for the order. Forty-one members of Fort Wayne tent were therewith a petition for their tent to join the association, which was accepted and the association will meet with Wayne tent June 15. Garrett reported the most candidates initiated since last meeting, and carried away the prize, a beautiful flag. The Kendallville Sir Knights certainly showed themselves right as entertainers.

Black Hand Outdid Shylock.

Alleged to have outdone Shylock in actually having cut portions of flesh from the breast of a man who refused them money, Salverto Roberto and Nicolo Digliotti were held for court without bail at Braddock, a suburb of Pittsburg, Pa. With his wounds bandaged, but weak from the loss of blood, Joseph Guglioto appeared at a Braddock bank in company with the two foreigners and asked to draw out $300. The teller called the interpreter and was told the story which resulted in the arrest and holding of the two men. At the hearing, Gugliotto said he had received several Black Hand letters demanding money, but ignored them. He said he was aroused from a sleep to find the two accused men standing over him. He said they demanded $300 and that when he refused one of them held him while the other slit his arms and face with a stiletto. Still he said he refused to comply with their demands until one of them began carving pieces out of his breast. Then he promised to get the money. The arrest folowed when Bank Teller George Todd suspected from the bleeding man's appearance that something was wrong.

Train Wreck Fatal to Three.

A washout sent a Grand Trunk freight train from Grand Haven, east bound, into the ditch one mile west of Grand Rapids, Mich. Three men were killed and one was fatally injured. The washout was caused by a terrific rainstorm. Hundreds of highway bridges were washed away and miles of fences are down. Roadways are washed away and in several places the water is up to the level of the Pere Marquette tracks. The Kalamazoo and Black rivers are far out of their banks and rising. There has been heavy damage near Zeeland and Hudsonville.

Man With Longest Name Is Drowned.

Death by drowning came to the man who claimed to have the longest name in the world. He disappeared a few days ago and confirmation of the drowning was obtained by finding the body in Perkins' creek, near Paducah, Ky. His full name was Arthur Hugh Thomas T. De Witt Talmage Hardin Eddy Lane Arland Linnie Marion Branch Sam Jones Pigg Reuben Walker Chiles. He was the son of the Rev. R. C. Chiles, superintendent of the rescue mission, of Paducah, and each name was for some minister of note.

Four Cattlemen Lynched by Mob.

About 200 citizens of Ada, Okla., practically all of them of the better class, who were thoroughly disgusted with the kind of "justice" meted out to criminals in the smaller towns of Oklahoma, took the law into their own hands and hanged four men for the murder of Deputy United States Marshal A. L. Bobbitt. The lynched victims are: J. B. Miller, Fort Worth, Tex., cattle man; B. B. Burrell, Duncan, Okla., ranch owner; Jesse West, Canadian, Tex., ranch owner; Joe Allen, Canadian, Tex., ranch owner.

Fatal Motor Car Accident.

John Niemitz, of Black Oak, Ind., was fatally injured by the skidding of his motor car on a slippery road. The car plunged down an embankment. Both of Niemitz's legs were broken and he was hurt internally, but he dragged himself nearly a mile to East Chicago for assistance.

TAFT IN TARIFF PLEA

President, in Message, Asks Congress to Revise Philippine Revenue System.

PAYNE BILL FORCES CHANGE

Recommendations of Secretary Dickinson and Gen. Edwards Are Transmitted with Act.

The President sent to Congress a special message in relation to the Philippine tariff. The message transmits recommendations by the Secretary of War for a revision of the Philippine tariff so as to permit as much customs revenue as possible for the islands and at the same time to extend to the islands the principle of a protective tariff for its industries.

Under the conditions which will arise from the enactment of the tariff bill pending in Congress, which provides under certain conditions for free trade between the Philippines and the United States, the revenues of th island will be considerably affected, and numerous protests have been received here op this account. The proposed amendments to the bill are to interfere as little as possible with these free-trade conditions and at the same time permit collection of ample revenue. The message and accompanying letters of recommendation from Secretary Dickinson and General Clarence R. Edwards, chief of the insular bureau of the War Department, with a copy of the proposed act, were submitted to both houses of Congress shortly after they convened.

General speaking, the bill submitted by the President makes a slight increase in the rates of duty now provided in the Philippine tariff, but its framers say its tendency is to insure, as far as practicable, the benefit of the Philippines market for American manufactures and products. The bill makes some additions to the free list. There will be an increase in internal-revenue duties, by which it is hoped to make up the loss which the Philippine Islands will sustain by the operations of the free-trade provisions in the pending Payne tariff bill. The internal-revenue laws for the Philippines are enacted by the Philippine assembly.

President Taft's Message.

"To the Senate and House of Representatives: I transmit herewith a communication from the Secretary of War inclosing one from the chief of the bureau of insular affairs, in which is transmitted a proposed tariff-revision law for the Philippine Islands.

"This measure revises the present Philippine tariff, simplifies it and makes it conform as nearly as possible to the regulations of the customs laws of the United States, especially with respect to packing and packages. The present Philippine regulations have been cumbersome and difficult for American merchants and exporters to comply with. Its purpose is to meet the new conditions that will arise under the section of the pending United States tariff bill, which provides, with certain limitations, for free trade between the United States and the islands. It is drawn with a view to preserving to the islands as much customs revenue as possible and to protect, in a reasonable measure those industries which now exist in the islands.

"The bill now transmitted has been drawn by a board of tariff experts, of which the insular collector of customs, Col. George R. Colton, was the president. The board held a great many open meetings in Manila and conferred fully with representatives of all business interests in the Philippine Islands. It is of great importance to the welfare of the islands that the bill should be passed at the same time with the pending Payne bill, with special reference to the provisions of which it was prepared.

"I respectfully recommend that this bill be enacted at the present session of Congress as one incidental to and required by the passage of the Payne bill.

"WILLIAM H. TAFT."

400 SLAIN AT ADANA.

Slaughter of Christians Continues, Two Americans Reported Killed.

Moslem fanaticism has broken out afresh at Adana, thirty-six miles from Mersina, Asiatic Turkey, where large numbers of Christians are said to have been killed. It is reported that two American missionaries have been murdered, but no names are given and the report has not yet been verified. One report says 400 Armenians have lost their lives and that many houses have been looted and burned. The British consul is said to have been wounded. The troops are powerless to control the situation and some of the soldiers are joining in the pillage of the city. The city has been aflame for four days and horrible massacres have been carried out in the streets. The foreign consuls have requested that war ships be sent to Mersina. Disorders have commenced at Tarsus, the little town between Adana and Mersina noted as the birthplace of the Apostle Paul, and many houses there were reported to have been burned. The number of victims at Tarsus is unknown.

BASEBALL SEASON OPENS.

Great Crowds in Several Cities Attend the First Games.

Immense crowds thronged the big league ball parks for the opening games of the baseball season Wednesday. The Cubs played to 16,000 people in Chicago and over 11,000 fans watched the Sox at Detroit. The Cubs won, 3 to 1, and the Sox lost, 0 to 2. Pittsburg won from the Cincinnati Reds and the Boston Doves trimmed Philadelphia. The only other American League game was at St. Louis, where Cleveland won, 4 to 2. Baseball got a banner start on what seems to be its most prosperous year.

The largest crowd that ever witnessed the inauguration of a baseball season in Cincinnati was out to see the Cincinnati and Pittsburg teams play. The Pittsburgs secured a lead in the first inning and gradually increased it through timely hitting and Fromme's wildness. Cincinnati had men on bases in nearly every inning, but was unable to get one of them home. The Pirates scored three runs. Before one of the largest crowds ever assembled in Washington Park, Indianapolis, champions of the American Association, defeated Toledo in the opening game. Opening the season at St. Louis with Cleveland, before one of the largest crowds that has ever witnessed a spring game, the St. Louis baseball team went down to defeat by a score of 4 to 2.

That the owner of the automobile may be held responsible for the act of his chauffeur in running down and injuring a pedestrian was established in the New York Supreme Court before Justice Fitzgerald and a jury.

BREAD COST RISES.

New York Fears Famine Rates if Wheat Corner Is Not Broken.

With flour up 40 cents a barrel and the prospects apparently good for a further rise, New York City is now facing the possibility of bread at 7 cents a loaf. What will appear to hundreds of thousands in the poorer quarters like famine rates for this staple bid fair to be forced as a result of the recent rise in the price of wheat. The Ghetto of New York has already felt the effect of the buoyancy of the Chicago wheat pit. Six cents a loaf is the price now charged by some bakeries, while the proprietors of hundreds of others declare that they cannot continue selling at 5 cents much longer, with flour of the better grades costing from $7 to $7.20 a barrel, against $6.60 to $6.80 a few days ago. They add, moreover, that with flour permanently up to the rates recently quoted even 6 cents would not give them any sort of a profit.

DOCTOR'S FAT RUM FEES.

Ten Thousand Prescriptions for Liquor at $1 Each.

The anti-saloon people of Morgantown, W. Va., who have been wondering for some time past why so many drunken men were seen on the streets since the county was voted "dry" over a year ago have been given a rude shock by District Attorney Boyd, who declares that the physicians and the druggists of Morgantown have been reaping the golden harvest that formerly went to the liquor men. According to announcement made in court by Prosecuting Attorney Boyd, one prominent physician alone has written 10,000 prescriptions for liquor during the past year. Mr. Boyd announced his intention of making wholesale prosecutions against the physicians. Similar conditions are said to exist through other "dry" districts.

STRAWBERRIES CAUSE ILLNESS.

Californians Poisoned by a Solution Used to Destroy Insects.

Scores of persons in Los Angeles, Cal., have been poisoned in the last few days by strawberries shipped from Japanese gardens near Gardena and from several other districts. None of the cases have been serious. Complaints were so numerous that Chief of Police Dishman sent a letter to the horticultural commission, asking its members to stop the use of poison to kill insects on strawberry plants. The Japanese practically are the only offenders, according to reports. Early in the season many worms appeared, as a last resort the gardeners used a powerful solution to destroy them.

DIES FOR MURDER OF MOTHER.

Youth Who Avenged Life in Reformatories Electrocuted.

For the murder of his mother, Susan Carlin, in her home in Brooklyn one year ago, Bernard Carlin, aged 22, was put to death by electricity in the State prison at Ossining, N. Y. Carlin had been an inmate of charitable or reformatory institutions a greater part of his life, beginning in infancy, when his father died. He blamed his mother for permitting him to remain in these institutions, and when he was released a year ago, went to his mother's home and killed her.

DENOUNCES WHEAT DEAL.

Secretary Wilson Predicts Patten's Corner Will "Go to Smash."

James Wilson, Secretary of Agriculture, said in answer to James A. Patten's charges that the figures of the Department of Agriculture concerning the wheat supply were inaccurate and untrustworthy: "Our figures are correct. That fellow in Chicago is engaged in a scheme to rob the consumer and to make money."

SEC. WILSON.

If Mr. Patten is correct there is a serious shortage in wheat in America. If Secretary Wilson is cororect there is no shortage at all, but only an artificial famine engendered by Mr. Patten for speculative purposes. Also, if Secretary Wilson is correct, Mr. Patten's deal will go to smash soon.

The Secretary of Agriculture insists that the government's report to the effect that there were 143,000,000 bushels of reserve wheat in the farmers' hands on March 1 was strictly correct and that he knows where the wheat is. "We do not get our information from postmasters!" exclaimed Secretary Wilson angrily when the Patten statement was shown him. "We get it from farmers who are reliable, conscientious men. We have been perfecting our system for gathering information for the last twelve years, and it is as correct and thorough as it is possible to get. To corner the wheat market successfully nowadays you have to keep buying and buying and buying. Finally the time comes when you can't buy any more, and then the smash comes."

MANY DIE IN BURNING HOTEL.

Six Bodies Found, Others Still in the Ruins of San Francisco Building.

Six bodies recovered and probably eight or ten others buried in the ruins; six injured, one fatally, and property loss of $125,000 are the results of an early morning fire that destroyed the St. George Hotel, a lodging-house for laborers, and eight other small buildings in San Francisco. The bodies taken to the morgue were so charred that identification was impossible. The hotel was a three-story frame building and burned so rapidly that none of the 200 occupants had time to dress, and many escaped by jumping to the roof of an adjoining workship. Scores clambered down the ladders of the firemen and the fire escapes, and four jumped to safety into the net held by the fire fighters. Of the regular boarders thirty are unaccounted for, but it is believed that many of them escaped in the confusion and have neglected to report their safety.

FAMILY IS THIN BLOODED.

Many Members Bleed to Death After Little Mishaps.

Gerald, the youngest son of Edward Lower of Tyrone, Pa., accidentally cut his mouth by falling on a tin toy, and in spite of all that medical aid could do he bled to death. This is the family's third child that has bled to death in three years. Ralph, age 2 years, fell down a flight of stairs and received a small cut on his face. The flow of blood could not be stopped and he died. A year ago Jessie, aged 2 years, fell and cut her head on the sharp edge of a wooden block. She also bled to death. Physicians say that the Lower family's blood is in such a condition that it fails to coagulate when it comes in contact with the air. Four other relatives of the Lower family have bled to death.

NO RELIEF IN SIGHT.

Flour May Go to $10 a Barrel, Say Millers.

Rise in the price of flour until the mills in America are selling spring wheat flour at $7 a barrel, or $1.30 more than a year ago, is brought to light as one of the effects of the present condition of the wheat market and the country's supply of the cereal. According to the Chicago Daily News, managers of the Washburn-Crosby Company, the Pillsbury-Washburn Company and the Northwestern Consolidated Milling Company, which operate what are declared the largest mills in the United States, and practically fix the price of flour, say there is no relief in sight from present conditions, and every indication is that the price of flour will continue to soar and may go to $10 a barrel. The rise in the wholesale millers' price is being followed by a rise in the price to brokers and consumers and will result in materially affecting the price of bread and bakery goods. The price of rye flour and other breadstuffs has also been increased, the rise in the price of rye flour per barrel being about 30 cents in less than a month.

The managers of the milling companies deny that there is any combination to increase prices or to control the business. They insist that the rise in the price of flour is due to the scarcity of wheat and breadstuffs in Europe and other countries, to the insufficient supply in the United States in the light of the demands which are now being made and to the general wheat situation.

The price for wheat will be stiff all through the summer, the millers declare. The United States has grown a larger crop than a year ago, but the world's supply is short. There is a wheat, flour and bread famine in Mexico. The price of Argentine wheat is $1.25 per bushel and of Winnipeg or Canadian wheat about $1.27. The shipments from Argentina are short and Argentina has been shipping principally to Liverpool. This increased the Liverpool demand for American shipments.

It requires five bushels of wheat to make a barrel. Taken at $1.20 per bushel the wheat in each barrel of flour costs $6.45. Add to that 40 cents for sacks or wood basins, 20 cents for freight, 15 cents for delivery, 5 cents for storage and 25 cents for selling and carrying accounts. That will make the cost price of flour $7.50, from which deduct 40 cents for "off-alls" or the bran and other products saved from the wheat, which makes the price $7.10. And in some instances the freight, delivery, storage and other expenses are higher than those given. It would not be surprising in the light of present existing conditions and in the face of the outlook for the future that flour would go to $10 per barrel.

SOLDIERS OF SULTAN START A REVOLUTION

Two Battalions in Constantinople Surround the Parliament Building.

DEMAND OFFICIALS GET OUT.

Panic Rules Turkish Capital, and People Shut Shops—Mutiny Due to Young Turk Movement.

Serious disturbances of a revolutionary character have broken out in Constantinople. The situation is grave. The mutinous troops made demonstration against the building of the Turkish parliament. Panic has seized the people of Constantinople, and all through the city shops were hurriedly closed. The cabinet resigned and it is reported that Kiamil Pasha, the former grand vizier, has been charged with the formation of a new ministry.

The present grand vizier of Turkey is Hilmi Pasha. He was appointed Feb. 14 in succession to Kiamil Pasha. Hilmi formerly was minister of the interior, and before holding this office he served as inspector general of Macedonia. Ali Riza Pasha is minister of war and marine, and is grand master of artillery.

The changes in the cabinet in February showed the absolute control of the political situation by the Young Turk party, or committee of union and progress, which virtually imposed on the Sultan a ministry of its own nominees. The committee publicly repudiated any intention to overthrow the Sultan or to establish a military dictatorship, but the crisis did not promise well for the stability of the throne or the success of parliamentary government. It has been a question how the moderate elements of the empire would regard this assumption of absolute power by an irresponsible committee.

Two battalions of troops quartered in the ministry of war marched out headed by their officers, and went by way of Divan and John streets to the Mosque of St. Sophia, from which point they surrounded the building of parliament. They demanded the dismissal of the grand vizier, the president of the chamber and the minister of war.

LOT YIELDS $8,500 TREASURE.

Bought for $116 with Aged Man's Buried Hoard on It.

While digging a post hole in an abandoned lot Lexington, Ky., workmen found a brass kettle containing $8,500 in gold and silver that apparently had been buried for half a century. The lot formerly belonged to J. C. Dewitt, an aged man, who died several years ago. The lot was sold at commissioners' sale a short while ago for $116.

OCEAN NOTE ASKS AID FOR GIRL

Writer Tells of Being Drugged at San Francisco and Taken to Sea.

After drifting for weeks in the Pacific Ocean, a message purporting to tell of the plight of Rosaline Rockayn, a Denver girl, who was drugged at San Francisco and carried out to sea by a man, was washed up on the water front at Oakland, Cal. The paper was contained in a bottle which the girl threw from the cabin porthole of her prison ship, trusting that her appeal would reach some one who would inform her relatives and bring about her release.

COMMERCIAL AND FINANCIAL

CHICAGO.

In the sustained high volume of payments through the banks and improvement in credits the business conditions are encouraging. High prices for breadstuffs and labor disputes are temporary cross-currents, and leading retail lines require more seasonable weather for an ample reduction of merchandise, but manufacturing makes some progress, freight transportation increases and agriculture has started with an excellent outlook.

Metal and woodworking gather strength from the wider demands for supplies, and iron producers have less difficulty in negotiating contracts for future deliveries, although no specially large individual tonnages appear in the bookings.

Increasing inquiries impart a better tone to railway equipment, forge and foundry operations. Rail mills in this district have accumulated much forward work, while the orders have more breadth for plates, pipe and merchant shapes.

Some gain is noted in new demands for furniture, including export orders and the outputs extend in boxmaking and planing mill materials.

Earnings of the Chicago steam roads exhibit further gains while freight offerings increase in heavy materials factory products grain and general merchandise.

Farm reports testify to rapid advance in spring work, more acreage being prepared and the winter wheat and rye do well with higher temperatures and moisture.

Bank clearings $261,276,761, exceed those of corresponding week in 1908 by 11.1 per cent and compare with $234,209,724 in 1907.

Failures reported in the Chicago district number 21, against 21 last week, 21 in 1908 and 17 in 1907. Those with liabilities over $5,000 number 5, against 4 last week, 6 in 1908, and 9 in 1907. —Dun's Weekly Review of Trade.

NEW YORK.

Weather, crop and industrial reports are still very irregular, rendering general characterization difficult. Taken as a whole, there is, however, a slightly larger business doing, this being particularly true of retail trade in sections where weather permits and in bookings for fall and winter delivery at wholesale.

In portions of the South and in the East generally there is more confident purchasing, higher prices for cotton aiding in the former instance, while the advance of the season helps trade along the Atlantic seaboard. Business on the Pacific coast has expanded slightly, particularly in California. In the central West trade at retail is expanding slowly and a rather better business is reported with country merchants, but jobbing activity is not as pronounced as it was some weeks ago.

Industry is in a rather spotted condition. There is more doing in iron and steel, but largely, it is claimed, at the expense of prices. The improvement noted in the cotton goods industry is maintained. Prices of staple goods are firm. There is more doing in silk manufacturing. Women's wear woolen goods are in good request and worsted goods and yarns are strong, reflecting the continued firmness in raw wool.

Business failures in the United States for the week ending with April 15 were 201, against 227 last week, 261 in the like week of 1908, 167 in 1907, 167 in 1906 and 183 in 1905. The week's failures in Canada number 27, which compares with 38 last week and 25 in the like week of 1908.—Bradstreet's Commercial Report.

Matt

A TALE OF A CARAVAN

By Robert Buchanan

CHAPTER IX.

When they had followed the foot path for some distance and had gained the greensward on the top of the cliffs, the young man threw himself upon the grass, and invited Matt to do the same. It was very pleasant there, soothing both to the eye and to the mind. The cliff was covered—somewhat sparsely, it is true—with stunted grass; and just below, on their right, lay the ocean, calm as any mill pond, but sighing softly as the water kissed the rocks and flowed back again with rhythmic throbs. On their left lay the sand hills, glittering like dusty gold in the sun rays, while just before and below them was the village.

"Do you see that house standing all by itself, close to shore?" said Matt, pointing to the cottage where she lived. "That belongs to William Jones. And, look you now, there is William Jones on the rocks!"

Looking down, Brinkley beheld a figure moving along the rocks, just where the water touched the edge.

"Very lazy of William Jones," he said. "Why isn't he at work?"

"At work?"

"Yes, tilling the fields or fishing. By the way, I forgot to ask you, is he a fisherman?"

"No, he ain't," said Matt. "He's a wrecker, he is!"

"A what?" exclaimed Brinkley.

"A wrecker," continued Matt, as if wrecking was the most natural occupation in the world. Brinkley looked at her, imagining that she must be practicing some wild joke. He had certainly heard of wreckers, but he had always believed that they were a species of humanity which had belonged to past centuries, and were now as extinct as a mammoth. But the girl evidently meant what she said, and thought there was nothing extraordinary in the statement.

"That sea don't look ugly, does it?" she continued, pointing at the ocean. "But it is; there's rocks out there, where the ships split on; then they go all to pieces, and the things come ashore."

"And what becomes of all the things, Matt?"

"Some of them's stole, and some of them's took by the coast guards. They do say," she added, mysteriously, "as there's lots of things—gold and silver—hid among them sand hills. Before the coast guards come all the folks was wreckers, like William Jones, and they used to get what come ashore, and they used to hide it in the sand hills."

"Indeed! Then, if that is the case, why don't they take the treasure up and turn it into money?"

"Why? Because the sand hills is always changing and shifting about, they are; though they know well enough the things is there, there's no finding of them."

"I always thought William Jones was poor?"

"So he is, he says!" replied Matt; "because, though he be always foraging, he don't find much now on account of the coast guard chaps."

After they had rested themselves, they went a little further up the cliff, then they followed a narrow winding path which brought them to the shore below. Here Matt, who seemed to be pretty well grounded in the history of the place, pointed him out the wonders of the coast. She showed him the caves, which tradition said had been formerly used as wreckers' haunts and treasure stores, but which were now washed by the sea, and covered with slimy weeds; then she brought him to a promontory where they told her she herself had been found. This spot Brinkley examined curiously, then he looked at the girl.

"I suppose you had clothes on when you came ashore, didn't you, Matt?"

"Why, of course I had. William Jones has got them!"

"Has he? Where?"

"In his cave, I expect."

"His cave! Where is that?" asked Brinkley, becoming very much interested.

"Dunno," returned Matt; "perhaps it's somewhere here about. I've seen William Jones come about here, I have, but I never could track him!"

Matt's information on the subject was so vague that it seemed useless to institute a search; so, after a regretful look at the rocks, Brinkley proposed that they should saunter back along the shore.

"By the way," said he, "I want you to introduce me to William Jones."

"To William Jones?"

"Yes. Strange as the fancy may seem to you, I should like for once in my life to stand face to face—with a real live wrecker."

They made their way back along the coast, until they reached William Jones' cottage. Here they paused, principally for Brinkley to take a glance at the quaint dwelling, then they crossed the threshold. What sort of a place he had got into, it was utterly impossible for Brinkley to tell; it was so dark he could see nothing. Having crossed the threshold, therefore, he paused, but Matt went fearlessly forward, struck a light, and ignited the rush light on the table.

"William Jones," said she, "here is the painter!"

By the light of the flickering rush light Brinkley now looked about him. At a glance he noted some of the details of the queer little room; then his eye fell upon the occupants whom, from Matt's description, he recognized as William Jones, and the grizzly author of his being.

The old man, who, Brinkley perforce admitted, certainly bore some resemblance to the Rembrandtish head which Matt had recognized, sat dozing fitfully by the hearth, while his son was busily employed in mending an old lantern.

Upon the entrance of Brinkley the lantern was quickly thrown aside, and William Jones, assuming a most obsequious manner, hastened to give a welcome to the stranger. Brinkley was amused. He accepted William Jones' offer of a seat, then he lit up his briarroot pipe, and, while smoking lazily, he put a few questions to his host. But if he expected to gain information of any kind he was soon undeceived. William Jones was no fool. Combined with excessive avarice, he possessed all the cunning of the fox, and the moment he saw that the stranger was pumping him, he was on his guard.

Presently, however, his curiosity gained the day. Categorically, in his turn, he began to question Brinkley about his doings.

"I suppose now, master," said he, "you travel about a deal in that cart o' your'n?"

Brinkley explained that the "cart" in question had been in his possession only a few months.

"But I traveled a good deal before I got it," he explained. "This time last year I was in Ireland."

"In Ireland, master?"

"Yes, on the west coast; do you know it?"

William Jones shook his head.

"There be plenty of wreck there, ain't there?" said he, suddenly.

"Wreck?" repeated Brinkley.

"Yes, I've heard tell o' wonderful storms and big ships breaking up. Look ye now, they do tell wonderful tales; and I wonder sometimes if all they says be true."

Brinkley looked at his host for a minute or so in silent wonder, for the little man was transformed. Instead of gazing about him with the stupid expression which up till now his face had worn, his face expressed all the keenness of a fox hound well on the scent. There was also another curious thing which the young man noticed; that the word "wreck" seemed to act like magic on the other member of the Jones household. At the first mention of it the old man started from his sleep; and he now sat staring wildly before him, evidently imagining he was standing on a headland, gazing out to sea.

"Wreck!" he murmured. "Ay, there it be, driftin' in wi' the wind and the tide, William—driftin' in wi' the tide."

"Shut up, old man," said William, giving his father a nudge; then turning again to Brinkley, he said: "Be them tales true, master?"

"Eh? Oh, yes; perfectly true," said Brinkley, being in a lively humor, and determined to give his host a treat.

The expression in the eyes of William Jones became even more greedy.

"P'raps," he said, "you've seen some of them wrecks?"

"Dear me, yes," answered Brinkley, determined to give the reins to his imagination. "I've seen any number of them. Huge ships broken up like match boxes, and every soul on board them drowned; then afterward——"

"Ah, yes, mister," said William Jones, eagerly as the other paused; "arter——"

"Well, afterward, my friend, I've seen treasures come ashore that would have made you and me, and a dozen others such, rich for life."

"Dear, dear! and what become of it, mister—tell me that!"

"What became of it?" repeated Brinkley, whose imagination was beginning to give way; "why, it was appropriated, of course, by the population."

"And didn't you take your share, mister?"

"I?" repeated Brinkley, who was getting muddled; "well, no—firstly, because I didn't wish to—I have a superstitious horror of wearing dead men's things; and secondly, because I could not have done so had I wished. The people are clannish; they wanted it all for themselves, and would have killed any interfering stranger."

"I suppose, mister, there be no coast guard chaps there?" said William Jones.

"Oh, dear, no! No coast guards."

"Ah!" sighed the old man, coming out of his trance. "It warn't so long ago when there warn't no coast guard chaps here neither. Then times was better for honest men. On a dark night 'twas easy to put a light on the headland, and sometimes we got a prize or two that way, didn't we, William dear? but now——"

"You shut up!" roared William, giving his parent a very forcible dig in the ribs. "You don't know what you're talkin' about, you don't. The old 'un is a bit queer in the head, master," he explained; "and he's allus a-dreamin', he is. There ain't no prizes here, the Lord knows; it's a'most as much as we can do to git a bit o' bread. Matt knows that; don't ee, Matt?"

But whatever Matt knew she evidently meant to keep to herself, for she gave no reply. Presently, after a little more general conversation, Brinkley rose to go. He offered a two-shilling piece to William Jones; and, somewhat to his amazement, that worthy accepted it gratefully.

"Good-by, Matt," said Brinkley. But in a trice Matt was beside him.

"I'm going to show you the way," she explained as she went out with him into the air.

"Whew!" said Brinkley when they were fairly clear of the cabin; "the open air is better than that den; but then William Jones is very poor, isn't he, Matt?"

"He says he is."

"But don't you believe it?"

"Perhaps I do, and perhaps I don't; it don't matter to you, does it?"

"Not the least in the world."

They went on for a while in silence; then Matt, who had been furtively watching his face all the while, spoke again:

"You ain't angry, are you, master?" she asked.

"I angry?—what for?"

"Because I said that just now."

"Dear me, no; whatever you might say, Matt, wouldn't offend me."

If he expected to please her by this he was mistaken.

"That's because you don't care. Well, I don't care neither, if you don't."

She ran a little ahead of him, and continued to precede him until she gained the last sand hill, and caught a glimpse of the Caravan. Then she paused.

"You don't want me to go no further, do you?"

"No."

"All right—good-by."

She gave a bound, like a young deer, and prepared to start for a swift run back, but the young man called her.

"Matt, come here!"

She came up to him. He put his arm about her shoulders, bent over her upturned face, and kissed her. In her impulsive way, Matt returned the kiss ardently; then, to her amazement, she gave one strange look into his eyes—blushed violently, and hung her head.

"Come, give me another, Matt," he said.

But Matt would not comply. With one jerk she freed herself from him; then, swift as lightning she ran back across the hills toward the sea.

CHAPTER X.

That night the young man of the Caravan had curious dreams, and throughout them all moved like a presiding fairy, Matt of Aberglyn. Sometimes he was wandering on storm-swept shores, watching the wrecks of mighty argosies; again, he was in mysterious caverns underneath the ground, searching for and finding buried treasure; still again, he was standing on the decks of storm-tossed vessels, while the breakers thundered close at hand, and the bale fires burned on lonely headlands. But at all times, and in all places, Matt was his companion.

And, curiously enough, Matt in his dream was very different to the Matt of waking reality; taller and brighter—in fact, as beautiful as a vision can be; so that his spirit was full of a strange sensation of love and pity, and the touch of the warm little hand disturbed his spirit with mysterious joy. So vivid did this foolish dream become at last that he found himself seated on a sunny rock by the sea, by Matt's side; and he was talking to her like a lover, with his arm around her waist; and she turned to him, with her great eyes fixed on his, and kissed him over and over again, so passionately that he awoke!

It was blowing hard, and the rain was pelting furiously on the roof of the Caravan. He tried to go to sleep again, but the face of Matt (as he had seen it in his dream) kept him for a long time awake.

"Now, young man," he said to himself, "this is idiotic. In the first place, Matt is a child, not a young woman; in the second place, she is a vulgar little thing, not a young lady; in the third place, you ought to be ashamed of yourself for thinking of sentiment at all in such a connection. Is your brain softening, youngster? or are you laboring under the malign influence of William Jones? The kiss you gave to this unsophisticated daughter of the desert was paternal, or say, amicable; it was a very nice kiss, but it has no right to make you dream of stuff and nonsense."

But the influence of the dream was over him, and in that half-sleeping, half-waking state, he felt like a boy in love. He found himself calculating the age of his own friend. Let him see! it was fifteen years since, in her own figurative expression, she "come ashore," and the question remained, How old was she on that interesting occasion? As far as he could make out from her appearance, she could not be more than sixteen. For a damsel of that age, her kiss was decidedly precocious.

At last he tumbled off again, and dreamed that Matt was a young lady of beautiful attire and captivating manners, to whom he was "engaged;" and her speech, strange to say, was quite poetical and refined; and they walked together, hand in hand, to a country church on a green hill side, and were just going to enter when who should appear upon the threshold but Mr. Monk, of Monkshurst? But they passed him by, and stood before the altar, where the parson stood in his white robes, and when the parson asked aloud whether any one saw any just reason or impediment that the pair should be joined in holy matrimony, the same Monk stepped forward, with a Mephistophelian smile, and cried, "Yes, I do!" On which the young man awoke again in agitation, to find that it was broad daylight and a fine fresh summer morning.

WHEN FOOD WAS SCARCE.

Interesting Statement of Prices Paid for Vituals in Times of War.

The following interesting statement of the prices that were paid for food during the siege of 1870 is a translation from the journal of a French officer stationed in Paris at the time, says What-to-Eat Magazine:

"Toward the middle of October we had to make up our mind to sacrifice the animals of the zoological garden. The elephants and many other beasts were bought by M. Debos, the owner of the English meat shop in avenue Friedland. The meat of the elephants was sold from $10 to $12 a kilogram (two pounds), the trunk commanding the highest price, $16 a kilogram. The trunk and feet were both declared delicious by all gourmands. In the same shop a pair of young wolves were sold for $2.50 per pound. The meat was soft and without taste. The biggest price was paid for a young live lamb that had been swiped by a 'franctieur' from the enemy. One hundred dollars was paid for it.

"Here is an exact price list of some victuals towards the end of the siege:

MIN.... .. ..* .... ofw(nflyzu'

Two pounds of horseflesh	$ 5.00
One ham	16.00
A whole cat	3.00
A rabbit	10.00
One turkey	30.00
One egg	1.00
A rat	.50
A pigeon	3.00
One pound of butter	6.00
A pound of beans	1.50
A peck of carrots	2.00
One cabbage head	2.00
One stick of celery	.50
Wood to burn (100 pounds)	2.00

"Even the rich had to live on the meagrest diet and to take into their menu things that till then only the trapper in the virgin forests was supposed to eat. I leave it to you to imagine what kind of meals were served in the small restaurants and boarding houses.

"Moreover, everybody had to submit to the strictest orders. People stood in file before the butcher and baker shops to wait for their turns. Each household was furnished with a card from the municipality, authorizing the bearer to buy a certain amount of meat and bread. The cook, the housewife, the young girl, the little child (men never go shopping in France), were posted for hours before the shops in rain and snow, with wet feet, shivering with cold. The unfortunate ones endured without a murmur these hardships. Women throughout the time of the siege were setting an example of courage and self-abnegation not always followed by men.

"It was a sad and touching spectacle, these long files of women, nearly all dressed in black, grouped before the doors of the dealers, watched by the national guard, with whom they at first were laughing and chatting, till the sufferings from the cold had silenced the laugh and sometimes brought forth the tears.

"But in spite of all precautions the stores one by one were exhausted, the provisions, put in too late before the siege, were used up, and while the babies, deprived of milk, died in great numbers, or, fed on sweet wine and bread, pined slowly away, the big people tried to find new resources to prolong their lives."

Not a Favored Location.

The beauties and wonders of nature as displayed in Vancouver have formed the theme of many a traveler's rhapsody, but it appears that there are people who do not appreciate them. One such woman, born and bred in Vancouver, recently visited in New York.

"It must be wonderful to have lived and grown up in such a place," said a New Yorker who had traveled round the world.

"Why, I don't know," said the native of Vancouver, without enthusiasm. "We've just got the mountains and the sea—that's all."

More than half the freight tonnage of the railroads of this country are products of the mines.

Ways of Women

Blue Monday.

Look a-here, Mary Ann,
You stop your complainin';
I know it's a-rainin'
As hard as it can.
But what are you gainin'?
Is't th' Lord you are trainin'?
Well—he ain't explainin'
His reasons to Man!

Look a-here, Emmy Lou,
I know it's Monday,
But in six days comes Sunday,
So quit bein' blue!
You'd think by the whinin'
There warn't no bright shinin',
Wasn't yesterday shinin'?
Ain't Zeb courtin' you?

Life's chock full o' Sundays
To make up for Mondays!
Emmy Lou—Mary Ann,
Jes' you smile while you can!

The Unpopular Woman.

Who is she? Why is she unpopular? Is she to blame, or is she the object of a diabolical conspiracy to shut her out from the enjoyment of a circle of friends?

Did you ever notice how quickly, easily and amusingly she tears a new acquaintance to tatters, or with what gusto she rolls under her tongue a choice morsel of unpleasant gossip about an acquaintance of longer standing? Did you mark her intuitive appreciation of small faults and little vanities, and her unmistakable delight in magnifying them or holding them up to ridicule?

Then you know she has not one friend, because those who might be friends are afraid. They see she is sharp and cruel. They have heard her keen satire, her sarcastic jibes.

This type of woman always gives you the uncomfortable feeling that the moment you leave her she is going to make merry at your expense. For that reason you never quite gave her your confidence. The longer she persists in her bad habit the less likely she is to ever reform, and unless she reforms she cannot expect to win friends.

The old proverb warns us not to speak ill of the dead. Common sense protests against speaking ill of the living. And herein is the true explanation of the unpopular woman.—Chicago Journal.

Reducing Your Weight.

The following familiar table of heights and weights may be lowered with advantage fully five to ten pounds in every instance in the weight of women:

Height.	Weight.
5 feet 1 inch	120 pounds
5 feet 2 inches	126 pounds
5 feet 3 inches	133 pounds
5 feet 4 inches	136 pounds
5 feet 5 inches	142 pounds
5 feet 6 inches	145 pounds
5 feet 7 inches	148 pounds
5 feet 8 inches	155 pounds
5 feet 9 inches	162 pounds
5 feet 10 inches	169 pounds
5 feet 11 inches	174 pounds
6 feet 0 inches	178 pounds

A woman who has lost twelve pounds in three weeks, and lost it very satisfactorily from her hips, declares that the feat was accomplished by simply dropping and picking up a handkerchief twenty times, night and morning. Standing in her stocking feet and without any tight clothing she drops the handkerchief directly in front of her toes and stoops to pick it up ten times with one hand and ten times with the other; the trick, of course, being to recover the wisp of cambric without bending the knees. The exercise is repeated twenty times again at night.

Copper Colored Satin.

A stunning creation of rich copper colored satin, with sleeves, yoke border and band across front of heavy lace dyed to match. On either side there is a sash of black satin, starting from shoulder and extending to hem of skirt, passing under the lace bands just below knee depth. The tucker and stock are finely plaited cream silk mousseline. The turban is baby caracul with a wreath of velvet roses in same shade as satin, with natural foliage.

What Is Tuberculosis

It is the ever present scourge of the human race. It is called consumption when the lungs are affected. Taken in all its forms, it is the cause of one-seventh of all deaths. The germs of the disease are most often carried in the sputum of a consumptive and are usually distributed in the form of fine dust that is blown about by the air.

But consumption is a preventable disease. The germs are killed by sunlight and fresh air. In damp, dark places they will live indefinitely. People who live in overcrowded and badly ventilated rooms are especially liable to to contract the disease.

No Mirror in Sick Room.

A trained nurse of long experience emphasized the necessity of keeping mirrors out of the sickroom. The patient should never be allowed to look at one, as the ravages wrought by illness in one's own face gives a shock which it is hard for the nurse to soothe away. Cases have been known in which a patient being allowed a glimpse of himself at a critical point of the illness took a turn for the worse, and from that time forward sank rapidly.

To Remove Pencil Marks.

Pencil marks can sometimes be removed from white paint by gently rubbing them with bread crumbs in the direction of their course (not across) or by rubbing with a slice of lemon or raw potato. In more obstinate cases all traces can be removed with a soft piece of linen moistened with pure turpentine, or benzine, taking care to wipe it off quickly with a dry rag afterward. The polish can be restored to the surface by lightly rubbing with a soft rag dipped in a very little linseed oil, or by just polishing with a little whiting. If the pencil has left indentation marks they can be got out by laying a piece of felt that has been wrung out of water over the place, then pressing a very hot iron over the felt.

Home Remedies.

For soft corns, bathe the foot and place a bit of absorbent cotton, which has been dipped in sweet oil, between the toes night and morning.

To remove warts—apply oil of cinnamon three times daily. Five cents' worth will be sufficient.

When a patient is suffering from fever and the tongue becomes coated, wash with glycerine. One application will make the tongue clean.

A good poultice for an abscess is to bake or boil a white turnip, mash and mix with two tablespoonfuls of unsalted lard and five drops of laudanum. This poultice, made according to directions, will break an abscess when all other remedies fail.

Suits with Two Skirts.

The most general fashion during the last season among smart women has been to have two skirts to the desirable tailor-made suit. Thus for street wear the well-dressed woman appears in a walking skirt; then if she wants to go to a bridge party or tea in a hurry, all she has to do is to change her blouse, slip on another long skirt to be used with the same coat and she is suitably gowned for any dressy occasion. It is fashionable economy to make the same coat do for two skirts.

Hickory Oil for Boys.

An exchange gives this as the result of interviewing thirty business men and thirty loafers: The thirty business men had all been flogged freely by their parents when they were boys, while out of the thirty loafers twenty-seven had been "mamma's darlings" and the other three had been raised by their grandmothers.

Value of Proper Breathing.

It is now generally conceded that people who breathe deeply and so use their lungs to the fullest capacity seldom become the victims of consumption. Moreover, those thus afflicted who persistently employ the right method recover, unless they are in the advanced stages of this dread disease. A few simple exercises employed every morning on rising before an open window or in a well-ventilated room will have a marked effect. Try this for a week at least and note the results.

Baby's Weight.

A 1-year-old baby should weigh 20½ pounds.

If healthy, the gain should be just 6 pounds the next year.

At 3 the weight should be 31 pounds, and at 4 35 pounds.

The normal baby will weigh 41 pounds at 5, and 45 pounds at the age of 6 years.

During the next four years—up to 10—the weight should be 49½, 54½, 60 and 66½ pounds.

If baby has kept close to his average the chances for continued good health are bright.

Cushion Covers.

Burlap and craftsman's canvas are much used for cushion covers, and really beautiful effects may be brought out with very little effort. A design, conventional or otherwise, cut from cretonne and applied with an embroidery stitch, will make a brave showing at the expense of little time or trouble. Another, cock feathers drawn diagonally across the pillow and worked, with mercerized thread in natural colorings. Craftsman canvas is $1 a yard up, fifty inches wide. Burlap is inexpensive.

Fringed Ruching Again.

Some of us remember the fringed silk ruching which trimmed our mothers' gowns and manties nearly a score of years ago. Those ruches were made of stiff silk, raveled out at the edges and plaited into a full ruche. Now the raveled ruche comes back, introduced by Doeuilldt, a Paris dressmaker, and the frock on which the ruche is used is called appropriately a "polonaise."

Life as a Duty.

It would pay pleasure seekers to try the old plan of looking on life as a duty, where pleasures came by accident or kindness, and were heartily, gratefully enjoyed. It stands to reason that if you are deliberately arranging to get pleasure, and plenty of it, you can not enjoy it as much as if your life consisted of duties, and your pleasures came by the way.

Advice of a Novelist.

A girl who was fond of scribbling stories once asked a well-known novelist how she could succeed, and the novelist answered: "Oh, when you've written something, just imagine somebody else did it—some one you hate—and go for it without mercy. Then set to and write it over again; indeed, write it again and again, always repeating the ruthless criticism part of the program."

No More Children.

Dr. Walter F. Wilcox, head of the department of statistics at Cornell University, says that in the last fifty years there has been a decrease of about thirty a year in the proportion of children to every thousand women, and if this rate is to continue for a century and a half more there will be no children left.

The Proper Form.

Whether the unknown woman be married or unmarried, she should be addressed "Dear Madam."

CHARMING DINNER GOWN.

This stunning frock is adapted from the Directoire modes, with the high-waisted skirt of the Empire and the fichu-like drapery of another time charming merged into one. It is of pale blue satin, veiled with gray chiffon. The upper part of the bodice and the sleeves under the chiffon are of white lace, a ruffling of which appears at the elbow. The embroidery which encircles the corsage and borders the tunic-like overskirt is of pale blue and silver. The hat for this costume is of dull blue panne velvet, with marabout to match and a pale gray aigrette caught with a huge white stone.

REVIEW OF INDIANA

Peter Noggle and Harry Cox, of Warsaw, were thrown from their wagon in a runaway accident and despite the fact that Mr. Noggle is past 80 years of age, he escaped injury.

Two brothers were recently married to two sisters at the First Methodist church parsonage in Brazil. They were Curtis E. Jones and Miss Beryl Jones and Roy M. Jones and Miss Gladys Jones. Though similar in name, they were not related. All live near Saline City.

David Hamilton, manager of the Hamilton theater, North Manchester, has been arrested on two charges. One is having no incombustible curtain in the theater, and the other having insufficient exits. Hamilton gave bond and will contest. The State Inspector caused the arrest.

An automobile driven by Thomas Stevenson, of Indianapolis, frightened a horse belonging to Louis Cobbler, of Shelbyville, which was hitched to a buggy, and Mr. and Mrs. Cobbler and two other occupants were thrown from the vehicle. Mr. Cobbler fell into a barbed wire fence and his face was badly cut, while the others escaped with a few bruises.

Mary A., widow of John Reddick, a resident of Knightstown since before the war, died as the result of injuries received two weeks ago by falling from a stepladder. She lived alone and after her fall, which broke her left leg between the knee and the hip, lay for nearly twenty-four hours before she was discovered. Mrs. Reddick was seventy-eight years old and leaves no near relatives.

When John Rinard, sixty-eight years old, is dead at her home in Mooreland, Mrs. Rinard went into the barn lot to milk a cow and the animal, becoming suddenly enraged, attacked her. Her aged husband was standing close by, but before he could give her any assistance the animal had injured the woman beyond recovery. Mrs. Rinard died in a short time and before medical aid could be obtained.

When Representative Charles Stevens, of Gibson county, introduced in the recent legislature a bill calling for a bounty on rats, he won international fame. The proposed law was favorably discussed at the first annual meeting of the International Society for the Extermination of Vermin, held in London a few days ago. A rat bounty bill will probably be introduced in the English Parliament.

Five hundred school children searched the city of Auburn at the noon hour one day last week for little Dorothy Stroud the two-and-a-half-year-old child of Mr. and Mrs. B. C. Stroud, who was lost for three hours when she wandered a half mile from home. The whole city was excited over the disappearance. She was found playing in the sand, wholly unconscious of what had happened. It was feared that she had been kidnapped. Mr. Stroud is a traveling man.

Mrs. M. G. Stewart, of Westport, was seriously burned about the face by the explosion of a bucket of gravy. The members of the W. R. C. and G. A. R. were preparing for a reception to be given to the members and their families and some one had brought a bucket of gravy and placed it on the stove to heat. The lid had not been removed to allow the steam to escape and just as Mrs. Stewart started to lift the bucket from the stove the lid was blown off the bucket and the hot gravy enveloped her whole face. Before assistance arrived she had been badly burned.

Thomas Rankin, of New Albany, deaf for a number of years, has regained his hearing in an unusual manner. While seated in his home reading a newspaper he was startled by a loud report, followed by another a moment later, and he thought a revolver had been discharged in the room. He was dazed for a moment and then noticed he could hear the ticking of a clock, which he had been unable to do for years. Fearing the recovery of his hearing was only temporary, he did not tell of his good fortune until the following morning, when he found his hearing was still good, and informed his family.

While attempting to shoot a dog that was supposed to be mad, Patrolman Hevron of Elwood, was attacked by the brute and narrowly escaped being bitten. He saved himself from injury by forcing his "billy" in the dog's mouth as it plunged at him and, while it was trying to gnaw the leather, shot it in the head, killing it instantly. The dog had been terrorizing the territory on the north side of the city of Elwood and after biting several other dogs, had taken refuge under a house. The family locked the doors and telephoned for the police. It was while pulling the animal from under the house that the patrolman was attacked. Five other dogs were shot as a result of being bitten by the supposed mad dog, and a close watch is being kept for others that might be affected.

While trying to hold his frightened horse, which became scared at an automobile, Lemuel Armstrong, a farmer near Princeton was kicked on the knee by the animal and it is believed will be crippled for life.

M. B. Stults, who represented Huntington county in the state legislature in 1905 and 1907, fell down a flight of stairs at his furniture store in Huntington and suffered a fracture of the humerus of the right arm near the shoulder.

Cyrus Sampson, of Owensville, found a big bundle of switches and a note on the front porch of his home, warning him to "settle down" and treat his wife better. Mr. and Mrs. Sampson have been separated several times during the last four years.

The most favorable report ever issued by the South Bend postoffice is that for the quarter ending April 1. The total receipts for the three months were $50,239.72. For the same three months last year the total was $39,773.94, showing a gain for the quarter this year of $10,465.78.

Sixteen dogs have been poisoned at Ellettsville within the last sixty days. There is scarcely a dog left.

The second victim of gasoline within a week was taken at Fort Wayne when Anna Angst, 24 years old, died two hours after being horribly burned in an explosion after she had poured gasoline into a coal oil stove.

Senator Lew V. Ulrey, of Fort Wayne, has returned from an extended visit to a group of gold mines owned by a syndicate of Fort Wayne and Indianapolis capitalists. On the way to Mexico he was attacked by congestive chills and was very sick, but he returns in good health.

The official board of the First M. E. church at Richmond has just passed a resolution asking that hereafter women of the congregation remove their hats after seating themselves. So expansive are some of the spring shapes of hats and so profusely decorated are they that a view of the minister conducting services is almost wholly cut off to many in the audience.

Mrs. Louisa May, who for many years was a resident of Madison, Ind., and who for the last eleven years has lived with her daughter, Mrs. Kate Lindley, in Jeffersonville, recently received a postal shower in honor of her ninety-fourth birthday anniversary. It is only in the last few months that Mrs. May has used glasses, and she still sews much of her time. She has stores of quilts she has made, and is still turning them out.

W. L. White, of Owensville, owns a mule that is very much averse to being laughed at, and it can furnish more fun for spectators than a three-ring circus. When its driver, Alvah White, stands in front of Liz and crooks his finger and laughs, the mule punctures the air full of holes with its heels. Alvah is unable to explain why Liz lacks the sense of humor, and he does not dare to wear a smile when Liz is pushing against the collar.

James Friel, of Lafayette, came to Delphi and with a party of friends went to the Tippecanoe river to spend the day. They took a dog with them and it "scared up" a groundhog. A vicious fight between the two followed in which the hog succeeded in killing the dog. The groundhog then turned its attention to Friel and inflicted an ugly wound in his leg before it could be driven away. Other members of the party then killed the groundhog with clubs.

Terre Haute is to have an old-fashioned celebration of the Fourth of July. The Terre Haute fraternity regiment composed of Uniform Rank companies of various fraternities is to have charge, and the Retail Merchant's Association has indorsed the project. An effort will be made to bring to the city the first batallion of the First Regiment, Indiana National Guard, companies from Vincennes, Washington and Princeton. There will be a sham battle at the fair grounds in the afternoon.

John Dellinger, who was one of the three victims of a mad dog at Jeffersonville a couple of weeks ago and is now undergoing treatment at the Pasteur Institute at Chicago with seven-year-old Lucile Lentz and Mrs. Charlotte Phillips, will find, when he arrives home that neighbors have been attending to his farm for him. His chief anxiety, he wrote, was over his farm. Eleven neighbors, eight of them brother Masons, plowed up eighteen acres of land for him and gave other assistance on the place. Dellinger and the others are expected home soon.

Mrs. Matilda Talkington, of near Clifford, Bartholomew county, has an Easter egg, decorated by her father, the late Jonathan Barb, who died at Clifford about six years ago. Mr. Barb carved with a penknife, on April 20, 1851, the initials of his wife and also the figure of a wren on an Easter egg. gave the egg to his wife, who is now dead, and requested that it be kept for 100 years. Of course nothing remains of the egg now but the shell. The carving is as plain as the day it was made, and the promise to keep the egg for 100 years has already been more than half fulfilled.

Alexander Hancher, owner of a large fruit orchard west of Columbus, has concocted a "tonic" for fruit trees. All this talk about the blight on trees being the result of fungus is bosh, he says. The trees have skin disease, is his belief, and when he gives them a little tonic and gets their blood in good shape they bear fruit as well as could be expected. Mr. Hancher does not dispute the scientists without having made a study of fruit tree conditions. He figures that the sap of the tree is similar to the blood of a human being. He believes that trees should have medicine administered internally, and for that reason frowns on the cosmetics and lotions which are recommended for external use. He tried them all at various times, he says, and none of them worked like his new discovery.

James Stull, aged 55, a veteran Fort Wayne and Wabash Valely motorman, was pitched from an interurban car vestibule to the asphalt pavement in Wabash, and died within an hour. His wife will probably die from the shock.

Miss Hattie Kirkpatrick, of Owensville, has an old pocket bible her father, William Kirkpatrick, carried through the civil war. On the fly leaf is a prayer, hardly discernable, written by Mr. Kirkpatrick while in the army.

Ferdinand Vollmer, sheriff of Dubois county, is suffering from an unusual accident. While posting legal notices he was holding tacks between his lips when one of the tacks went down his throat. The accident is causing him much pain.

Although he refused to say good-by to his mother and brother, Leonard Sebastian Board, a Wells county boy arrested for incorrigibility, wept bitterly because he was compelled to leave a small cur dog behind. He has been sent to the Julia Work Industrial home.

Most Clothes Are Afraid of the Words "All Wool"

Few advertised clothes use the words "all wool." Did you ever notice that?

Still fewer advertised clothes Guarantee all wool. Did you ever think of that?

An exception to this is CLOTHCRAFT. It's of Guaranteed wool and it is the only all-wool clothing that sells at a part-wool price.

Clothcraft Clothes

CLOTHCRAFT is the single line that guarantees all wool and sells at $10 to $25.

Style Shows for Itself

You take no chance on a new garment's style. You can judge it for yourself.

But will the style hold? That's the chance you take It's a chance, you can't afford.

The style will hold if it's in all-wool—any clothing man will tell you that.

So you don't take this chance in CLOTHCRAFT, It's the one, single line of clothes that protects you at these prices.

Big Saving in Cost

The enormous output, the elimination of waste and the remarkable cost-saving methods known to no other factory make this possible without reducing the value.

This saving pays for the better woolens and better tailoring. You can tell as soon as you see these clothes that they're the best you ever knew at such prices.

Won't you look at them today?

BUTLER, INDIANA, FRIDAY, APRIL 23, 1909

Pavements in the Year 1909

THAT paved streets would enhance the value of Butler property is certain as the rising sun. The matter of a few dollars extra taxation to each property holder would be entirely offset by the extra value given his possessions and the great benefits accruing from improved streets. It is a fact that muddy streets drive many people from the city to other towns and a great volumn of business is lost every month to our merchants. While Butler business men are as much alive to the needs of patrons as those of Fort Wayne or other places, and carry just as up-to-date goods and sell them as reasonable, and in many instances for less money, they have been greatly handicapped the past fall and winter by the awful condition of our streets. Hundreds of country people who have always made Butler their trading point, have avoided the town, and for the best of reasons. It has been impossible for them to drive into the city with mud hub deep. Farmers will not bring their grain to this market for the reason that no team of horses is able to haul a wagon load over the streets during bad weather. So on every hand there is a big loss to mercantile houses. The remedy—and the only one is improved streets. Of course it will cost some money. Couldn't expect it for nothing. Good things always cost something. But don't allow the opponents of progress to make you believe that the poor man will be compelled to lose his home on account of the expense of pavements, for that will not be the case. Time enough will be allowed in which to pay for the pavements so that it will bring no hardships upon anyone. Improved streets means a permanent benefit and blessing. It means our salvation. The HERALD does not seek to unduly hasten legal action on the part of the council, but does earnestly hope that all speed consistent with sound judgment will be maintained until the glorious climax is reached. Go to it, gentlemen of the council, and the plaudits of an admiring and satisfied constituency will be part of the reward for your work.

THE Indianapolis News has recently printed several articles dealing with the cost of school books, with special reference to revelations that have been made in Chicago. There is a widespread and growing interest in this school book question. There is a particular interest in Indiana just now because the State Board of Education is about to let contracts for a large per cent of the books to be used in the public schools during the next five years. What changes will be made, if any, is not known. As a matter of fact, no changes should be made in books now in use where they are still suitable and are offered at a fair price. Every unnecessary change means an unnecessary expense to thousands of families, who, on account of the high cost of living and the hard times, are finding it a struggle to make ends meet.

THE wheat gamblers raise the price of bread without benefiting either the farmer, the miller or the baker. The meat trust raises the price of meats without benefiting the farmer or the butcher. The vegetable and fruit trusts raise the price of those articles without helping the producer. And so it goes through the whole list of food stuffs. It is only "free America," under republican rule, that the people are allowed to be robbed and oppressed at their very tables. In some countries the man who attempts to "corner" food stuffs is sent to prison. In some other countries this class of gentry, one of these days, will be hung—either judically or otherwise.

Why Good Men Decline

The following from an Indianapolis paper is worthy of consideration:

To express regret at Mr. J. K. Lilly's declination of the mayoralty would be merely to voice the almost universal feeling of the best citizenship and the solid interests of Indianapolis. The mention of his name was received with general and hearty approval from both public and press, so much so that the prospect of his candidacy has been far and away the chief topic of conversation and anxious inquiry for the last three days; and his refusal to run will be generally deplored.

What Mr. Lilly's reasons are he does not choose, nor is he obliged, to disclose. They consist partly, it may be assumed, of inability to see his way clear to the neglect of his business for the term of mayor, and a reluctance to face the stress and misunderstandings of official life and official responsibility. But his declination, taken in connection with so many more from worthy men, compels the reflection that in some ways we American people are often very thoughtless and cruel to our public servants. Sometimes men who are conscientiously trying their very best to serve the public are unmercifully hounded in the press and made the object of sneers and innuendoes in private life. No doubt one reason why we do not get better men in office is because we do not deserve them.

Whatever, is reasons, Mr. Lilly's declination is final; and the effort must be renewed to find a worthy candidate for both parties. Not the least regret in connection with such a refusal as this is, the fact that it makes it that much harder for the people and that much easier for the machines.

Next fall a new mayor and council will be elected in Butler. It behooves the democratic party to select strong, clean, conscientious men for the positions. We believe the democracy has the desired timber, and with such we can sweep the platter.

A STARTLING STATEMENT

New York Medical Authorities Claim Dyspepsia Causes Consumption

The post mortem statistics of the big New York hospitals show that some cases of consumption are due to unchecked dyspepsia, especially when the victim was predisposed to tuberculosis.

Dyspepsia wears out the body and brain, the weakened, irritable stomach is unable to digest food, the body does not receive the required nourishment, constipation ensues and the victim becomes thin, weak and haggard. As a result, the body becomes a fertile field for the germs of disease to lodge and flourish.

Therefore, the person who permits dyspepsia to progress unhindered is guilty of contributing toward the development of one of the most insidious and fatal diseases known to mankind.

Dyspepsia is curable if properly treated. The Geo. W. Geddes drug store sells a remedy which he positively guarantees will cure indigestion or dyspepsia or he will pay for all the medicine used during the trial. This remedy is an absolutely new medical discovery and has been named Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets. Certainly no offer could be more fair, and the offer of the Geo W. Geddes drug store is proof positive that Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets are a dependable and infallible remedy. Inasmuch as the medicine will cost you nothing if it does not benefit you we urge you who are suffering with indigestion or dyspepsia to try this remedy. A twenty five cent box of Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets contains enough medicine for fifteen days treatment. Remember Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets are only sold in Butler by the Geo. W. Geddes Drug Store, West Side Broadway, Butler, Ind. 1t

Notes of a Tairff Diarist

Or, of course, you can take the point of view that you don't need stockings, and consider cheerfully the bare legs of the "hardy Scots."

"Sugar?" you may hear the homespun, standpat statesman snort, "Sugar? Why, molasses or good old sorghum in the coffee used to be good enough for our pioneers. We've been getting too much luxury of late, anyhow."

Gloves!" says the cheerful idiot; "give me the good old days of homeknit mitts and chilblains."

"What's all this talk about high priced meats, any way?" asks the statistician. "Statistics show that one pound of boiling meat contains three and seven-tenths as much nutriment as an equal measure of fried chicken." (This man never heard of what happened to old Foulon, who told the people they could eat grass.)

"Dear me," says the old timer; "now here are the women taking a hand in politics and talking about the cost of living. It used to be that woman's sphere was enough for women. Let them darn stockings like our grandmothers use to do."—Kansas City Times.

"Uncle Joe"

"Uncle Joe" Cannon, looking like the cartoons of him, sleek and smooth, his jaws clamped at an uncertain angle on a Wheeling stogie, was a subject of portrayal by Attorney Hubert B. Fuller in an address in the chamber of commerce banquet hall at Cleveland before the council of sociology.

The theme of Fuller's address was "The Speakers of the House" But the great obstructionist managed to get into most of the limelight.

"Notoriously profane and coarse in his language, Cannon is seldom particular in the method and manner of his speech," said Fuller. "His ideals, both personal and public, are common; he lacks imaginative or artistic genius. His mental attitude reveals the lack of such broadening influences as education, culture and travel in early life. To him all things of democratic origin are inherently vicious. He clings with religious tenacity to the political ideals prevailing in the post-bellum days, when he first entered congress, that all democrats are traitors and rebels.

"Cannon regards the so-called 'vested interests' as the backbone of the country and any attack upon them he regards as anarchistic.

"Studied unconventionality is the man's chief personal characteristic At banquets he drinks campagne from his water glass, tilts his chair back against the wall and smokes the finest cigars in the style popular at the cross roads store."

Rev. C. B. Wilcox has been granted a divorce from Elsie D. Wilcox, at Decatur. Rev. Wilcox recently retired from the ministry to embark in the newspaper business. The preacher is to be pitied. He should have known better than to have embarked into the newspaper business when the prices on spring hats are so outrageously high.

Better Not Get Dyspepsia

If you can help it. Kodol prevents Dyspepsia, by effectually helping Nature to Relieve Indigestion. But don't trifle with Indigestion.

A great many people who have trified with indigestion, have been sorry for it—when nervous or chronic dyspepsia resulted, and they have not been able to cure it.

Use Kodol and prevent having Dyspepsia.

Everyone is subject to indigestion. Stomach derangement follows stomach abuse, just as naturally and just as surely as a sound and healthy stomach results upon the taking of Kodol.

When you experience sourness of stomach, belching of gas and nauseating fluid, bloated sensation, gnawing pain in the pit of the stomach, heart burn (so-called), diarrhoea, headaches, dulness or chronic tired feeling—you need Kodol. And then the quicker you take Kodol—the better. Eat what you want, let Kodol digest it.

Ordinary pepsin "dyspepsia tablets," physics, etc., are not likely to be of much benefit to you, in digestive ailments. Pepsin is only a partial digester—and physics are not digesters at all.

Kodol is a perfect digester. If you could see Kodol digesting every particle of food, of all kinds, in the glass test-tubes in our laboratories, you would know this just as well as we do.

Nature and Kodol will always cure a sick stomach—but in order to be cured, the stomach must rest. That is what Kodol does—rests the stomach, while the stomach gets well. Just as simple as A, B, C.

In the circuit court on Friday afternoon Luella Camp was given a divorce from Frank M. Camp. The plaintiff was restored to her maiden name Luella Rempis. Edon, the little town over in Williams county, Ohio, was called Mudsock some forty years ago. A man can't well get along without bread—the staff of life—and for that reason the advance in the price of a loaf is something that can not be dodged. There is no alternative. Even cornbread and oatmeal will climb higher, and vegetables of all kinds are tending in the same direction. Life is going to be worth living, until the present era of high prices is passed, measured in dollars and cents.

C. S. Smith, an attorney for Agnes Shirley, has filed suit in the circuit court asking that his client may be given a divorce from her husband, George Shirley. The parties were married in 1897, and lived together until July of 1908. Cruelty, etc., are the causes alleged. The parties reside at Garrett, the defendant being a brakeman on the B. & O. railroad. The wife asks for alimony, alleging that the defendant earns as wages $100 a month.

A New York paper says: District Attorney Jerome, of New York, has asked the senate to pass a bill which would permit saloons to open on Sundays in first-class cities, from one o'clock in the afternoon until eleven o'clock at night. Mr. Jerome says that the anti-closing laws cannot be enforced by local officials of New York city because of the influences to which they are subjected. He declares prohibition is impracticable and he believes that the public morals will be benefited by a law which, at least will do away with hypocritical pretenses.

The Fort Wayne News says: Ex-Senator Hemenway, who has been engaged in Washington for several weeks assisting the committee on appropriations in its investigation as to the possibility of cutting down expenses, has made a report. He shows that the government can make a saving of $70,000,000 by chopping down expenses in the several departments and he declares that this can be done without materially impairing the efficiency of the service. Under the stress of circumstances, therefore, it is highly probable that his retrenchment scheme will be adopted in a measure, at least, and for the next few months the winds from Washington will be painfully burdened with the shrieks, groans and dying lamentations of the patriots undergoing the ordeal of official decapitation. However, there is solace in the thought that many of them will have to go to work on the farm, thus swelling the food production of our great and glorious country.

Mrs Smith was fifty-nine years of age.

Sheriff Thomas arrived home Saturday night, having in charge Max Wiley and Sam Jordan, of Toledo, who are accused of having buncoed Joe Davis, of Auburn, out of $3,000 on a fake wrestling match. The men put up a strong fight against extradition and applied for bail, but the judge and prosecuting attorney ruled against them. They were lodged in jail after their arrival and will be tried in this county. The Courier first gave the story of the bunco and was ridiculed by its competitor. However, the story was true and the Courier scored a big scoop.

Whatever you do, don't become a fanatic. Be honest with your yourself, also with your neighbor. Don't get the idea into your head that the world couldn't exist without you. There are people in Butler who act as though they own the earth, and treat others with cold contempt, when, in fact, those who are under the withering and humiliating treatment of the puffed-up toads are greatly superior in every respect and do a great deal more for the community. If this hits hard digest it and see if it fits your case.

According to the Wolcottville Herald complaints have already begun to come in concerning the new law relative to the extra charge of 10 cents railroad fare upon failure to procure a ticket. Last Saturday morning A. D. Storm says he attempted to purchase a ticket at South Milford but there was no one in the ticket office, the agent helping load baggage, so he was obligeed to board the train and donate the company 10 cents which was double fare, as the regular fare from South Milford to Wolcottville is 10 cents. In this case, according to the new law, there is a chance for an argument. The law gives all the advantage to the railroads and should be changed, so that the public would have at least a look in.

Memorial day occurs on Sunday this year, and it is well that it is thus There will be no excuse for any lack of general observance of the event, the payment of due respect for the living soldiery and reverence for departed veterans. It is to be expected that a few fanatically religious adherents will object to the proposition of performing the duties of decorating the cemetery on the Sabbath day, but that idea is a relic ecclesiastical severity, which held that it was sinful to even whistle on Sunday. There can be no conception of any service more divinely sacred than that which calls men of all walks in life to take part in the ceremony where the bloom of nature is intermingled with our love, to be laid on the green mounds which cover the mouldering forms dear to memory.—Rochester Republican.

A Butler man has taken out a patent on an electric motor fastened on a cow's back, the electricity being generated by a dynamo attached to the cow's tail, says the American Inventor. If she kicks, a high arm catches the milk stool and lams her over the head with it.

The Wolf Lake Trolley, a weekly newspaper published in Wolf Lake by by Rev. R. B. Wood, has suspended publication. Here's a clipping from an unknown exchange which has the right ring, and will meet a responsive chord in many hearts. True friendship is one of the choicest things in this life of hurry and bustle: Wanted—A friend who will recognize me when I am compelled to wear patched pants; who will take my hand as I am sliding down hill instead of giving me a kick to hasten my descent; who will give me a dollar without two dollars security; who will come to me when I am sick, who will pull off his coat and fight for me behind my back as he talks to my face." Figure up your friends. Have you one of this caliber?

All of the money spent for advertising space might just as well be sunk in the depths of the sea if the merchant fails to make good—that is if an article is advertised as being of a certain quality—if a price is printed—that price must prevail—if money back is promised should article fail to prove satisfactory—money must be paid back without a murmur. Every statement made in an advertisement must be made good—otherwise your customer is buying a gold brick. Tell the truth, and if you have real bargains to offer the public will stand by you. The public is interested in the advertiser's statements and they are given attention by most people. The HERALD will carry your message to more buyers than any paper in the county. You can't afford to fail to use its columns.

THIRTY THREE YEARS IN SOLITARY

HOW JESSE POMEROY, WORLD'S MOST FAMOUS BOY MURDERER HAS FAMILIARIZED HIMSELF WITH THE SCIENCES AND LANGUAGES DURING HIS LONG IMPRISONMENT.

JESSE POMEROY IN HIS PENITENTIARY CELL.

IN a small stone cell ever since the Centennial exhibition in Philadelphia there has been locked up in the Massachusetts State Prison in Charlestown a life prisoner whose name is familiar to all New England, perhaps to a large portion of the reading public. Since he has been there the United States has added 30,000,000 inhabitants to its population. He is the only prisoner in Massachusetts undergoing continuous solitary confinement. The warm and cheering sun never shines upon him. For thirty-three years his face has never been seen to brighten with a smile. Regarding this extraordinary character New England knows more false stories than on almost any other subject. Persistent publicity regarding him has contained fewer actual facts than ever before kept life in so prolonged a discussion. Against no prisoner—at least in Massachusetts—has public indignation been so continuously bitter.

To explain what he is to-day it is necessary first to rehearse briefly the backgrounds of his life. Since Sept. 7, 1876, when he was 17 years old, he has been denied the association even of other prisoners. He will be 50 years old on next Nov. 29. He was not yet 13 years old when he was first taken into custody. Upon his confession of torturing and mutilating boys of 4 to 6 years of age he was sent to the reform school in Westboro, Sept. 20, 1872. He was pardoned and released from this school on Feb. 6, 1874. Very soon after he killed and buried in the cellar of his father's store a little girl 5 years old.

On the following April 22, the blackest day in his history, he was arrested, charged with the atrocious slaughter of a 5-year-old boy in South Boston. In September he was convicted and sentenced to be hanged. He was not yet 15 years old. The Supreme Court, without avail, reviewed his defense of insanity. On Aug. 31, 1876, after the Governor's council had listened to a review of extenuating circumstances in his behalf, Governor Rice commuted the sentence.

To the lone prisoner one day is like another. From morning till night, season after season, he reads and plans and studies. In pleasant weather his keeper can relieve his monotony somewhat by an hour of exercise in a small brick-walled yard, the solitary's private garden. His meals are the regular prison fare, but he must eat them without knife or fork. Once a week he has the regulation bath. Once a month his aged mother—she is now nearing 70 years of age—is permitted to make him a brief visit. The Governor, the Governor's council and the prison commissioners see him on their yearly or sometimes more frequent visits to the prison. He rarely sees prison officials, except his keeper and the chaplain. The venerable chaplain provides him with reading.

Despite his sentence, Pomeroy has not labored for years. This is one rare subject upon which he can exercise his will, and he refuses to work. As this demonstration of will power is not known to other prisoners, he is not compelled. It would be unprofitable trouble to force him. He has practiced penmanship until his handwriting is beautifully perfect. It looks like Spencerian copperplate, artfully shaded, firm, regular and small-lettered. He has the call of 8,000 books in the prison library and of about 500 from the chaplain's private collection. For thirty-three years he has read from them. Of late years he has outgrown a fondness for fiction and has spent most of his time with history and in the acquiring of foreign languages. He has a reading knowledge of Latin, German, French, Spanish, Italian and Arabic. Of his proficiency he alone knows; but with his lexicons he translates from the foreign books.

Among the errors in newspaper accounts of Pomeroy a few may be corrected here. In keeping with the former public notion of the prisoner's crimes, Pomeroy has been the victim of lurid accounts of how he has tortured and mutilated cats, birds and other pets. It need only be asked where he would get access to such animals in his cell. It is true that he once had a canary bird in his cell, but he cherished it highly. In the morning he would place a cup of water for the bird to bathe in, and then he would watch it as it spread its wings and made its way out of the prison into the sunshine. The bird would stay away about an hour at a time, while Pomeroy would meanwhile entertain himself in anticipating its return. It has also been written that Pomeroy's crimes are explicable by prenatal influence—that his father was a butcher and that his mother at a vital period aided in the work of butchering.

This story is absolutely without foundation, as the boy's father never did any butchering and his mother was a dressmaker. From no such cause can his mother explain his peculiarities. Regarding Pomeroy's attempts at escape much fiction has also been written. It is true that he has attempted to escape, and has therefore in times past caused his custodians some anxiety. With tools formerly furnished him for the work that used to be allotted to him, the prisoner would pick at the crevices of his cell. From necessary articles of cell equipment he has in times past fashioned crude implements which he has used in vain efforts toward freedom. Except as samples of what may be done with a minimum of material, when desperation rather than necessity is the mother of invention, these impliments have been practically useless. The most desperate attempt Pomeroy ever made was in 1887, when he used the illuminating gas of his cell to create an explosion which not only wrecked the cell, but nearly killed him. Of this escapade even contemporary prisoners in Cherry Hill tell conflicting details. An account written by a convict who was recently pardoned is denied by the authorities. This relates how one of Pomeroy's eyes had to be removed because of his injuries. This is said officially to be untrue, but is based on the fact that the vision of one eye has always been impaired.

Unable to believe that the deeds of the boy were the deeds of his will, Pomeroy feels convinced that he was not responsible for what he did. The mature man, unwilling to accept responsibility for the boy of long ago, has thought out for himself a philosophy of fatalism. Powers over which he had no control, he argues, urged the helpless boy in the unfortunate course. He cannot see the ethics or the justice of a society that punishes him now. More than that, he cannot believe that there is a God that would allow injustice to be heaped upon him. For this reason Pomeroy refuses to tolerate the teachings of religion. He has no religious belief, no faith. He reasons that if there were a God, this superior force would not permit society to punish him: In such a predicament, feeling himself a victim of fate, it is not remarkable that he has never been known to smile in thirty-three years. His mind all the years has been imbued with the plot of an almost classic tragedy in which he has been a part—an old Greek drama theme where a mortal is the helpless prey of superhuman fate.

BOUND FOR THE LAND OF HOPE.

EUROPEAN EMIGRATION FOR AMERICA.

The American financial depression of 1907-08 caused a cessation of emigration to these shores from Europe. Last year the departures from Atlantic ports showed a decrease of 940,000 passengers and a fall in revenue of $30,000,000. For the first time more people traveled from the United States to Europe than vice versa. Now the immigration rush has been resumed and the entries at New York are again very heavy. The illustration, from the London Sphere, shows an English emigrant ship taking on its passengers, most of them from the continent of Europe, and all booked for the United States.

WAS ADMIRED IN AMERICA.

Admiral Cervera, Who Passed Away Recently in Spain.

Vice Admiral Pascual Cervera, who died recently in Puerta Real, Spain, was foremost among the Spanish naval heroes of modern times. He was born in 1833 in the province of Jerez, his father being one of the richest wine merchants in Spain. After his graduation from the naval academy at San Fernando, in 1854, he advanced rapidly in rank and honor until, in 1898, when the Spanish-American war came, he was an admiral.

Cervera foresaw the naval downfall of Spain in the war with the United States. More than a year before it began he wrote to a relative concerning the inefficiency of the Spanish navy, and in January, 1898, he again declared that Spain was poorly equipped for war.

When the order came to him on April 22 to sail from the Cape Verde Islands, Cervera wrote a vigorous letter of which the following is a part: "In view of the importance to the country of the destination of this fleet, I deem it expedient you should know, through a friend who does not fear censure, that while as seamen we are all ready to die with honor in the fulfillment of duty, I think it undoubted that the sacrifice of these naval forces will be as certain as it would be fruitless and useless."

The fate of Cervera's ships is well remembered. With other Spanish prisoners, Cervera was brought to the United States, where he remained virtually a prisoner, until he returned to Spain to face the inevitable inquiry into the loss of his fleet. The Spanish government at the court martial, or "investigation," with a view to place the responsibility upon Cervera of leaving Santiago, virtually acquitted him, but the authorities withheld the formal verdict to that effect, and instead "suspended judgment and released him," which was regarded as practically an acquittal. But his countrymen delighted to honor him still and elected him as a permanent member of the Spanish Senate. In 1902 he was promoted to the rank of vice admiral and given the position of chief of staff of the Spanish navy. From this position he was retired at his own request, because of his failing health, on Dec. 14, 1908.

MOTHER SEES DOG KILL BABY.

While his mother was watching from the window, 2-year-old Albert Leadbetter, of Lynn, Mass., was chewed to death by a huge bulldog. The child wandered near the kennel where the animal was chained and the dog with one leap clutched the child's throat.

Work of Congress

The tariff bill was reported Monday by Mr. Aldrich from the Committee on Finance. Senator Daniel led Democratic criticism of the reporting of the bill to the Senate without affording the Democratic members an opportunity to inspect it. Senator Aldrich replied that to have proceeded otherwise would have entailed long delay, and reminded the members of the minority that the Republican majority alone would be held responsible for the tariff legislation to be enacted by this Congress. A message from the House asking for the return of the bill reached the Senate too late for action. The House was in session two hours and fifteen minutes. The first action taken was the adoption of a resolution calling upon the Senate for a return of the Payne tariff bill the next Thursday in order that it might be corrected so as to include products of petroleum in the free list. During the confusion incident to the passage of the bill Friday it was believed that this provision was embodied in it, but it developed that such was not the case, although it clearly was the intention to include these products along with crude and refined petroleum. The House authorized its enrolling clerk to make the correction, and he can make the change within a few minutes. It will therefore cause no delay in tariff legislation. There was much opposition to two resolutions, one to appoint several janitors and the other to appropriate for the expenses of the House incident to the extra session. The first was defeated by being laid on the table, and the second was adopted only after Mr. Macon of Arkansas had forced a roll call on a point of no quorum. After sending the census bill to conference the House adjourned until Thursday.

Shortly after the Senate met Thursday it agreed to a resolution of the House of Representatives asking that the tariff bill be returned to that body so it might be amended to place upon the free list the products of, as well as crude and refined petroleum. The bill was soon returned to the Senate with this amendment inserted. The President's message for a revision of the Philippine tariff so that the principle of protection might be applied to the industries of those islands, and at the same time in view of practical free trade with the United States, sufficient revenue might be provided, was laid before the Senate and referred to the committee on the Philippines. Senator Bailey introduced an amendment placing a tax of 3 per cent on incomes of over $5,000 annually, which, he said, would provide a revenue of from $60,000,000 to $80,000,000 annually. The House was in session but ten minutes. The principal business transacted was the reception and reference to committee of a message from the President transmitting the proposed tariff revision law of the Philippine Islands. At 12:10 p. m., adjournment was taken until Monday.

Agree Alcohol Is Poison.

That alcohol can not be considered as a food; that its use even moderately decreases the efficiency of muscles, affects the glands seriously, and wrecks the nervous system, causing ill health and insanity, was the unanimous opinion of the meeting of the American Association for the Study and Cure of Inebriety and Alcoholism, in session at Washington, D. C. One member even went so far as to assert that alcohol is dangerous as a medicine, as all its effects are not yet known to science. Another said that 60 per cent of the tubercular patients treated with alcohol died, while only 20 per cent of the cases not treated in this way were fatal. The use of alcoholic beverages was called a common cause of degeneration and disease among the negroes and illiterate classes in the South. A New York physician asserted that the psychic treatment of the inebriate was recognized as the most successful.

The Ancient Stone Slingers.

It has been said that Asiatic nations excelled others in the use of the sling, and the slingers of an ancient army used their little weapons with terrible effect. "These natives have such skill," says one old historian, "that it very rarely happens that they miss their aim. What makes them so great in the use of the sling is the training given them from their earliest years by their mothers, who set up a piece of bread hung at the end of a rod for a target and let their children remain without food until they have hit it, when the child who is the victor receives the bread as the reward of his skill and patience."

A Reason for Helping.

The poor help the poor more than the rich help them. An official of the Department of Charities in New York recently remarked this trait.

"Everything has its cause, its simple and striking cause, if we can but find it," he said. "Once, in a miserable slum, I heard two little girls talking about this matter of poverty and wealth and helpfulness.

IN FIGHT WITH WOLVES MAN HAS CLOSE CALL.

Lumberman, Set Upon by Pack of Hungry Brutes, Comes Near to Being Chewed Up

Frank Trathin, of Emerson, Mich., is mourning the loss of his fine bulldog and that mourning is none the less sincere because the dog died in the defense of Trathin's life. Emerson is only a small place, consisting of six or seven houses and a sawmill, and the sawmill is the excuse for the village as well as for numerous camps in the thick woods. Toward one of these camps, Trathin started rather late one afternoon. The bulldog always accompanied him wherever he went and in this case, it was lucky that he did.

Trathin has no love for wolves but despised them for their cowardice, believing that they would not dare attack a man in the daylight, hence he took no weapon with him. After he had gone some distance on his way, he became aware of the fact that he was being followed by wolves. The bulldog was much affected by this and he would run back, growl and then with his hair standing on end, would use every means at his command to induce his master to hasten. The conduct of the dog was such, the animal not usually being afraid of anything on four legs, that its fears were communicated to Trathin and he started to run.

This was the worst thing he could have done, as at once four wolves closed in upon him. He had just time to grab a stout club and back up to a tree when they were upon him. With the assistance of the dog, he managed to beat them off and make them keep their distance until within sight of the camp. Then the animals seemed to perceive that their prey was about to escape them and again they attacked the man, apparently rendered desperate by hunger.

This time the battle was even more strenuous than at first, and the attack was so sudden, that Trathin and his dog were caught in a space so that the four animals could attack him on all four sides. For several minutes he fought them off with his stick, the dog fighting valiantly, and finally the bulldog grabbed one of the brutes by the throat. This relieved Trathin, and he beat about with the stick to such good effect that the three wolves departed, the bulldog lying down in the snow with its victim, waiting for it to die.

With his face and his hands bleeding and his clothes practically torn to ribbons, Trathin ran into the camp just at dusk, and, as soon as he could speak, told the men his story. He was given a rifle and, with several lumberjacks, set out to kill the band.

Arriving at the place where the last battle had occurred, the men saw the four wolves apparently fighting among themselves. Firing into the bunch, two of them were killed, and the other two escaped. Lying on one side was all that was left of the bulldog.

When Trathin left the other three wolves had returned to aid their companion, and the bulldog, to save his own life, had been obliged to let go his wolf and fight the others. The other was not hurt to any great extent and joined the other three, the odds of four to one being too much even for a fighting dog. But before the bulldog was wiped out he had given a good account of himself, as the bodies of the two dead wolves showed. The animals had been engaged in eating the body of the dog when driven away.

THE MAPLE SUGAR INDUSTRY

Recent Years Have Seen Great Decrease in Area of Production—Ohio, New York And Vermont Lead.

TIME once was when the person who wanted maple sugar could ordinarily get it; now he can get something going under that name, but the chances are very largely against its genuineness. This is asserted in spite of the recent pure food law, which is supposed to regulate or prohibit the sale of compounds of fake articles of every description. Unquestionably this has been one of the causes of the decline of the maple sugar industry—for it has declined. Naturally enough, the cheapening of other sugar worked against it, beginning, say, thirty years ago, but there is no doubt much more maple sugar could be sold now if people were sure they were getting the pure article. According to a writer in Pennsylvania Grit, from which paper the above heading is reproduced, the amount of maple sugar produced in the United States at the time of the last census was about 12,000,000 pounds, and the number of gallons of syrup was more than 2,000,000, the total value of both products being more than $2,500,000. Double these figures would probably better represent the present average production, but in 1860 there were 40,000,000 pounds of maple sugar aside from syrup.

Ohio, Vermont and New York still lead in maple sugar production, as they have done continuously since 1850, each occupying first place at different times. The tendency of late has been toward concentration of the industry in the older centers, such as these where the soil and climate have been most favorable in the past. Conceding that the center of the industry will always be in the north, the Bureau of Forestry names most of Pennsylvania, and West Virginia, Western Maryland, Indiana, parts of Kentucky and Eastern Tennessee and Western North Carolina as sections which could be within the area of greatest production. In Indiana and Michigan, where otherwise would be produced large quantities of maple sugar and syrup, the extensive lumbering operations have made big inroads on the industry. In fact, for fifty years maples have been falling before the lumberman's ax in many sections, and especially big inroads have been made in the past twenty-five years. The competition of the adulterated product is another thing which has injured the growth of the industry. Every effort is being made nowadays to have all maple syrup properly labeled as to its purity.

As the years pass the industry is losing its quaintness and novelty, the modern sugar house and evaporators taking the place of the old-time kettle on poles open to the sky, and modern methods of collecting the sap taking the place of the man with the yoke about his shoulders with a bucket suspended on each side. Former days in maple sugar making were distinguished by "sugar eats" and frolics of various kinds. It was nothing strange for the boys of a neighborhood to spend whole nights in the sugar house, roasting potatoes in the coals and boiling eggs in the syrup and otherwise having "the greatest time in the world," after having been housed up all winter. There were numerous sugar parties, and whenever a farmer "sugared off," as boiling the syrup to sugar was called, he rarely failed to invite the neighbors in to test its quality. This event usually merged into a "party," and after the sugar was disposed of a fiddle was dragged out and the crowd danced until morning. Many an old-timer of to-day will recall such events when he reads these lines, and he will still call them, as he did then, "the greatest times in the world."

AN INDIGESTION REMEDY FREE

Many people who are otherwise healthy suffer from indigestion, or dyspepsia. When you consider that the stomach and allied digestive organs are the most important organs of the body, it would seem that a disorder there is to be taken very seriously.

Dyspeptics cannot eat the things they like; food sours in the stomach, then chronic constipation begins, or, as is often the case, you have been constipated all along, and the stools are forced and irregular.

But there is no use letting indigestion go until it becomes chronic and undermines your health. It is good advice to suggest to you that you go to your druggist and get a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, the wonderful cure for stomach, liver and bowel troubles. That is what C. Fowler, of Carson City, Mich., did and he is well to-day. Others who did the same and are cured are Ida A. Fortune, of Grand Junction, Tenn.; R. F. Thompson, of Shenandoah, Ia., who actually considers that it saved his life. You can obtain a 50-cent or $1 bottle of the druggist, and, taken according to directions, it will probably be all you need. It is a liquid, acts gently, never gripes, and besides the laxative effect, contains exceptional tonic properties which tone the stomach, and that is what is especially needed in indigestion.

All sufferers from indigestion who have never used Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin can obtain a free test bottle by writing the doctor. It will be sent direct to your home without any charge. In this way thousands have proven to their own satisfaction Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is the very remedy they needed to cure indigestion. When once you use this grand remedy you will throw violent cathartics, tablets, salts, etc., away.

If there is anything about your ailment that you don't understand, or if you want any medical advice, write to the doctor, and he will answer you fully. There is no charge for this service. The address is Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 202 Caldwell bldg., Monticello, Ill.

BABY'S WATERY ECZEMA

Itched and Scratched Until Blood Ran—$50 Spent on Useless Treatments—Disease Seemed Incurable—Cured by Cuticura for $1.50.

"When my little boy was two and a half months old he broke out on both cheeks with eczema. It was the itchy, watery kind and we had to keep his little hands wrapped up all the time, and if he would happen to get them uncovered he would claw his face till the blood streamed down on his clothing. We called in a physician at once, but he gave an ointment which was so severe that my babe would scream when it was put on. We changed doctors and medicines until we had spent fifty dollars or more and baby was getting worse. I was so worn out watching and caring for him night and day that I almost felt sure the disease was incurable. But finally reading of the good results of the Cuticura Remedies, I determined to try them. I can truthfully say I was more than surprised, for I bought only a dollar and a half's worth of the Cuticura Remedies (Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Pills), and they did more good than all my doctors' medicines I had tried, and in fact entirely cured him. His face is perfectly clear of the least spot or scar of anything. Mrs. W. M. Comerer, Burnt Cabins, Pa., Sept. 15, 1908."

Out in the Rain.

The Indian fairly revels in rain, declares G. W. James in his book, "What the White Race May Learn from the Indian." Indian women no more mind the rain than they do that the sun should shine or the wind blow, and as for any evil effect from the wet, there are no signs of it.

In the first place, they have no fear of the rain. It is not constantly instilled into their minds from childhood that "they mustn't get wet, or they'll take cold." This has something to do with it.

In the second place, they move about with natural activity in the rain as at other times. This keeps the blood circulating and prevents any lowering of the temperature of the body.

In the third place, their general outdoor life gives them such a robustness that if there is any tax upon the system it is fully ready to meet it.

Everything in nature loves to be out in the rain, and upon human beings its effects are beneficial, provided they value health and vigor more than they mind a little discomfort in the bedragglement of their clothes.

"COFFEE DOESN'T HURT ME."

Tales That Are Told.

"I was one of the kind who wouldn't believe that coffee was hurting me," says a N. Y. woman. "You just couldn't convince me its use was connected with the heart and stomach trouble I suffered from most of the time.

"My trouble finally got so bad I had to live on milk and toast almost entirely for three or four years. Still I loved the coffee and wouldn't believe it could do such damage.

"What I needed was to quit coffee and take nourishment in such form as my stomach could digest.

"I had read much about Postum, but never thought it would fit my case until one day I decided to quit coffee and give it a trial and make sure about it. So I got a package and carefully followed the directions.

"Soon I began to get better and was able to eat carefully selected foods without the aid of pepsin or other digestants, and it was not long before I was really a new woman physically.

"Now I am healthy and sound, can eat anything and everything that comes along and I know this wonderful change is all due to my having quit coffee and got the nourishment I needed through this delicious Postum.

"My wonder is why everyone don't give up the old coffee and the troubles that go with it and build themselves up as I have done, with Postum."

Easy to prove by 10 days' trial of Postum in place of coffee. The reward is big.

"There's a Reason."

For Filling Sacks.

In filling sacks with grain, flour, cement, etc., it has been found impossible for one man to do the work. A second laborer is required to hold open the mouth of the bag while the other does the filling. The necessity of the extra laborer is eliminated in the sack-filling apparatus shown here, the invention of a Washington man. This apparatus was designed primarily to provide a device by which bags could be quickly and economically filled by one man. A hopper is provided, to which a pulley is attached at one end. At the front are the frames for supporting the bags after the later have been fastened in position. The grain or other article to be placed in the bags is shoveled into the hopper, from which it drops by gravity into the bags. As the grain descends the bags are shaken at regular intervals by an arrangement attached to the pulley. The bags are in this way automatically lifted off the ground a trifle at each turn of the pulley, allowing the grain to settle, filling the bags to their utmost capacity. This does away with the ordinary laborious method formerly employed by hand. It is claimed that the bags can be filled in one-fourth the time heretofore required and by one man.

Causes of Roup.

When fowls crow at night, which is the fact when the number quartered is greater than the capacity of the house, they sweat. This sweating causes the feathers to rot at the base, giving them the very appearance of molting. This explains why so many flocks look ragged in early summer.

It is a noted fact that the majority of cases where roup has become epidemic among fowls the latter were crowded in tightly-built houses when the weather is very cold and allowing the houses to remain closed all the next day. This creates a moisture which generates dampness, and the whole house feels very much like a vault. At night the house is more or less filled with dampness emanating from the fowls' breath, but if, on the following morning, the windows are opened wide, this dampness will be dispelled. This is a great point in favor of the scratching shed plan of house.

Popular Breed of Poultry.

Leghorns if compelled to roost in cold houses and pick a living from the slush of a barnyard will not lay. But when warmly housed and properly fed they are the best of winter layers. The best bred leghorns are practically non-sitters and should not be counted on to rear their young. For those who are so situated that they can hatch and rear their pullets artificially or with hens of other breeds, and who give their hens suitable care in winter, the leghorn will prove a very profitable breed for the farm.

THE LEGHORN.

Feeding Sheep.

It is most convenient for the majority of sheep owners who have not large barns in which to care for their sheep to attempt to feed them in troughs arranged about the feed lots; but this method has its disadvantages for during a night of heavy storm the troughs will have become filled with sleet and snow. A reversible feed trough that can be easily turned over, presenting a dry, clean trough, will greatly obviate this discomfort in feeding out of doors.

Wash Eggs for Market.

It would in a sense be better to wash eggs sent to market than to send them in a dirty condition. But washed eggs have no keeping qualities. The water appears to dissolve the gelatinous substance which seals the pores of the shell, and air is thus admitted and soon starts decomposition. The better way to treat dirty eggs is to take a woolen rag only slightly moistened with water and gently rub off the dirt.

Irrigation in Brazil.

The movement in the direction of comprehensive irrigation enterprises in the Northeastern States of Brazil, where there is great suffering for want of water and where immense tracts of good land are at present practically worthless for lack of it, is gathering considerable force, and it is understood that the next Brazilian Congress will be asked to take up the subject in a practical way.

Nut Industry on the Farm.

An industry which the farmer might take up with profit is nut growing. Improved nut trees begin bearing at about six or eight years, bearing the same as apple or pear trees. Large trees when grafted begin to bear about the third or fourth year, and large trees that are budded will bear sooner than small ones, but the small ones bear longest. English walnuts can now be grown in the Central States.

Transplanting.

As the time approaches for removing young plants from the flats in the house or from the hotbed outside, an extra amount of airing must be given to harden them. Plants which have started indoors or under glass are more or less tender and will not be able to thrive under the rigor of early spring planting without treatment. They must become hardened, or acclimated, to the new conditions.

At least a week before transplanting remove the sash entirely from the hotbed during the day and allow abundance of ventilation at night, except when heavy frost threatens. This will give the plants practically an outside temperature for the greater part of the day and they will grow stronger and harder thereby. At this time also less watering should be given to check growth and make the plants more resistant to the cold. All plants can endure a lower degree of temperature under dry than under moist conditions.

Most seedlings are transplanted direct from the flat or hotbed to the open garden when they have attained a height of from four to six inches or more. When facilities are at hand a better way is to first transplant them to a cold frame, which is the same as a hotbed without the heat. In the cold frames they become accustomed to lower temperature and are still protected from frost of nights and on cold days. A still better way is to transplant the young plants at the appearance of their second or third set of true leaves to two inch flower pots.

Disking Alfalfa.

The work of disking alfalfa requires a little bit of skill. The disk must be set just so it will cut the ground sufficiently and do as little damage as possible. A little experience will enable any intelligent man to do the very best work in the field. There are times and conditions when the spring tooth harrow may do all right, but generally nothing but a good sharp disk with enough big horses in front and a competent man on the seat can do the work. I use only the smoothing harrow in the early spring, but after each mowing I use a disk or spring tooth, whichever I think best, always finishing with a spike tooth, so as to leave the field in the very best possible condition for the growing crop. It is a real pleasure to see the alfalfa start out anew and grow about one inch a day on an average.—Denver Field and Farm.

A Cow Yard Gateway.

A handy entrance into the cow yard is made by cutting the wires between posts and putting in two tall posts. Wire them together at top, put on fence wires and you can get through, but the cows cannot.

Foundered Horses.

A. S. Alexander, veternary surgeon, explodes the old idea that a horse can become "chest-foundered." He says that such cases are those suffering from chronic founder (laminitis), which affects the feet and not the chest. In old-standing cases of foot lameness the chest muscles may waste away in sympathy, and that fact has led to the "chest founder" idea. Such a horse should be shod with wide-webbed, flat bar shoes, put on over dressing of tar and oakum, and a thick leather sole. Then clip off the hair and blister the hoof heads (coronets) of forefeet with a mixture of one dram of biniodide of mercury and two ounces of cerate of cantharides rubbed in for fifteen minutes. Wash blister off in forty-eight hours, then apply lard daily. Blister every three or four weeks.

Electro-Chemical Fertilizers.

By the aid of electro-chemical production of manures containing atmospheric nitrogen. Germany expects soon to largely decrease its importations of saltpetre from Chili.

Helpful Hints.

Oil up the work harness.

The neglected colt or calf will prove profitless.

Cattle will never do well in the same pasture as sheep.

Wood charcoal should always be kept in the hog pen.

How are the farm implements? Any of them need repairs?

To improve live stock, requires intelligence and thought.

It is a good plan to have the horses and cows clean up their mangers after each feed.

There is such a thing as overfeeding. Feed stock all the food they will assimilate, but not more.

Don't have a lot of manure lying in the yards all summer. It will lose just about half of its value by fall.

It is better to feed the cows fodder and hay after milking, as it keeps the dust down. Feed the grain before milking.

Don't plant poor, weak seed corn next spring. It is time and money thrown away. There is plenty of good, strong seed to be had.

Farmers must read in order to keep up with the times. There has been as great an evolution in agriculture as in any other line of business.

Do you follow crop rotation on your farm? It's the only way to properly manage a farm for best results in producing big crops and maintaining the fertility.

The best feed for making muscle is oats. They are not heating nor very fattening. The young calves should be given oats in order to give them muscle and make them plump.

Coffee Cake.

One cup of sugar, one-half cup of butter, one-half cup of molasses, one-half cup of cold coffee, one cup of seeded raisins, two eggs, one teaspoonful each of cinnamon, and mace, one teaspoonful of baking soda dissolved in the coffee. Mix well and, last of all, add two cups of flour. Bake in a loaf and when done turn out of the tin and ice the bottom and sides with white frosting.

Potato Snow.

Boil or steam three or four equal-sized potatoes. When done, dry well and sprinkle a little salt over them to make them floury. Rub through a sieve into a saucepan, add a little warm milk and a lump of butter the size of a walnut. Season with salt and pepper. Stir over the fire until the potato begins to look dry. Serve piled up in the center of a dish.

Entire Wheat Bread.

Dissolve one tablespoon of butter in one cup warm water and add one cup milk. Let it become lukewarm and add one-half yeast cake, dissolved in one-fourth cup lukewarm water, scant teaspoon of salt and two tablespoons of sugar. To this add three pints of entire wheat flour; mix well and let rise overnight. In morning knead, form into loaves, and raise in pan.

When Cooking Vegetables.

Not every cook knows that all vegetables that grow under the ground should be put to cook in cold water. This includes potatoes, turnips, carrots and onions. Those that grow on top the ground, such as beans, peas, spinach and corn, should have boiling water poured over them. If left uncovered they will retain their fresh, green look.

Turnips.

A pleasant change from the ordinary boiled turnips is to peel and cut them to the size of marbles, then fry them with 2 ounces butter and 1 ounce sugar. When covered with glaze add white sauce. The juice of the sliced root of turnips mixed with brown sugar and baked in the oven is a good pectoral, and cures coughs and hoarseness.

Baked Eggs with Cheese.

Line a shallow dish with thin slices of Swiss (Gruyere) cheese. Mix carefully together one teaspoonful of made mustard to adash of cayenne, one-third teaspoonful of salt and two-thirds cup milk. Pour half of this over the cheese, break in five eggs, pour in the remainder of the liquid and bake in a hot oven until the eggs are set.

Baked Bananas.

Baked bananas are readily assimilated by the digestive organs, and are often well borne by patients to whom the raw banana proves indigestible. The bananas should be peeled and the stringy outside pulp scroped off, cut into halves, sprinkled with sugar and a little lemon juice, and baked in a shallow pan until soft.

Vegetable Soup.

Four onions, three turnips, four carrots, one small head of cabbage, one pint of butter beans and a bunch of sweet herbs. Boil until done, add a quart of soup stock; take two tablespoonfuls butter and one of flour, beat to a cream; pepper and salt to taste; add a spoonful sugar. Serve with fried bread chips.

Maple Candy.

Put into a saucepan a pint of hot milk and stir into this a pound of maple sugar that has been broken or rolled small. Boil hard as soon as the sugar is dissolved and stir constantly. When a little dropped into cold water is brittle, pour into buttered pans and cut into squares.

Grange Shortcake.

Into a quart of flour sift a teaspoonful of baking powder and rub a piece of butter the size of an egg. Wet with sweet milk to a rather soft dough. Bake, then split and spread with peeled oranges, sliced, and cover these well with sugar and whipped cream.

Calves' Brains.

Wash the brains carefully and cut each pair into four pieces, taking away all bits of fiber and skin. Rinse well, wipe dry and dip each piece first in beaten egg, then in cracker crumbs, then in egg and again in cracker crumbs and fry in hot fat.

Corn Nuts.

To one quart of white corn meal add two tablespoonfuls of baking powder and a teaspoonful of salt and sift well. Add milk to form a stiff dough that can be formed into little cakes, and drop into smoking fat and cook until delicately browned.

Sponge Cake.

Four eggs, beaten very light; one cup of sugar, mixed with the eggs; a bit of soda the size of a pea dissolved in a tablespoonful of scalding water; one cup of flour; vanilla or lemon flavoring. Mix well and bake in a loaf or in layer tins.

Feather Cake.

Cream together a tablespoonful of butter and a cup of sugar; add one beaten egg, a cup of sweet milk and two cups of flour sifted with a teaspoonful of cream of tartar. Put a half teaspoonful of soda in the milk before adding this.

When eggs are frozen in the winter putting them in cold water will draw out the frost. If a frozen egg must be boiled put salt in the water and it will not run out of the shell.

If oil cloth is given a coat of varnish twice a year it wears longer, is more easily kept clean, and does not lose the pattern.

Throat Troubles Weaken the System.

A serious illness is often brought on by a neglected sore throat.

All throat troubles invariably weaken the system and should not be allowed to go unchecked.

A gargle made with twelve drops of Sloan's Liniment in half a glass of water will break up a sore throat.

Sloan's Liniment is an excellent remedy for tonsilitis, croup, asthma and bronchitis. Applied freely to the outside of the throat and chest it draws out the inflammation, reduces the swelling and relieves any soreness. Twelve drops of this Liniment in half a glass of water makes a splendid antiseptic gargle.

Mr. Albert W. Price of Fredonia, Kans., writes:—"We have used Sloan's Liniment in the family for about a year, and find it an excellent relief for colds and hay fever attacks. Two drops of the Liniment in a teaspoonful of water will stop coughing and sneezing instantly."

Mr. L. T. Hurst of Coatesville, Ind., R. R. No. 1, writes:—"I find your Liniment the best remedy I have ever tried for sore throat, either for horse or man. I once cured a case of sore throat on myself the second day and almost the first night, which had continued for over three weeks, under constant treatment of three physicians (I was traveling) and it was getting worse."

"The Wireless Hero."

Of Jack Binns, the Republic's "wireless hero," the manager of a New York theatrical agency said:

"I tried my best to land him. I went as high as a thousand a week. But it was no use. Binns said that on the boards he'd be as out of place as Hawksley's hoss. I asked him what Hawksley's hoss was, and he spun me a yarn. He said a man by the name of Hawksley went to a horse dealer and said:

'Look-a-here, I want to buy a hoss. A useful, all-round factotum kind o' hoss. You know what I mean. A hoss I can ride in the Sons o' Temperance parade. A good, quiet, family hoss that wife and babies can trust themselves to in the cart. A hoss the boy can ride in the spring races, and at the same time the sorter hoss what'll plow double with an ox on a plinch. A hoss, I mean for say——'

"'Mr. Hawksley,' said the dealer, with a sour laugh, 'ye don't want the hoss to wait on the table, do ye?'"

Don't Cough, but Live Long.

If every cough were cured before it got a strong hold, human life would be lengthened by many years. If every coughing sufferer knew that Kemp's Balsam would stop the cough in a few minutes, he would be glad to escape the serious consequences. If any medicine will cure a cough, Kemp's Balsam will do it. At druggists' and dealers', 25c.

Let Me Tell You Something

A woman who is sick and suffering, and won't at least try a medicine which has the record of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, is to blame for her own wretched condition.

There are literally hundreds of thousands of women in the United States who have been benefited by this famous old remedy, which was produced from roots and herbs over thirty years ago by a woman to relieve woman's suffering.

Read what these women say:

Camden, N. J.—"It is with pleasure that I send my testimonial for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, hoping it may induce other suffering women to avail themselves of the benefit of this valuable remedy.

"I suffered from pains in my back and side, sick headaches, no appetite, was tired and nervous all the time, and so weak I could hardly stand. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound made me a well woman—and this valuable medicine shall always have my praise."—Mrs. W. P. Valentine, 902 Lincoln Ave., Camden, N. J.

Erie, Pa.—"I suffered for five years from female troubles, and at last was almost helpless. I tried three doctors but they did me no good. My sister advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it has made me well and strong. I hope all suffering women will just give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial, for it is worth its weight in gold."—Mrs. J. P. Endlich, R. F. D. 7, Erie, Pa.

Since we guarantee that all testimonials which we publish are genuine, is it not fair to suppose that if Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had the virtue to help these women it will help any other woman who is suffering from the same trouble.

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No sick woman does justice to herself who will not try this famous medicine. Made exclusively from roots and herbs, and has thousands of cures to its credit.

If the slightest trouble appears which you do not understand, write to Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass., for her advice—it is free and always helpful.

HAMLINS WIZARD OIL THE OIL THAT PENETRATES — GREAT FOR PAIN

A Victim.

Horace Bixey, the dogen of Mississippi pilots, is still at the wheel at 82. To him Mark Twain served his apprenticeship. A Vicksburg reporter asked Mr. Bixey a recipe for a hale old age.

"Temperance, young man," the pilot replied. "Intemperance is what kills us off. Oh, the victims," he said, in his whimsical way, "the sad victims of intemperance I have seen!

"Once, I remember, a passenger of ours fell overboard. We fished him out with a boathook after he had been soaking on the bottom half an hour or so. We laid him limp and sopping on the deck, and a steward ran for the whisky bottle. As I pried the man's mouth open to pour some whisky down als throat, his lips moved. A kind of murmur came from them. I put my ear down close to listen, and I heard the half-drowned wretch say:

"'Roll me on a bar'l fust to get some o' this water out. It'll weaken the licker."

WHAT JOY THEY BRING TO EVERY HOME

as with joyous hearts and smiling faces they romp and play—when in health—and how conducive to health the games in which they indulge, the outdoor life they enjoy, the cleanly, regular habits they should be taught to form and the wholesome diet of which they should partake. How tenderly their health should be preserved, not by constant medication, but by careful avoidance of every medicine of an injurious or objectionable nature, and if at any time a remedial agent is required, to assist nature, only those of known excellence should be used; remedies which are pure and wholesome and truly beneficial in effect, like the pleasant laxative remedy, Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna, manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna has come into general favor in many millions of well informed families, whose estimate of its quality and excellence is based upon personal knowledge and use.

Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna has also met with the approval of physicians generally, because they know it is wholesome, simple and gentle in its action. We inform all reputable physicians as to the medicinal principles of Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna, obtained by an original method, from certain plants known to them to act most beneficially, and presented in an agreeable syrup in which the wholesome Californian blue figs are used to promote the pleasant taste; therefore it is not a secret remedy, and hence we are free to refer to all well informed physicians, who do not approve of patent medicines and never favor indiscriminate self-medication.

Please to remember and teach your children also that the genuine Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna always has the full name of the Company—California Fig Syrup Co.—plainly printed on the front of every package and that it is for sale in bottles of one size only. If any dealer offers any other than the regular Fifty cent size, or having printed thereon the name of any other company, do not accept it. If you fail to get the genuine you will not get its beneficial effects. Every family should always have a bottle on hand, as it is equally beneficial for the parents and the children, whenever a laxative remedy is required.

FREE TO YOU—MY SISTER

Free to You and Every Sister Suffering From Woman's Ailments.

I am a woman.
I know woman's sufferings.
I have found the cure.

I will mail, free of any charge, my home treatment with full instructions to any sufferer from women's ailments. I want to tell all women about this cure—you, my reader, for yourself, your daughter, your mother, or your sister. I want to tell you how to cure yourselves at home without the help of a doctor. Men cannot understand women's sufferings. What we women know from experience, we know better than any doctor. I know that my home treatment is a safe and sure cure for Leucorrhœa or Whites, Discharges, Ulceration, Displacement or Falling of the Womb, Profuse, Scanty or Painful Periods, Uterine or Ovarian Tumors or Growths; also pains in the head, back and bowels, bearing down feelings, nervousness, creeping feeling up the spine, melancholy, desire to cry, hot flashes, weariness, kidney and bladder troubles where caused by weaknesses peculiar to our sex.

I want to send you a complete ten days' treatment entirely free to prove to you that you can cure yourself at home, easily, quickly and surely. Remember, that it will cost you nothing to give the treatment a complete trial; and if you should wish to continue, it will cost you only about 12 cents a week, or less than two cents a day. It will not interfere with your work or occupation. Just send me your name and address, tell me how you suffer if you wish, and I will send you the treatment for your case, entirely free, in plain wrapper, by return mail. I will also send you free of cost, my book—"WOMAN'S OWN MEDICAL ADVISER" with explanatory illustrations showing why women suffer, and how they can easily cure themselves at home. Every woman should have it, and learn to think for herself. Then when the doctor says—"You must have an operation," you can decide for yourself. Thousands of women have cured themselves with my home remedy. It cures all, old or young. To Mothers of Daughters, I will explain a simple home treatment which speedily and effectually cures Leucorrhœa, Green Sickness and Painful or Irregular Menstruation in Young Ladies. Plumpness and health always result from its use.

Wherever you live, I can refer you to ladies of your own locality who know and will gladly tell any sufferer that this Home Treatment really cures all women's diseases, and makes women well, strong, plump and robust. Just send me your address, and the free ten days' treatment is yours, also the book. Write today, as you may not see this offer again. Address

You should not delay under any circumstances in cases of Kidney and Bladder trouble. You should take something promptly that you know is reliable, something like DeWitt's Kidney and Bladder Pills. They are unequaled for weak back, backache, inflammation of the bladder, rheumatic pains, etc. When you ask for DeWitt's Kidney and Bladder Pills, be sure you get them. They are antiseptic. Accept no substitutes; insist upon getting the right kind. Sold by Geo. W. Geddes. 13-1m Roscoe Livergood and Fred Showalter, who have been traveling through the south for several months, returned to their old firesides in Butler on Wednesday.

The Happy Family Circle

Father and mother, sisters and brothers, soon get to know one another's intimate affairs; and the little bowel and liver disturbances soon become household comment. It is well to remember that in constipation and indigestion, and other troubles of the stomach, liver and bowels a quick cure can be had by the use of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Take it tonight and you will feel perfectly well in the morning. It is absolutely guaranteed to do what is claimed, and if you want to try it before buying, send your address for a free sample bottle to Pepsin Syrup Co., 119 Caldwell Bldg., Monticello, Ill. It is sold by all druggists at 50c and $1 a bottle. 13-1m

The Strain of Life

This is a busy, active world, and the man succeeds best who has the greatest health and strength to fight the battles of life. You can't be healthy, strong and clear minded if you suffer from constipation, dyspepsia, liver trouble, flatulency, heartburn, etc. To cure these diseases take Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, the great regulator. It is absolutely guaranteed to do what is claimed, and if you would like to try it before buying, send your address for a free sample bottle to Pepsin Syrup Co., 119 Caldwell Bldg., Monticello, Ill. It is sold by all druggists at 50c and $1 a bottle. 13-1m

Three men in South Bend have defrauded the government out of $30,000 taxes on oleomargarine they manufactured and sold as pure and unadulterated butter. The fellows are out on $12,000 bonds and will be tried this week by the U. S. district attorney, C. W. Miller.

Its a Top Notch Door

Great deeds compel regard. The world crowns its doers. That's why the American people have crowned Dr. King's New Discovery the King of Throat and Lung remedies. Every atom is a health force. It kills germs, and colds and lagrippe vanish. It heals cough-racked membranes and coughing stops. Sore, inflamed bronchial tubes and lungs are cured and hemorrhages cease. Dr. Geo. More, Black Jack, N. C. writes, "it cured me of lung trouble, pronounced hopeless by all doctors." 50c, $1.00. Trial bottle free. Guaranteed at Stone's drug store. 13-1m

Money Comes in Bunches

to A. A. Chisholm, of Treadwell, N. Y., now. His reason is well worth reading: "For a long time I suffered from indigestion, torpid liver, constipation, nervousness, and general debility," he writes. "I couldn't sleep, had no appetite, nor ambition, grew weaker every day in spite of all medical treatment. Then used Electric Bitters. Twelve bottles restored all my old-time health and vigor. Now I can attend to business every day. It's a wonderful medicine." Infallible for Stomach, Liver, Kidneys, Blood and Nerves. 50c. at Stone's drug store. 13-1m of Cod Liver Oil is the means of life and enjoyment of life to thousands: men, women and children.

When appetite fails, it restores it. When food is a burden, it lifts the burden.

When you lose flesh, it brings the plumpness of health.

When work is hard and duty is heavy, it makes life bright.

It is the thin edge of the wedge; the thick end is food. But what is the use of food when you hate it and can't digest it?

Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil is the food that makes you forget your stomach.

Cost a Large Sum

Saturday James Provines, superintendent of construction of the Garrett city drain, filed his report with the county clerk. It is a voluminous document, typewritten, and when bound in to book form makes a large volume of 295 pages. It contains a description of over 3,000 properties that are affected by the drain and against which assessments are to be made. Mr. Provines himself has spent $100 and has had the help of a number of assistants in the surveyor's office. The larger portion of the surveyor's work was done by Frank McDowell. The total cost for the surveying and compiling the book was about $1,500.

Best Treatment for Colds

"Most ordinary colds will yield to the simplest treatment," says the Chicago Tribune, "moderate laxatives, hot foot baths, a free perspiration and an avoidance of exposure to cold and wet after treatment." While this treatment is simple, it requires considerable trouble, and the one adopting it must remain in doors for a day or two, or a fresh cold is almost sure to be contracted, and in many instances pneumonia follows. Is it not better to pin your faith to an old reliable preparation like Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, that is famous for its cures of colds and can always be depended upon? For sale by Geo. W. Geddes. 16 3

Seventy-seven accessions have been made to the Columbia City Baptist church, as the result of the recent revival meetings there.

Rheumatism

More than nine out of every ten cases of rheumatism are simply rheumatism of the muscles, due to cold or damp, or chronic rheumatism. In such cases no internal treatment is required. The free application of Chamberlain's Liniment is all that is needed, and it is certain to give quick relief. Give it a trial and see for yourself how quickly it relieves the pain and soreness. The medicines usually given internally for rheumatism are poisonous or very strong medicines. They are worse than useless in case of chronic and muscular rheumatism. For sale by Geo. W. Geddes. 16 3

A big art exhibition will be held in South Bend this week, to raise money to purchase pictures for the schools.

Object to Strong Medicines

Many people object to taking the strong medicines usually prescribed by physicians for rheumatism. There is no need of internal treatment in any case of muscular or chronic rheumatism, and more than nine out of every ten cases of the disease are of one or the other of these varieties. When there is no fever and little (if any) swelling, you may know that it is only necessary to apply Chamberlain's Liniment freely to get quick relief. Try it. For sale by Geo. W. Geddes. 16-3

Miss Leota Helmick, a popular young lady residing at Collins, is dead at her home, from consumption.

For Constipation

Mr. L. H. Farnham, a prominent druggist of Spirit Lake, Iowa, says: "Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets are certainly the best thing on the market for constipation." Give these tablets a trial. You are certain to find them agreeable and pleasant in effect. Price, 25 cents. Samples free. For sale by Geo. W. Geddes. 16-3

Warsaw G. A. R. man will observe Memorial day on the Saturday before the day itself.

A Healing Salve for Burns, Chapped Hands and Sore Nipples

As a healing salve for burns, sores, sore nipples and chapped hands Chamberlain's Salve is most excellent. It allays the pain of a burn almost instantly, and unless the injury is very severe, heals the parts without leaving a scar. Price, 25 cents. For sale by Geo. W. Geddes. 16-3

LEGAL NOTICES

Notice of Insolvency

In the matter of the Estate of John Henry Secor, deceased. } In the DeKalb Circuit Court. No. 1398.

Notice is hereby given that upon petition filed in said court by John J. Oberlin, administrator of said estate, setting up the insufficiency of the estate of said decedent to pay the debts and liabilities thereof, the judge of said court did, on the 13th day of April, 1909, find said estate to be probably insolvent, and order the same to be settled accordingly. The creditors of said estate are therefore hereby notified of such insolvency, and required to file their claims against said estate for allowance.

Witness the clerk and seal of said court, at Auburn, Indiana, this 13th day of April, 1909.

Get at the root of the trouble.
Rubbing an aching back may relieve it,
But it won't cure it.
You must reach the root of it—the kidneys.
Doan's Kidney Pills go right at it;
Reach the cause; relieve the pain.
They cure, too, so Butler people say.

Mrs. J. N. Firestone, R. F. D. No. 2, Butler, Ind., says: "Last fall when I was having a severe spell of backache and was scarcely able to get about on account of the terrible pains through my kidneys, I procured a box of Doan's Kidney Pills. After using them a short time, my trouble disappeared and I felt much better in every way. Knowing Doan's Kidney Pills to be a good kidney remedy, I heartily endorse them."

Bad Backache

Such agonies as some women suffer, every month, from backache!

Is it necessary? No. It can be prevented and relieved, when caused by female trouble, by taking a medicine with specific, curative action, on the female organs and functions, which acts by relieving the congestion, stopping the pain and building the organs and functions up to a proper state of health. Try.

TRIED TO CRACK BANK AT ST. JOE

Cracksmen made an ineffectual attempt to break into the St. Joe Valley bank at St. Joe, DeKalb county, early Friday, and fled before their efforts to get into the bank's vaults had even approached success. It is presumed that they were frightened away, but so far as is known, not a soul in the little town heard the robbers, and the effort to crack the bank was not discovered until the bank opened for the day.

The St. Joe Valley bank is a private institution, owned by Ex-Congressman J. D. Leighty and W. C. Patterson. It is located in a brick building, adjoining the side wall of which is the vault, constructed with an air space between the wall of the building and that of the vault. Operating from the outside of the building, the cracksmen penetrated the building wall and reached the air space which separates it from the vault, using and explosive for this purpose, but the vault wall was not assailed, presumably because the robbers became alarmed and feared discovery.

At the point where they had operated were found some planking which they had arranged to protect themselves when the explosive should be touched off, an oil barrel and some tools with which they had drilled the brick wall.

Col. Strathmore 2:12¼

Col. Strathmore 2:12¼, owned and in the stud of L. J. Diehl, Butler, Ind., the sire of Clatemore, with a four-year-old record of 2:21¼, winner of five straight races his first year out, and Marion Strathmore, with a two-year-old record of 2:27 in a three-year-old class, is a representative of the greatest family of early producers in the world. He is an exceptionally fast horse himself and also a sire of early speed. His sire, Strathmore, is the sire of Abbie Strathmore 2:07¼, Terrell S. 2:08¼, Strathmeath 2:10¼, Strathdennis 2:10¾, and eighty-five other standard performers. He is one of the greatest of the trotting horse family builders. His dam, Crescent, is herself a race mare with a record of 2:24¼, and is the dam of Col. Strathmore 2:12¼, Crescendo 5:15¼, and George Crescens 2:07¼ as a three-year-old, she by Ira Wilkes, sire of eighteen standard performers; his second dam, Rigolette, took a race record of 2:22 and is also the dam of Exmore 2:18¼, Crescent 2:24¼. Many of his colts now in training show extreme speed, one in particular, a yearling, owned at Logansport, Ind., that has stepped an eighth in 17¼ seconds hitched to a cart. They are uniformally good individuals, good headed and have plenty of speed. Col strathmore is a coming young sire, worthy the consideration of breeders. Terms $20 00 to insure. $25 00 for living foal.

OPTION ELECTION IN THIS COUNTY

The Auburn Courier of Tuesday evening contained the following interesting information:

A county mass meeting will be held in Auburn on Saturday, May 8, to consider the matter of calling a local option election, to be held in this county. At present all the townships in the county are dry, made so by remonstrances filed. That is, there have been majority remonstrances filed in all the townships. But those in Richland, Franklin and Fairfield townships have recently expired. That in Butler township will expire in January. Hence the temperance people see the necessity of a local option election so as to keep these townships dry. Already there is a move being made for the application for licenses in Butler. If an election is held it will be some time before November.

LETTER FROM ART LATSON

The following letter from Art Latson was received last week:

Magdalena Bay, Mex., Apr. 10, 1909

DEAR MOTHER AND SISTER:

Received your letter of the 19th and was glad to hear from you. I am well and in the best of health. I hope everyone at home are well and that you are improving.

We have been here very near four weeks and do not expect to get away from here for a couple of weeks yet. Will be glad when it is over. We fired our 3-inch guns last night and did fine. We got 18 hits out of a possible 28. I was loader on one of them. It is great. We started in at 11:30 last night and finished at 2 a. m. We fire six pounders tonight. We have 100 shots to fire.

Last Sunday a steamer ran on the rocks about forty miles below us. We went out with Admiral Sebree to the wreck. She was loaded down with fruit and we got our share.

Well, as the mail closes, I must also. If anyone from home comes to Seattle this summer to the fair tell them to look me up. We will be there also. Love to all.

I am your loving son,
ART LATSON.

The baccalaureate sermon will be delivered by Rev. S. B. Braden at the U. B. church, Sunday evening, May 9.

The sewer work on Willow street progressed with great rapidity and was finished on Tuesday—that is the digging and laying of tile.

A. F. Brindley has been suffering with varioloid the past week, the result of having his arm vaccinated. He has been a very sick man.

Push for pavements, and don't let up until the end is accomplished. Editor Higley's little hammer hasn't much weight and will do but little damage. Will someone please get him something else to knock on?

The Butler high school commencement will be held in Thompson's opera house, Friday evening, May 14. The graduating class invitations were printed at the HERALD office this year, and they are the finest that have been issued for a long time.

Don't fail to attend the Indian opera "Pohawtan" at the opera house Monday night, May 3. Nearly 100 in beautiful Indian costumes. Plenty of fun, two funny Indians, two comical sailors, a big chorus and the famous American Beauty Dance. 1t

Elias Zimmerman, an Auburn man, while leaving his home Saturday morning fell from the steps and broke his arm. When he fell he sustained severe injuries on the head and an ugly gash was cut in his forehead. The accident also impaired his eyesight.

The 157th regimental reunion Indiana Volunteer Infantry will hold its annual reunion at Elkhart on Monday, May 10. Quite a number of the members of Co. I reside in Butler and will no doubt attend. Col. Geo. W. Studebaker and other field officers will be present.

If the people of DeKalb county vote on the question of local option, the verdict will be for the "drys" without a doubt. Delaware county went dry Tuesday, and Muncie, a large town, voted with the anti-saloon people. Delaware county declared against the saloon by nearly 3,000 majority.

The high school commencement exercises will be held at the Thompson opera house, Friday evening, May 14. The pupils give their own program, assisted by the male quartette and Mrs. Stage's orchestra. The usual admission fee of 15 cents and 10 cents for school children will be charged to help defray expenses.

Tod Warner, who has been working in one of the large barber shops of Detroit, has purchased a half interest in the shop of W. H. Holtzberg, and commenced the partnership Monday morning Mr. Warner is an artist in his line and he will be a drawing card for the well-established trade that Mr. Holtzberg has built up.

The commencement exercises for the senior class of the Spencerville high school will be held April 30, at 8 o'clock in the Lutheran church. Class roll is as follows: Jennie L. Steward, Lester M. Houck, Frances Butler, Argyl J. Beams, May A. Dally, Edward S Carnes, Bessie A. Hart, Murray E. Errick and Clarence T. Steward.

The intervals between the legislatures of the state will not be vacation time for the governor. He has before him now twenty-nine appointments which must be made to supply places where the term of the present incumbent expires in April of May. Most of the positions are honorary, but they all require qualified men and it is no easy task to get the proper parties.

The Boyston collar lock, a new invention that is used on horse collars, is one of the most useful and economical things that a horseman can own. When putting a collar on your horse with the use of this lock, no straps are needed, and the collar is adjusted and fastened in one-tenth of the time required by the old-fashioned method. Wherever these locks have been introduced they sell rapidly and give splendid satisfaction. Mr. John Horner has the exclusive right to sell them in DeKalb county and Williams county, Ohio. See him if you want a good thing.

Special Services

At Methodist church next Sunday. Text for Sunday morning, Psalms 32:8, "I will instruct thee and teach thee in the way which thou shalt go: I will guide thee with mine eye" My subject is, "Heavenly Tradewinds," and by this I mean the various ways our heavenly Father has for helping us Sea 1st, Opportunity, 2d, Common Providences, 3d, Special Providences, 4th, Judgments.

Sunday evening Rev. S. Light, D. D., the District Superintendent, will preach.

You are invited to all these meetings.

Our men are requesting that the ladies remove their hats at church. They say more of them will come to church if the ladies will do this.

All our people should attend church. Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy.

"A Sabbath well spent,
Brings a week of content,
And strength for the toil of tomorrow,
But a Sabbath profaned
What e'er may be gained,
Is a sure forerunner of sorrow."

Commit this stanza to memory.

BANDITS ROBBED LOGANSPORT MEN

Officer Joseph Kruger was fatally wounded and one highwayman was killed in a desperate battle Wednesday morning at Logansport, between Officers Kruger and Burke and two highwaymen. The highwaymen had just held up and robbed five well-known citizens whom they met on the principal street just before daylight. A sum aggregating $100 was taken from the five men by the highwaymen, who are supposed to be followers of a circus. The men carried four revolvers and the citizens were easy victims.

When the police heard of the robbery Officers Kruger and Burke started in pursuit. The men were overtaken within two blocks from the scene and accosted. The reply was a bullet which fatally wounded Kruger. The latter fired as he fell and killed one of the men, while the other escaped. A general alarm brought policemen and citizens in automobiles in the chase, and the second man was caught north of town later in the morning.

LEGAL NOTICES

ORDINANCE
NO. ——

An ordinance requiring the owner or owners of all lots, pieces or parcels of land abutting on Broadway or Main streets, Oak street from Canal street to West street and on Depot street from Broadway street to the west line of West avenue, in the city of Butler, Indiana, to tap the water main and bring the pipe to the lot line, and to take the house slants from the sewer to the lot line in accordance with the ordinances now governing such water and sewer connections.

SECTION ONE

Be it ordained by the common council of the city of Butler, Indiana, that the owner or owners of each lot, part of a lot, piece or parcel of land abutting on either of the following named streets in said city, viz: Broadway and Main streets, Oak street from Canal street to West street, and Depot street from Broadway street to the west line of West avenue, be, and they are hereby required, within ninety (90) days from and after the taking effect of this ordinance, to tap the water main and bring the pipe to the lot line, and to take the house slant to the sewer from its present ending to the lot line in accordance with the ordinances now governing such water and sewer connections.

SECTION TWO

Upon the failure of the owner or owners of any lot, part of a lot, piece or parcel of land abutting on said streets named in Sec. 1, hereof, to make such water tap or house slant connection, within the time and in the manner provided in Sec. 1, hereof, then the common council of said city of Butler, Indiana, shall cause such water tap or house slant to be made, and the costs thereof to be assessed against, and become a lien upon, such lot, part of a lot, piece or parcel of land to which such water tap or house slant is connected, and the collection thereof, together with a reasonable attorney's fee, may be enforced in any court of competent jurisdiction.

SECTION THREE

This ordinance shall be in force from and after its passage and publication in the Butler Record and the DeKalb County Herald, once each week for two successive weeks.

Passed in council this 26th day of April, 1909.

Use Butler flour.

Miss Hazel Whetsel returned Sunday from a two weeks visit with her aunt, Mrs. Myers, near Butler.

There is one case of measles in this neighborhood, but many of our people have been exposed.

Quite a number from here attended the entertainment at Moores school house, Saturday night, and were well pleased which speaks well for those who took part. The main characters were from the Pyles school district. The Moores orchestra furnished music.

O. M. Nimmons, of this place, Bert Bechtel, of near Waterloo, and E. B. Nimmons, of Wilmington township, left Tuesday for Marion, Ind., to attend a Holstein Friesian stock sale.

The L. A. S. have purchased a fine new organ for the church, which shows that our ladies have not been idle during the winter.

Rev. Freeland, pastor of the M. E. church, at Auburn, preached at this place Sunday afternoon to a large audience. Mr. Freeland is a minister of more than usual ability, and the people of this church are to be congratulated for being able to secure the services of such a fine speaker. There will be preaching services every two weeks on Sunday afternoon.

THE BAND WILL PLAY SWEET MELODIES

That Butler will have a band this summer is now an assured fact. J. E. Sturgis has been guaranteed enough money by the business men to warrant a first-class musical organization for Butler, and weekly open air concerts will be given, beginning some time in May.

Mr. C. T. Apt will have charge of the band until Mr. Sturgis retirns home in June when the latter will become director and some high grade music can be expected.

Weekly concerts have been enjoyed in Butler for the past four summers, and we are pleased to announce that better things are in store for the people this season.

House Caught Fire.

The large farm house of Henry Showalter, north of Butler, came very near being destroyed by fire Tuesday forenoon.

Mr. Showalter was in town on business and only Mrs Showalter was at home when the blaze started.

Frank Gaff was passing the house at the time and noticing flames issuing from the house, he ran in and made an investigation.

Although there had been no fire in the furnace for some time, the soot in the furnace pipe had in some mysterious way become ignited and was burning fiercely when discovered. Mr. Gaff applied the proper remedies, and by hard work extinguished the flames before any damage was done.

Neil Joliff, a middle-aged railroad man residing at Ashley, in this county, has disappeared from his home in that city and his whereabouts are not known. Joliff disappeared about the 10th of last January, but at that time he was supposed to be away on a visit. His relatives have heard nothing from him since that time and his disappearance has caused much anxiety among them. It is thought he may be in Montana.

FEATURES OF INTEREST

ABOUT THAT WHICH HAS BEEN AND IS TO BE.

All Sides and Conditions of Things are Shown. Nothing Overlooked to make it Complete.

Dynamite Cathedral in New Orleans.

The famous old St. Louis cathedral on Chartres street, in New Orleans, La., was shaken by an explosion believed to have resulted from the placing of a bomb in the south tower of the building. The explosion, heard for many blocks, and creating wild excitement in that section of the city, occurred when the church was practically empty of worshipsers. A priest, a woman and a child were the only occupants of the building at the time and none was injured. Had the explosion occurred two or three hours earlier, when the church was thronged with worshipers, a stampede with fatal results would have almost certainly followed. The St. Louis cathedral is one of the most famous Catholic churches in the United States. It is beautiful in design and workmanship and one of the most spacious edifices of the kind in the south. It was built more than a hundred years ago, during the Spanish regime in Louisiana.

Buried Alive in Ditch.

The bodies of James B. Long, 51 years old, and Albert McKibben, 34, farmers, were found in a deep ditch on the farm of Frank Peterson, seven miles northeast of Muncie, Ind. The men had been engaged by Peterson to dig a deep ditch that is to drain a swamp, and were ten feet or more below the surface when the walls of the ditch caved in upon them, burying them alive. When the men failed to come home at a late hour their families became alarmed and the people of the neighborhood began a search that resulted in finding the bodies. James Brown, a third man who had been employed on the ditch, quit work at noon and thus probably escaped death.

Brandenburg Arrested for Larceny.

Broughton Brandenburg, a newspaper and magazine writer of New York, was arrested in San Francisco, Cal., on a New York charge of grand larceny. He is accused of getting notes from the late Grover Cleveland's stenographer and publishing them in the form of a political letter in the New York Times.

Missing Boy Found Starving.

Hugh Chaney, fifteen years old, of Hopkinsville, Ky., who disappeared from his home nearly three weeks ago and for whom a reward was offered, was found by the town marshal at Howell, Ind. The boy had not eaten anything for several days and was so exhausted he could hardly walk.

Four Die in Fire.

Four persons lost their lives and three others were seriously injured in a fire that destroyed the Central hotel in Topeka, Kan. The hotel, which was a two-story brick structure was situated on Kansas avenue between Fifth and Sixth streets in the business district.

Sixteen Hurt in Tornado.

Sixteen persons were injured, one perhaps fatally, in a tornado which destroyed a large part of the town of Centrahoma, near Oklahoma City, Okla. A child of the Rev. E. J. Matthews is thought to be dying. Mrs. Matthews and her four children also were injured.

Teddy and Kermit Both "Ailing."

A dispatch from Nairobi, East Africa, says: Both Theodore Roosevelt and his son Kermit are indisposed as a result of their recent hunting activity and their journey from Kapiti plains to the ranch of Sir Alfred Pease on the Athi river. They are resting at the ranch.

Boat Sinks; Eight Lives Lost.

Eight persons were lost and seven others on board had a thrilling escape from death when the tow boat Eagle, of the Louisiana Petroleum company, went down early in the Mississippi river south of New Orleans, La.

Famous Musical Director Dead.

Heinrich Conreid, former director of the Metropolitan Opera house in New York, who suffered an apopletic strike several days ago, died peacefully at Merau, Austria.

Many Killed While at Prayer.

The roof of the Cathedral at Torbes in Lugo province, Spain, collapsed while mass was being celebrated. Nine persons were killed and thirty were wounded.

Crawfish and Turtles in Catfish.

William Powers, a local fisherman, of Rensselaer, Ind., opened the season by catching a two-pound blue catfish. When the fish was dressed he found seven crawfish and two small hardshell turtles in its stomach. He expects to try turtles for catfish bait this year.

Quarryman Crushed to Death.

Perry Fitzgerald, of Bedford, Ind., age fifty years, was crushed to death with a heavy stone at the Dark Hollow quarry. He leaves a widow and two children.

ROYAL PALACE YIELDS; SULTAN AWAITS FATE

Yildiz Garrison Surrenders to Constitutional Army Without Terms.

MILITARY RULE ALL THE CITY

Abdul Hamid to Be Dealt with by Parliament and His Part in Mutiny Studied.

The Yildiz garrison surrendered Sunday to the constitutional forces in Constantinople. The commanders of these battalions began sending in their submission to Mahmoud Schefket Pasha Saturday night and the whole of the troops protecting the palace gave their formal and unconditional surrender shortly after dawn. Niaci Bey, who is called the hero of the July revolution, is now in command of the garrison.

Sultan Abdul Hamid has been permitted to remain within the walls of the Yildiz Kiosk, where Saturday, in company with his ministers, he waited for the outcome of the struggle between his loyal troops and the army of investment, each hour bringing to him word of a fresh disaster. His army of defense, whipped, slaughtered and scattered, has vanished and the constitutionalists rule the capital city of Turkey and its 1,500,000 inhabitants. What the future of the government is to be is in doubt, but it is possible the victors, satisfied they have won all they sought, will leave Abdul Hamid his throne, but take from him all power, giving parliament control of affairs.

After a day of carnage—in which fully one thousand soldiers were killed and many times that number wounded, the streets for hours echoing the roar of artillery, the rattle of rifle bullets and the clash of sabers, while walls of masonry crumbled to dust, battered down by the shells of big guns—Constantinople Saturday night was at peace. Calmness and confidence not known in weeks prevailed, showing popular belief in the ability of the victors to keep their pledges of restoring order.

Mukstar Bey, leader of the force which invaded the city, was killed fighting, and it is certain other brave men of the constitutionalist forces will be counted with the dead. Three Americans, two of them correspondents, were wounded during the battle, they having ventured too near the scene of combat. All Americans and other foreigners, with these exceptions, escaped harm.

VIOLENT QUAKES JAR LISBON.

King Manuel Helps Check Panic and Fight the Fires.

A series of violent earthquakes occurred in Lisbon Friday night, and seismic disturbances, according to reports from various places, were felt throughout Portugal. For a time fears were entertained of a repetition of the great earthquake of 1755, which demolished the city. No material damage was done, although the ground rose and fell in wavelike motions; buildings swayed and the walls of a number of old houses were broken. No one was hurt, but in various parts of the city fires broke out and a condition of great alarm prevailed. King Manuel accompanied by his aids, appeared on the streets and took a prominent part in encouraging the firemen and reassuring the terrified people.

WILL BUILD $2,000,000 CANAL.

Private Capital to Dig Extension to the U. S. Irrigation Channel.

Through the filing in Grand Junction, Col., of a plat for an extension to the government high line canal to be built by private capital the first public intimation was given of a project second only in importance to the government project itself. The canal will cost $2,000,000 and will reclaim 250,000 acres of land. Beginning at the lower end of the government canal the extension will run 100 miles into Utah to a point in a canyon where a reservoir five miles in length will be built.

NINE KILLED IN OHIO STORM.

Six Fatally Injured and Property Loss Is Over $1,000,000.

Nine persons were killed, six fatally hurt, and at least fifty sustained injuries and property valued at more than $1,000,000 was destroyed in a gale which swept through Cleveland and northern Ohio Wednesday. Fred Grugel committed suicide during the height of the storm because he was afraid he was about to be killed. He rushed into a barn out of the rain and drank carbolic acid. He left a note explaining his action. Roofs were lifted off houses, walls hurled down, strongly braced smoke stacks picked up and chimneys demolished. Porches were stripped off residences and small buildings were carried away. The largest single injury that was done will be to St. Stanislaus' Church, East Sixty-fifth street and Forman avenue, in Cleveland. The wind practically demolished the structure. The loss is estimated at $125,000.

CINCINNATI BOY IS KIDNAPED.

Disappearance Follows the Receipt of Threatening Letter by Mother.

Leo Mulhern, the 12-year-old son of Mrs. John Mulhern, 413 West 5th street, Cincinnati, is missing, following the receipt by his mother of two letters threatening to kidnap the boy. The police believe that they have another Willie Whitla case to solve. Mrs. Mulhern received a third letter saying that the boy had been kidnaped and that he would not be returned to his home until she deposited $300 at a place designated in the former letters. Mrs. Mulhern's husband died recently, leaving her several hundred dollars of insurance. Leo attends the St. Peter Cathedral parochial school, and left home the other morning at the usual time for school. He did not arrive there, and when he failed to return home for luncheon at noon his mother became worried. Inquiry at the school developed the fact that the boy had not been there.

Girl Killed by Fall from Horse.

Miss Mary Monahan, aged 24, of Whitewater, Wis., was almost instantly killed in Amarillo, Texas, when a horse she was riding dashed headlong into an electric car. The young woman was thrown violently to the ground, the fall causing her ribs to pierce her lungs.

Rocking of Skiff Costs Two Lives.

Through the rocking of a skiff while crossing the Ohio River at Ironton, Ohio, four persons were thrown into the water, and Frank Matney and Alice Grounds were drowned. William Sharp and Alice Kelley swam ashore.

PEACE IN COAL MINES.

Operators and Workers Practically Agree on New Contract.

Peace in the anthracite coal region is assured for another three years.

President Thomas L. Lewis of the United Mine Workers of America, who with the three district presidents had been in conference with a subcommittee of the operators in Philadelphia for two days, made a positive announcement Thursday night that a new working agreement would be signed before the end of the next week. This contract will be based upon a proposition which has been submitted by the operators, and which, in the opinion of Mr. Lewis and his colleagues, contains a number of important concessions.

Acting on behalf of the union miners, Mr. Lewis accepted the proposition, subject to the approval of a tri-district convention, which was to be held in Scranton the next Tuesday afternoon. There is little doubt that the men will accept this new offer and will authorize their officers to sign the agreement. It is believed that the new agreement will accord recognition in some form to the organizations of anthracite miners, not as a branch of the United Mine Workers of America, but as a distinct hard coal association. The contract will also provide that all new work shall be paid according to the wage scale authorized by the strike commission. There will be no increase of wages, but there will likely be readjustment of wages at new collieries.

DEATH TAKES GOV. LILLEY.

Peaceful End of Executive's in Contrast with Career.

Surrounded by his family of wife and three children and by his brother and sister, Governor George L. Lilley, after a day of sinking spells, died at 7:26 o'clock Wednesday night in the executive mansion on Farmington avenue, Hartford, Conn. Following his fight in Congress in the submarine boat exposures a year ago and his gubernatorial campaign of last summer and fall, Mr. Lilley returned to his home in Waterbury, Conn., in a state of nervous collapse, which was not benefited by the criticism which greeted his first message as Governor. A trip to a New Jersey sanitarium failed to benefit Mr. Lilley, and following his return to Hartford he gradually failed, the final dissolution being due to kidney troube, which affected his heart and tended to intestinal poisoning. Lieutenant Governor Weeks will at once assume office.

The Canadian government has removed the foot and mouth quarantine on cattle from all States except Pennsylvania.

The Philippine assembly, by a vote of 47 to 9, refused to concur in the resolution of insular commission in support of the Payne tariff bill.

In the Socialist Congress at St. Etienne, France, the moderate counsels of M. Jaures have been rejected and the more radical leader, Guesde, has been given full rein.

Mechanics have signed a new agreement with the Canadian Pacific Railway, the company and the unions having arrived at a satisfactory arrangement for the new schedule.

Americans engaged in relief work at Messina have built 250 houses for earthquake sufferers, and have arranged for the completion of 1,250 more. The houses are built of American lumber provided with the relief fund raised in this country.

Secretary Knox was informed by the Nicaraguan minister, Senor Espinoza, that President Zelaya had assented to a settlement of the Emery case along the lines proposed by the State Department, and that a commission would be sent to Washington for that purpose.

The French Tariff Commission in making recent revisions of the maximum and minimum schedules of duties on imports is understood to have made certain concessions to the American trade in machinery. This was done with the hope of convincing the United States Congress that France was desirous of keeping up good commercial relations with this country.

KEEP UP MASSACRE; PEOPLE ALL DESPAIR

Atrocities in Asiatic Turkey Continue and Starvation Claims Many.

SURVIVORS ARE IN DEEP MISERY

War Ships of Powers Land Marines, but Little Progress Is Made Toward Order.

The situation in Asiatic Turkey is one of extreme gravity. How many thousands have been massacred cannot even be estimated, because the disturbances have been so widespread that it is impossible to secure details of the happenings of the last ten days. The latest estimates of the number killed in the vilayet of Adana reaches approximately 25,000, and thousands have been done to death in the towns of other districts. The state of siege which several of the places are undergoing has brought the inhabitants to the verge of starvation, and each day brings its tales of further atrocities and the depths of misery and despair to which the savagery of the fanatics has brought the people. Several warships are now in the waters of the disturbed territory, but the disorders are so far-reaching that the efforts of the powers to restore normal conditions have as yet hardly been felt. A British warship has been ordered from Alexandretta to Suediah, where conditions have become worse. All the property of the Christians at Djebel Bereket has been destroyed. The total loss is unknown, but it will be enormous.

At the town of Adana more than 100 girls are missing. It is known that twenty-one native pastors have been killed. Fears are entertained that other American missionaries than those whose deaths have been reported have been murdered. There are 15,000 refugees in Adana and Tarsus and 5,000 at Mersina. A messenger, dispatched for relief by Miss Lambert, the American missionary, who two days previous sent an appeal to Constantinople, was killed in the streets. A second messenger, a soldier, was shot at. The vali has given assurances of the safety of Americans.

According to the latest information from the country around Alexandretta, the Armenian village of Kessab has been burned and many persons have been killed there. The women and children of Kessab are fugitives in the surounding mountains, exposed to hunger and violence. No news has been received from Hadjin, where five American women missionaries were reported to be in danger of violence at the hands of infuriated tribesmen.

EX-SENATOR STEWART DEAD.

Made Fortune as a Pioneer in Nevada—Served Long in Congress.

William M. Stewart of Nevada, former United States Senator, died at the Georgetown Hospital in Washington, D. C., Friday, following an operation. The body was taken to Nevada Sunday. William M. Stewart was born in Lyons, N. Y., Aug. 9, 1827. He left Yale College in 1849, attracted by the gold discoveries in California, and made the trip overland, and arrived in San Francisco in May, 1850. He studied law and was admitted to the bar in 1852. After serving a term as Attorney General of California he moved to Virginia City, Neb., in 1860. He became interested in the Comstock lode, which made him a fortune. He had a prominent part in the stirring frontier life of the time, and had many hairbreadth escapes from death. He served as United States Senator for Nevada 1863-75 and 1887-1905.

P. F. COLLIER DROPS DEAD.

Publisher Was Attending Horse Show at Riding Club.

Peter Fenelon Collier, founder of Collier's Weekly, famous as a polo player and follower of the hounds, dropped dead in the riding club at 7 East 58th street, New York, shortly before 1 o'clock Saturday morning. Mr. Collier had been attending the twentieth annual horse show under the auspices of this club and had several horses entered. Scores of society people were in attendance and after the exhibition the guests went to the third floor, where a banquet was served. During the evening Mr. Collier seemed to be in the best of health and chatted merrily with his friends. As every one was leaving the table and making their way to the elevators Mr. Collier suddenly put his hand to his heart and with a groan fell forward on the floor.

Blow Bank Vault; Get $2,300.

After wrecking the bank in Havana, Kan., with dynamite and securing $2,300, two robbers escaped on a handcar under a heavy fire from awakened residents. Later they boarded a freight train, were arrested at Bartlesville, Okla., but escaped.

PUTS TRACK GAMBLER ABOVE PIT SPECULATOR.

THOMAS R. MARSHALL

"I have more respect for the man who bets on horse races than I have for the man who gambles in the wheat market or other futures," said Gov. Thomas R. Marshall of Indiana, who attended the Gridiron Club dinner in Washington.

"There is some sport about the one, and not a redeeming feature about the other. If I had my way, I should do away with all gambling, but I know that it is not in human nature to prevent speculation. I like racing, and, after all, there is no sport in racing unless there is betting, but that does not mean that I approve of gambling. I may have a peculiar idea of affairs, but I have always believed that if the state would make fewer attempts to make laws regulating the morals of the people in general and the people would give more attention to individuals the world would be better off.

"If Congress would regulate the manipulation of the markets, which causes high prices, such as is the case in Chicago to-day, let it pass a law placing a tax on all contracts in futures."

ICE JAM THREATENS BIG BRIDGE

Frozen Mass Piled 80 Feet Above Normal Level at Lewiston.

Thousands of tons of broken ice, piled in a confused mass in the mouth of the Niagara River, threatened the Lewiston suspension bridge, which is eighty-five feet above the normal level of the river. Moving ponderously before a tremendous pressure of water, the mass of ice is slicing off the river embankment as it passes and threatens serious damage to some of the hotels on the river bank, ordinarily high above the water. Great fields of ice are pouring over Niagara Falls, constantly adding to the accumulation which clogs the exit of the river into Lake Ontario. This increases the height of the mound of ice at Lewiston, which already is nearly eighty feet above the normal stage of the river. Appeals for help have been made to the War Department and Gov. Hughes and the Governor has sent an expert in the use of explosives. Col. James B. Price, in charge of the Buffalo office of the United States engineer corps, declares that the department is absolutely helpless to render any assistance at Lewiston and Youngstown. He inspected the conditions on Sunday and found the ice at the mouth of the river at least seventy-five inches in thickness and that a boat would be powerless. Dynamite, he said, would make about as much impression as if exploded in soft dirt. He saw absolutely no way to relieve the condition.

THE FROZEN FALLS FROM THE CANADIAN SIDE.

BUILDING SCANDAL AT ALBANY.

Foundations of $4,000,000 Education Structure Reported Hollow.

Reports made to Governor Hughes, Lieutenant Governor White and Speaker Wadsworth, comprising the New York board of trustees of public buildings, concerning construction work on the State's new $4,000,000 education building will be considered at a special meeting of the board, and interesting developments are expected. The R. T. Ford Company of Rochester are the builders and Palmer & Hornbestel of New York the architects. C. V. Merrick, who represents the architects, told Lieutenant Governor White and Speaker Wadsworth that concrete foundations, which under the specifications should be solid, had been found by him to be hollow. He said he had heard that some of the work of the alleged hollow foundations had been done at night, between 2 and 5 a. m.

Founds Normal Schools for Jews.

Announcement that Jacob Schiff of New York had made a donation of $100,000 for the establishment of two Normal schools for the training of Jewish Sabbath school teachers was made in Cincinnati. One of these institutions is to be located in Cincinnati and the other in New York.

Banker and Ex-Consul Dead.

GOEBEL CASE ENDED; PARDONS FOR EXILES

Former Governor Taylor and Secretary Finley Freed of All Charges.

BUT FEW INDICTMENTS REMAIN

Only Those Who Turned State's Evidence and Youtsey, Now in Prison, Under Cloud.

Governor A. E. Wilson has issued pardons for every one—except those who turned state's evidence—charged with conspiracy in connection with the assassination of Senator William Goebel nine years ago. Later, it is understood, the indictments against those who admitted part in the alleged conspiracy will be dismissed, leaving Henry E. Youtsey, now serving a life sentence in the state penitentiary, as the only person to suffer for the murder of Goebel.

It is Governor Wilson's opinion that there was no conspiracy. He asserts that he believes that Youtsey committed the murder unassisted and alone.

Thus ends the last chapter in the Kentucky assassination, which attracted world-wide attention when it happened. Goebel was recognized as one of the most capable lawyers of Kentucky, and previous to the Democratic state convention in 1899 had gained the position of State Senator. He was nominated in that convention as candidate for Governor. William S. Taylor was the Republican nominee.

Following the election, which showed that Taylor had received a majority of about 3,500 on the face of the returns, Goebel and his associates on the regular Democratic ticket filed contests.

Slain in Front of Capitol.

The assassination of Senator Goebel in front of the state house on Jan. 30, the shot being fired, as afterward conceded in various trials, from the office of Caleb Powers, the Secretary of State, and adjoining the reception room of the executive offices. It was proved that Powers had gone to Louisville that day to arrange for the bringing to Frankfort of more men and that the key to his office had been secured by Henry Youtsey, then private secretary to Governor Taylor.

For days following the shooting the capital was in charge of troops called out by Governor Taylor. The Democratic majority in the Legislature declared Senator Goebel Governor, and he was sworn in practically on his deathbed. He died on Feb. 3, 1900.

Warrants charging Powers and several others with complicity in the assassination were taken out soon after the tragedy. Governor Taylor was not formally accused of connection with it until the return of an indictment by the grand jury in April, 1900.

Prominent Men Indicted.

Among the more prominent men indicted were former Governor William S. Taylor, former Secretary of State Caleb Powers, his brother, John Powers; Charles Finley, another former Secretary of State; William Culton, James B. Howard and Youtsey.

Caleb Powers and James B. Howard were pardoned two months ago. Friday Governor Wilson lifted the hand of the law from former Governor Taylor and former Secretary Finley, who have been fugitives in Indiana for the last nine years; John Powers, who is believed to be in Honduras; Holland Whittaker of Butler County, John Davis of Louisville and Zach Steele of Bell County, who did not flee from the state.

Those whom the Governor did not pardon are Wharton Golden of Knox County, now said to be in Colorado; Frank Cecil of Bell County, now working as a railroad detective in St. Louis, and William H. Coulton of Owsley County, who is said to have died out West several years ago. It was reported soon after the murder that he died in Kentucky, but later reports were to the effect that he was out West.

Kills Roomer; Wounds Girl.

Antoine Willa neglected to pay rent for his furnished room to Mrs. Mary Pastri and when he returned home in West Hoboken, N. Y., at night she shot him dead. The bullet passed out of a window and struck Mrs. Pastri's little daughter, who will die.

Will Build Huge Dock.

A contract has been awarded by the Harbor Commission for the construction of the largest and most expensive dock on the San Francisco waterfront. It is to be known as Pier 36, and will most $364,000.

Work of Congress

The tariff debate was opened in the Senate Monday when Senator Aldrich reviewed at length the pending measure which had been reported from the committee on finance. He received practically no interruption throughout his remarks, which were listened to, not only by every Senator, but by Speaker Cannon and members of the House of Representatives, who visited the chamber for that purpose. Senator Daniel, the senior minority member of the committee on finance, followed Senator Aldrich and laid down the general line of opposition that will be made to the pending measure by the Democrats. He also received careful attention. The House received the report of the conference committee on the census bill, but on account of the absence of a quorum failed to act upon it. After being in session for only five minutes, the House adjourned until Thursday.

The census bill was Tuesday sent back to conference by the Senate in order that its amendments relating to the civil service law and requiring the construction of a building for the work of the census in Washington might be further considered and insisted upon. The conferees had agreed to strike out the Senate amendment requiring domicile in a State for one year as a prerequisite for the establishment of residence as a basis for apportionment of appointments among the several States, but they were instructed to insist upon this provision. Senator Stone spoke at length in favor of free trade with the Philippine Islands and for independence of the islands within a time to be agreed upon. The House was not in session.

-:—:-

Substantial progress was made by the Senate in the consideration of the tariff bill Wednesday. No Senator being prepared to speak on the bill as a whole, the reading of the measure by paragraphs was begun. The various items in the chemical schedule were passed over for future consideration. The reading was frequently interrupted by the discussion of amendments, and only eighteen pages of the bill were disposed of. Senator Cummins presented his income tax provision and discussed it at length. At 5 p. m. the Senate went into executive session. The nomination of Thomas C. Dawson to be minister to Chile was confirmed. The House was not in session.

-:—:-

Republican criticism of the pending tariff bill on the ground that the rates were too high was prominent in the Senate Thursday, when Senator Nelson of Minnesota and Senator Dolliver of Iowa attacked various schedules. Under the guise of discussing the duty on gas retorts a general debate on the tariff was indulged in by Democratic Senators, Senator Bailey of Texas taking occasion to say that the bill was discriminatory against the South. Fifty of the 302 pages of the bill were read. The House was in session for forty minutes, but took no action on the census bill, the only important business which it had before it for consideration. Mr. Crumpacker of Indiana, chairman of the Census Committee, endeavored to have the House insist further upon its disagreement from the Senate amendments, but the absence of a quorum prevented such action. For the same reason no conferees were appointed. The House adjourned until Monday.

-:—:-

The first reading of the tariff bill for consideration of committee amendments was concluded when the Senate adjourned Friday. According to an agreement made when the reading was begun every paragraph of the entire bill will be subject to amendment when it is taken up for final consideration. There was comparatively little debate on the measure Friday, as Senator Aldrich postponed replying to many questions asked of him in order to hasten the conclusion of the reading of the measure, saying he would make full explanations when the various amendments receive final consideration. Many provisions, including the wood pulp and wool schedules, were passed over on specific objection. At 5:34 o'clock the Senate adjourned until Monday. The House was not in session.

Matt

A TALE OF A CARAVAN

CHAPTER X.—(Continued.)

Whom should he find waiting for him when he had dressed himself and stepped from the house on wheels but Matt herself? Yes, there she was, as wild and quaintly attired as ever, quite unlike the ethereal individual of his dreams; but for all that, her smile was like sunshine, and her eyes as roguish and friendly as ever. Conscious of his dream he blushed, while greeting her with a friendly nod.

"Well, Matt? Here again, eh?" he said; adding to himself, "This won't do at all, my gentleman; if the young person continues to appear daily, the Caravan will have to 'move on.'"

Matt had evidently something on her mind. After looking at Brinkley thoughtfully for some minutes, she exclaimed abruptly:

"William Jones don't like you neither. No more does William Jones' father."

"Dear me," said the young man. "I'm very sorry for that."

"He says—William Jones says—you're some here prying and spying. Do you?"

"My dear Matt," replied the young man lightly, "I come here as an humble artist, seeking subjects for my surpassing genius to work upon. If it is prying and spying to attempt to penetrate into the beauties of Nature—both scenic, animal and human—I fear I must plead guilty; but otherwise——"

She interrupted him with an impatient exclamation, accompanied by a hitch of her pretty shoulders.

"Don't talk like that; for then I know you're chaffing. Talk serious, and I'll tell you something."

"All right. I'll be serious as a parson. Go ahead!"

"Mr. Monk, of Monkshurst, wants to marry me. He said so to William Jones."

The information was delivered with assumed carelessness; but after it was given, Matt watched the effect of it upon the hearer with precocious interest. Brinkley opened his eyes in very natural amazement.

"Come, come, Matt; you're joking."

"No, I ain't. It's true."

"But you're only a child—a very nice child, I admit—but to talk of holy matrimony in such a connection is—excuse my frankness—preposterous. People don't marry little girls."

But Matt did not consent to this proposition at all.

"I ain't a little girl," she affirmed with a decisive nod of the head. "I'm sixteen, and I'm growed up."

The young man was amused, and could not refrain from laughing heartily. But the girl's brow darkened as she watched him, and her under lip fell as if she would like to cry.

"If you go on laughing," she said, "I'll run straight back home, and never come here no more."

"Well, I'll try to keep my countenance; but the idea is very funny. Really, now? Don't you see it in that light yourself?"

Certainly Matt did not, to judge from the expression of her face. She turned her head away; and Brinkley saw, to his surprise, that a tear was rolling down her cheek.

"Come, Matt," he said kindly, "you mustn't take this so seriously. Tell me all about it—there's a good girl."

"I will—if you won't laugh."

"I won't—then—there!"

"Well, when I was lying in my bed this morning I heard William Jones a-talking to some one. He thought I was asleep, but I got up and listened, and I heard Mr. Monk's voice; and he said, says he, 'She's over sixteen years old, and I'll marry her;' and William Jones said, 'Mr. Monk; what can you be a-thinking about? Matt ain't old enough, and what's more she ain't fit to be the wife of a fine gentleman.' Then Mr. Monk he stamped with his foot, like he does when he's in a passion, and he said, says he, 'My mind's made up, William Jones, and I'm going to marry her before the year's out; and I don't care how soon.' Then I heard them moving about, and I crept back to bed and pretended to be fast asleep."

The young man's astonishment increased. There could be no doubt of the veracity and sincerity of the speaker; and the story she told was certainly puzzling. Brinkley made up his mind, without much reflection, that if Mr. Monk wanted to go through the marriage ceremony with that child, he had some special and mysterious reason for so doing unless—which was scarcely possible—he was of a sentimental disposition, and, in the manner of many men advanced toward middle age, was enamored of Matt's youth and inexperience.

"Tell me, Matt," said Brinkley, after pondering the matter for some minutes; "tell me how long have you known this Mr. Monk?"

"Ever since I come ashore," was the reply.

"Humph!—is he well-to-do?—rich?"

Matt nodded emphatically.

"All Aberglyn belongs to him," she said, "and the woods up there, and the farms, and the horses up at the big house, and—everything."

"And though he is such a great person, he is very friendly with William Jones?"

"Oh, yes," answered Matt; "and I think William Jones is afraid of him—sometimes; but he gives William Jones money for keeping me."

"Oh, indeed! He gives him money, does he? That's rather kind of him, you know."

At this Matt shook her head with great decision, but said nothing. Greatly puzzled, the young man looked at her, and mused. It was clear that there was a mystery somewhere, and he was getting interested. Presently he invited Matt to sit down on the steps of the Caravan, and he placed himself at her side. He was too absorbed in speculation to notice how the girl colored and brightened as they sat there together.

"You have often told me that you came ashore," he said, after a long pause. "I should like to know something of how it happened. I don't exactly know what this 'coming ashore' means. Can you explain?"

"I don't remember," she replied; "but I know there was a ship and it went to pieces, and I come to shore in a boat, or something."

"I see—and William Jones found you?"

"Mr. Monk, he found me, and gave me to William Jones to keep."

"I begin to understand. Of course, you were very little—a baby, in fact."

"William Jones says I could just talk some words, and that when he took me home I called him 'Papa.'"

"What was the name of the ship? Have you ever heard?"

"No," said Matt.

"Did you come ashore all alone? It is scarcely possible!"

"I come ashore by myself. All the rest was drownded."

"Was there no clew to who you were? Did nothing come ashore besides to show them who you were, or where you came from?"

CHAPTER XI.

Matt shook her head again. Once more the young man was lost in meditation. Doubtless it was owing to his abstraction of mind that he quietly placed his arm round Matt's waist, and kept it there. At first Matt went very red; then she glanced up at his face, and saw that his eyes were fixed thoughtfully on the distant sand hills. Seeing he still kept silence, she moved a little closer to him, and said very quietly:

"I didn't tell William Jones that you—kissed me!"

Brinkley started from his abstraction, and looked at the girl's blushing face.

"Eh? What did you say?"

"I didn't tell William Jones that you kissed me!"

These words seemed to remind the young man of the position of his arm; for he hastily withdrew it. Then the absurdity of the whole situation appeared to return upon him, and he broke into a burst of boyish laughter—at which his companion's face fell once more. It was clear that she took life seriously and dreaded sarcasm.

"Matt," he said, "this won't do! This won't do at all!"

"What won't do?"

"Well—this!" he answered, rather ambiguously. "You're awfully young, you know—quite a girl, although, as you suggested just now, and, as you probably believe, you may be 'growed up.' You must—ha—you must look upon me as a sort of father, and all that sort of thing."

"You're too young to be my father," answered Matt, ingenuously.

"Well, say your big brother. I'm interested in you, Matt, very much interested, and I should really like to get to the bottom of the mystery about you; but we must not forget that we're—well, almost strangers, you know. Besides," he added, laughing again cheerily, "you are engaged to be married, some day, to a gentleman of fortune."

Matt sprang up, with heaving bosom and flashing eyes.

"No, I ain't!" she said. "I hate him!"

"Hate the beautiful Monk, of Monkshurst! Monk the beneficent! Monk the sweet-spoken! Impossible!"

"Yes, I hate him," creid Matt; "and—and—when he kissed me, it made me sick."

"What, did he? Actually. Kissed you?"

As he spoke, the young man actually felt that he should like to assault the redoubtable Monk.

"Yes, he kissed me—once. If he kisses me again, I'll stick something into him, or scratch his face."

And Matt looked black as thunder, and set her pearly teeth angrily together.

"Sit down again, Matt."

"I sha'n't—if you laugh."

"Oh, I'll behave myself. Come!"—and he added, as she returned to her place, "Did it make you sick when I kissed you?"

He was playing with fire. The girl's face changed in a moment, her eyes melted, her lips trembled, and all her expression became inexpressibly soft and dreamy. Leaning gently toward him, she drooped her eyes, and then, seeing his hand resting on his knee, she took it in hers, and raised it to her lips.

"I should like to marry you," she said, and blushing, rested her cheek against his shoulder!

Now, our hero of the Caravan was a true-hearted young fellow, and a man of honor, and his position had become extremely embarrassing. He could no longer conceal from himself the discovery that he had made an unmistakable impression on Matt's unsophisticated heart. Hitherto he had looked upon her as a sort of enfant terrible, a very rough diamond; now he realized, with a shock of surprise and self-reproach, that she possessed, whether "growed up" or not, much of the susceptibility of grown-up young ladies. It was clear that his duty was to disenchant her as speedily as possible, seeing that the discovery of the hopelessness of her attachment might, if delayed, cause her no little unhappiness.

In the meantime he suffered her to nestle to him. He did not like to shake her off roughly, or to say anything unkind. He glanced round into her face; the eyes were still cast down, and the cheeks were suffused with a warm, rich light, which softened the great freckles and made her complexion look, according to the image which suggested itself to his mind, like a nice ripe pear. She was certainly very pretty. He glanced down at her hands which rested in her lap, and again noticed that they were unusually delicate and small. Her foot, which he next inspected, he could not criticise, for the boots she wore would have been a good fit for William Jones. But the whole outline of her figure, in spite of the hideous attire she wore, was fine and symmetrical. His inspection was interrupted by the girl herself. Starting as if from a delightful trance, she sprang to her feet and cried:

"I can't stop longer. I'm going."

"But the picture, Matt?" said Brinkley, rising also. "Shan't I finish it to-day?"

"I can't wait. William Jones wants to send me a message over to Pencross, and if I don't go, he'll scold."

"Very well, Matt."

"But I'll come," she said, smiling, "tomorrow; and I'll come in my Sunday clothes, somehow."

"Don't trouble. On reflection, I think you look nicer as you are."

She lifted up her hat from the ground, and still hesitated as she put it on.

"Upon my word," cried the artist; "those Welsh hats are very becoming. Good-by, Matt."

She took his outstretched hand and waited an instant, with her warm, brown cheek in profile temptingly near his lips. But he did not yield to the temptation, and after a moment's further hesitation, in which I fear she betrayed some little disappointment, Matt released her hand and sprang hurriedly awy.

"Upon my word," muttered the young man, as he watched her figure receding in the distance, "the situation is growing more and more troublesome! I shall have to make a clean bolt of it, if this goes on. Fancy being caught in a flirtation with a wild ocean waif, a child of the wilderness, who never even heard of Lindley Murray? Really, it will never do!"

CHAPTER XII.

It so happened that the young man of the Caravan had two considerable faults. The first fault my reader has, no doubt, already guessed; he was constitutionally lazy. The second fault will appear more clearly in the sequel; he was, also constitutionally, inquisitive. Now, his laziness was of that not uncommon kind which is capable of a great deal of activity, so long as that activity is unconscious, and not realized as being in the nature of work; and its possessor, therefore, would frequently, in his idle way, bestir himself a good deal; whereas, if he had been ordered to bestir himself, he would have yawned and resisted. Here his other constitutional defect came in, and set him prying into matters which in no way seriously concerned him. A little time before the period of his present excursion, when he was studying law in Dublin, and rapidly discovered that he loved artistic amateurship much better, he had often been known to work terribly hard at "cases" in which his curiosity was aroused; and I may add in passing that he had shown on these occasions an amount of shrewdness which would have made him an excellent lawyer, if his invincible objection to hard work had not invariably interfered.

No sooner was he left to his own meditations, which the faithful Tim (who had fortunately been away on a foraging expedition during the episode described in my last chapter) was not at hand to disturb, than our young gentleman began puzzling his brains over the curious information she had given him. The facts, which he had no reason to question, ranged themselves under four heads:

(1) Matt had been cast ashore, fifteen years previously, at an age when she could pronounce the word "Papa." It followed, as a rational argument, that she had been, say, one year old, or thereabouts.

(2) Mr. Monk had found her, and given her into the care of William Jones, and had since handed that worthy sums of money for taking care of her. Query, What reason had the said Monk for exhibiting so much care for the child, unless he was a person of wonderfully benevolent disposition, which my hero was not at all inclined to believe?

(3) Said Monk and said Jones were on very familiar terms, which was curious, seeing the difference in their social positions. Query again, Was there any private reason, any mysterious knowledge, any secret shared in common, which bound their interests together?

(4) Last and most extraordinary of all, said Monk had now expressed his wish and intention of marrying the waif he had rescued from the sea, committed to the care of said Jones, and brought up in ragged ignorance, innocent of grace or grammar, on that lonely shore. Query again, and again, and yet again, What the deuce had put the idea into Monk's head; and was there at the bottom of it any deeper and more conceivable motive than the one of ordinary affection for a pretty, if uncultivated, child?

The more Charles Brinkley pondered all these questions, the more hopelessly puzzled he became. But his curiosity, once roused, could not rest. He determined, if possible, to get to the midriff of the mystery. So intent was he on this object, which fitted in beautifully with his natural indolence, that he at once knocked off painting for the day, and after breakfasting on the fare with which Tim had by this time appeared, he strolled away toward the sea shore.

Getting a Rattlesnake to Pose.

"Until one has actually tried to make a rattlesnake strike—for the purpose of getting his picture, for example—it is difficult to realize what a mild creature he is," declares Mr. Dane Coolidge, in a recent narrative of his experience with rattlers. He did not, however, acquire this sense of their mildness immediately, and he admits that their tempers vary; nor was it till after two or three seasons of catching them as a part of his business of wild-animal collecting that he began to lose his fear and was seized with a desire to photograph what is, he declares, "undoubtedly the ugliest snake in the world."

Despite this dubious charm, it is scarcely likely that many amateurs of the camera will care first to catch, then to release at the proper place and season, then to coax or force to pose, and finally to "snap" such difficult models.

"To make the rattlesnake pose," says Mr. Coolidge, "that is the heavy work of the artist. Snakes are very sensitive to the attitude of their masters. There must be no vexatious outbreaks, or the subject will become unmanageable; no nervous fidgeting and dodging, or he will become bold and attempt to escape. But, even as you would humor a spoiled child, be calm, firm and persistent."

He succeeded in obtaining many characteristic pictures, and his further description, if it fails to arouse emulation, will assuredly arouse interest:

"On level ground a four-foot rattlesnake can strike about two and a half feet. To procure a good picture, the camera should be held within four feet of him.

"With a margin of a foot and a half it would seem easy for the photographer to control his nerves and get a perfect exposure. But by the time the old bulldog, fighting male has been brought to his characteristic pose—head up, rattles quivering convulsively and neck retracted like a drawn bow—the human imagination steps in and makes four feet seem less than two. And from constantly watching his opal-glowing, hateful eyes, the darting red tongue and poison-swollen jowls, a kind of horror, such as is supposed to charm birds, creeps over one. The muscles twitch and joggle the camera, and one's feet develop a surprising tendency to back up instead of to go ahead.

"But that fighting pose is hard to get, and it endures but a moment. As the snake lowers its head, I move quietly forward, watching it through my lens. The moment it is focused I stamp my foot. Instantly the head is raised, the supple neck drawn tense. I spring my shutter, and step back unharmed."

Archduke's Simple Life.

The Archduke Leopold Ferdinand of Austria, better known by reason of his matrimonial escapades as Leopold Woelfling, is leading the simple life at Blonville, a little fishing village on the Normandy coast. Leopold is a brother of the ex-Crown Princess of Saxony, who is now Mme. Toselli. The archduke and his present wife occupy a small fisherman's cottage facing the sea and surrounded by gardens full of fruit and flowers.

The aristocratic tenant keeps no servants. A char-woman comes for a few hours every day, while Mme. Woelfling, who dresses in a peasant's costume, attends to the cooking. The husband, wearing coarse linen trousers, a battered coap and cap, and neither collar nor tie, does the daily marketing.

The archduke, who has successfully passed the examination at the polytechnic school at Zurich, intends seeking a situation as a civil engineer.

WOMEN AND FASHION

Hair Roll Will Comb.

Naturally it was a New York man who was so impressed by the amazing coiffures he saw about him that he invented the combined hair roll and comb. Realizing the importance of a pompadour as an ornament, this man constructed a roll on which it can be built securely and on which it will weather windy days and uphold the weight of Merry Widow hats. This superstructure consists of a roll of fine wire netting, inside of which are affixed three combs, curved so that they conform to the curve of the roll. These combs, of course, pass through the hair and hold both the roll and the pompadour in place. The advantage of the wire roll over the old-fashioned hair "rat" are many and obvious. It is much lighter and cleaner and cooler in summer and it holds the hair up much better than the soft hair "rat." With the old style a woman never knew but that the pompadour might be mashed as flat as a flounder when she took her hat off. With the wire roll she knows it won't.

POMPADOUR COMB.

The Too-Clever Woman.

Man unjustly accuses woman of enjoying a monopoly of vanity, when, as a matter of fact, no woman is any more vain than most men, and in some respects mere man is so much more vain than woman that comparison is ridiculous. A good many men spend as much time as any belle over their attire and the manner of its assumption on state occasions, but the real vanity of man concerns his brains. He likes a clever woman, but the very instant he suspects she is cleverer than he, he takes fright. His vanity is hurt.

Inasmuch as awe and love are not given to rambling leafy lanes hand in hand, and man in his superiority likes to believe woman dependent upon him mentally as well as for creature needs, the woman who is really clever will never allow her cleverness to obtrude itself too strongly upon men. Wit is a good servant, but a bad master. The girl who acquires a reputation for putting on airs, or being "smart," is never popular among men. The too-clever woman is handicapped by her cleverness. It sometimes pays to pamper foolish, egotistic man, and use wit with discretion.

Stunning Cloth Costume.

Wood brown chiffon broadcloth was used in the construction of a stunning gown pictured in above illustration. The front panel is trimmed on each side from shoulder to foot with brown velvet covered buttons, as are the pointed pieces on each side. The round collar and stock are white lace, the former trimmed with a band and bow of narrow velvet ribbon in a lovely shade of maroon, matching that used for the turban, whose only decoration is a full white aigrette. A handsome sable pelerine completes the costume.

Hat Fruits.

Cherries and plums, in all states of greenness, ripeness and decay, have again become popular. They are pretty, and when bunched in tight, round groups are attractive. Many of the black straws employ this garniture. We see all fruits, as well as all flowers, on hats. Roses are worn in all sizes, and garlands of small ones prettily trim some of the new hats. Spring hats, however, no matter what the garniture, are hailed with delight and admiration, since they look bright and new and herald the fact that warm sunshine is not far off.

One Woman's Scheme.

The thrifty wife of an officer in our army saw no reason why the big sheets of linen paper covered with figures and calculations should be thrown away. She begged all she could get, soaked them, and for her reward had enough fine linen to make frocks and blouses for the family. The ink does not go through the surface finish, and so a perfect treasure lies underneath to be had for a bit of hot water and the asking.

To Make Cloth Waterproof.

"Take 8 ounes of sugar of lead, 8 ounces of powdered alum and 2½ gallons of lukewarm water," says Woman's Home Companion for April. "Mix in a tub and let stand for twenty-four hours. Stir thoroughly when first mixed and occasionally for the first hour, to dissolve the ingredients. Take the garment (overcoat, suit or dress, anything of woolen or cotton material), brush thoroughly, and let soak for twenty-four hours. Take out, let drip until almost dry (don't wring), hang in the air until dry, then press as usual. Water will fall off as from the proverbial 'duck's back.' One can use a suit treated in this way on hunting trips and in a driving rain, and come home dry. It does not destroy or interfere with the ventilation or injure the fabric in the slightest degree. The quantities as given here cost about 20 cents, and will successfully waterproof an overcoat and suit, or in proportion."

Fads and Fancies in Dress

Foliage colorings abound.

Enormous black cherries are used on some of the hats.

Coats for girls' suits are plain and almost straight.

The latest Parisian novelty is the hand-tucked waist.

Some of the standing collars are hemstitched around the top.

Belts will match the skirts instead of the waists this season.

Most of the new crepe blouses are inset with Irish crochet lace.

Pretty little neck bows are made of colored open work embroidery.

The new hats, almost without exception, show exaggerated crowns.

Swiss embroidery, whether hand done or machine, gives excellent effects.

Some of the colored linens for suits have a pin stripe of white through them.

Sleeves are longer and flatter and they closely follow the lines of the arm.

Hair ornaments are large, the newest barrettes being from two to three inches wide.

A charming finish to the waist is the tie known as the directoire, made of crochet lace.

Dainty hand-painted lace blouses are being worn with the dressy tailored suits.

Tulle is to be much worn for sashes and to veil and tone down an otherwise garish gown.

Overdresses of one sort or another are seen everywhere on the more elaborate gowns.

Frilled frocks—not as frilly as of old, but more fluffily charming—have been seen on which little ruffles of lace and gauze trim both skirt and bodice.

Some effective cloth gowns, simple enough for walking costumes, yet smart enough for paying calls, are being made in close, but not tight-fitting robes.

Beauty Tip.

The carriage of the figure is even more important than the lines of the figure itself. A beautiful figure poorly carried shows none of its beauty, while a poor figure well carried with grace and dignity gives a distinction which is in itself beautiful. To acquire a good carriage it is necessary to study the required pose carefully in the mirror, to then remember to take that pose whenever rising from a chair, and to hold it steadfastly, says Harper's Bazar. It requires a constant watchfulness which makes one self-conscious at first, but in time becomes a habit—shoulders back and down, abdomen in, head up and chin in.

Mending Stockings.

The feet of new stockings sometimes shrink so that they are too small for the wearer. They may be remodeled in this way: Cut out the heels, open the leg so that from the toe to the end of the opening is the desired length of foot. Make or cut from some other pair the heels and as much of the foot as is needed to lengthen out the first pair and insert in the opening. Be sure to cut the heel and portion of the foot deep enough so that the stocking will not be too small across the instep. This is much better than putting in entirely new feet, as there will be no seams near the toes, and the feet usually shrink only in length.

What About Short Sleeves?

They seem to be creeping up again, and may possibly reappear unblushingly when the warm days come, after having been pronounced completely out of fashion. They are certainly convenient for summer wear, and all the active exercises girls engage in out of doors. They also have the further advantage of keeping clean, as long sleeves never can. The long-sleeved blouse has to go to the cleaner twice as often as the short. But the latter should be worn with discretion. When arms are thin and red it is just as well to afford them a friendly veil by means of sleeves.

HEALTH & BEAUTY

A mustard plaster for a young child should be half flour.

A couple of soda mints, or a teaspoonful of cooking soda in water, will often stave off a sick headache.

For sudden attacks of rheumatism, pains in the joints, etc., a liniment made of mustard and water will often prove an effective temporary remedy.

Don't neglect the value of sunlight, fresh air and a good digestion as beauty makers. Live out of doors and eat sparingly, and the measure of beauty that is yours will be sensibly enhanced.

The flat effect on the top of the head, so much in vogue at present, should not be adopted by the girl or woman of round, full-faced type. She should be faithful to the pompadour raised well above the forehead, and the hair puffed slightly at the sides, no matter what fashion demands.

Gray hair requires more care than brown, blonde or black, in order to bring out the delicate shade. If not carefully washed and not immaculately clean it will be streaky and inclined to show yellowish tones, which are far from pretty and not nearly so becoming and dignified as pure white or gray.

The best way to overcome scrawny arms is to practice tensing exercises many times daily. Stretch the arm at right angles to the body, holding themselves very taut; clench the hand and draw up to the shoulder, using as much force as if lifting a heavy weight. Repeat until the arm begins to get stiff. Massaging the arms with hot olive oil for fifteen minutes night and morning will also help to make them plump.

A Draped Costume.

This gown is of empire design, made of dull pink messaline. The yoke and sleeves are of tucked chiffon in a pale pink that is almost white. The trimming is of gold lace applique. The hat is of pink corded silk, adorned with black, uncurled ostrich feathers. The long ermine scarf is finished with heavy gold tassels.

Women Wage Earners.

Widows, 800,000 of them, and more, were earning their living in the United States in the year 1900. And married women, likewise, to the number of more than 700,000. And divorced women, likewise, to the number of more than 60,000. One million, six hundred thousand of them altogether! These widowed workingwomen, these married workingwomen, these divorced workingwomen, together, were a full third and more of the grand total of 4,800,000 American workingwomen, 16 years of age and over, in the United States in the last census year.

How many women were there, 25 years of age and over, in the United States in 1900? There were approximately 16,700,000. And how many married women workers, widowed women workers, and divorced women workers, were there? There were approximately 1,500,000. Which is to say that in the total female population of the United States, married and unmarried, working and not working, rich and poor, 25 years of age and over, in the year 1900, one woman out of every eleven had passed her wedding day and nevertheless was a breadwinner.—Everybody's.

What the Dinner Hour Means.

Dinner, whether at home or abroad, is distinctly the festive meal of the day, occurring at an hour when people naturally expect relaxation and enjoyment. And you should make your contribution to the general entertainment by looking and doing your best in conduct and conversation. If you are attending a somewhat formal dinner, remember that the conversation is never general on these occasions, and that you are expected to confine your attentions to the two persons between whom you are seated.

Wash Up, Not Down.

When washing painted walls or varnished woodwork most people begin at the top and wash down, the water running down over the dirt, causing streaks to appear, which are hard to rub out. You can avoid this by starting at the bottom and washing up. A good cleanser for this purpose is castile soap, and a half pound to one and a half gallons of water. Boil until dissolved.

Simple Suggestion.

Looking to please the women,
The tailor new designs
Another change in gowncraft—
He leaves out all the lines.

Now, if he really wanted,
In men he could joy brew
By the determination
To drop the figures, too.

REVIEW OF INDIANA

Harry Teal, in the north part of Shelbyville, found a rabbit's "nest" in his back yard a few days ago. The nest was near the rear porch, and contained seven small bunnies. Mr. Teal took them in captivity.

A new record in the matrimonial line was established in the county clerk's office at Anderson, when Mrs. Goldie Carpenter was granted a license to marry her fourth husband, though she is not yet 26 years of age.

Three stables in Evansville belonging to Mrs. Philip Braun were destroyed by fire last week with a loss of $1000. While the firemen were fighting the flames she begged them to let everything else burn and save her pet chickens in the burning stable.

Mayor Hinchman has served notice that all dealers wishing to sell cigarettes idn Greenfield must pay a $1000 license. The council passed an ordinance in 1896 requiring this fee and since the last legislature passed a bill allowing the sale of cigarettes the mayor says the ordinance will be enforced. An attempt may be made to have the ordinance repealed, since the new state law favors their sale under restrictions.

Believing that the recent legislature passed a rat bounty bill, a young farmer drove to the home of Lawrence Montgomery, township trustee at Owensville, and handed over a box containing sixty-nine rat tails, for which he asked a bounty of 1 cent each. Trustee Montgomery explained that a bill of that character was introduced in the legislature by Representative Stevens of Gibson county, but that it was defeated. The farmer went away much disappointed.

The new city directory of Evansville, will be issued in a few days by Mrs. O. S. Moore. The founder of the directory, H. Thornton Bennett, who published it for more than forty years, died a few days ago, and at his death his daughter, Mrs. Moore, decided to take up the work. Mrs. Moore estimates that Evansville's population is now between 80,000 and 85,000. She says the directory this year has thirty-five more pages of names than last year, and this indicates an increase in the population of the city of about 6700 people.

Joseph Houston, sixty-three years old, son of James Housten, former minister to China, former district attorney of New York and congressman from that state, and who was the first manager of the Gary hotel when it opened in 1907, is under arrest in Chicago, charged with forging a postal money order. Housten, after a varied career, is now penniless and says poverty was the motive for his act. He has made a full confession of his guilt. While in Gary the tall, distinguished-looking man made many friends and proved one of the best hotel managers the city has had.

A government patent to eighty acres of the best land in Sullivan county was filed at Sullivan recently by Geo. Alkire, of Turman township. The old instrument was issued in 1841 and the signature of John Tyler, president of the United States, stands out boldly on the yellow parchment. The seal of the government, impressed on a piece of cloth stuck on the parchment, is still there. The land has been in possession of Mr. Alkire since the issue of the government grant. Mr. Alkire paid $1.25 an acre for the land which is now worth almost a hundred times that amount.

Dr. William M. DeHart, of Logansport, last week found a purse in the gutter in front of his office in Market street, which contained money and notes to the value of $2,000. The strange part of the affair is that he has been unable to find the owner. He has advertised in all of the papers, but no one has claimed the Logansport money. The name of James C. Davis is printed inside the purse and papers show that the owner had been doing business in Crawfordsville and Fort Wayne. DeHart's supposition is that the purse was dropped by some automobilist who was speeding through the city.

Mrs. Polly Weed Baker, aged 67, residing at Newburg, and Simon Shippert, aged 60, of Burlington, Iowa, were married at Evansville a few days ago. This is the tenth marriage of the bride and her ninth husband. She was married the second time to one of her husbands after obtaining a divorce from him. Mrs. Shippert says she is happy in her last marriage, and that she thinks more of her present husband than any of the others. Several of her husbands were divorced from her and two of them died, one having committed suicide. Mrs. Shippert met her present husband two years ago and shortly afterward obtained a divorce from a man named Baker. She is a native of this state, and says if her new husband should die, she would probably marry again in case she could get any one to have her.

The first good pearl find of the season by the mussel diggers in the vicinity of Princeton is reported from Mt. Carmel, where Milton Iaun purchased for $300 a fine 27-grain pearl. It was found in the Wabash river.

According to official reports received from Rome City there will be no improvement on the island this year in the way of new buildings. However the company will improve the grounds and convert the place into a first class park.

Clement R. Corey, 76, was found dead in a path near Fairfield. He was the first county superintendent of schools at Brookville, and was also a representative in the state legislature four years ago. Death resulted from paralysis.

An old setting hen belonging to Charles Studabaker, near Travisville, Wells county, has displayed an unusual trait. When a cat gave birth a few days ago to four kittens, in the same manager in the stable where the hen was setting, the biddy left her eggs and adopted the four kittens.

In a letter to a Fort Wayne newspaper Willis Moore, of the United States Weather Bureau, gives assurance that a weather observatory will soon be established in that city.

Robert Johnson, of Williamsport, reported to Chief of Police Brennecke of Evansville that while on the train near Danville, Ill., he was robbed of a draft for $780 and $70 in cash. Brennecke will take the matter up with railroad detectives.

Miss Theta Penning, aged 22, night operator for the Bell Telephone company at Columbus, drowned herself in Flat Rock river. She is said to have grown despondent because her mother objected to her keeping company with James Brown.

J. V. Gillum, a farmer near Oakland City, recently found a hen's nest containing sixty-eight fresh eggs. The nest was in the barn loft and so deeply buried in the hay that Mr. Gillum was forced to remove a part of the side of the barn to obtain the eggs.

William Liggan, of Nashville has captured one of the largest chicken hawks ever seen in Southern Indiana. The bird measured four feet from tip to tip and resembled a young eagle more than a hawk. It was caught in a trap after it had been carrying away chickens for some time.

Fishing along the Schuylkill, Peter Miller, of Riverside, hooked a monster carp. Hauling in the line, he caught it on the limb of a tree. Then he crawled out on the limb to loosen the line, the limb broke and he fell sixteen feet into the water, but was rescued, with his carp, by friends in a boat.

H. F. Horst, a coal miner, of Evansville, had no faith in the solidity of banks, and placed $70 in cash and $450 in notes in a tin box and buried it in a hole in the cellar under his house. He went to hunt for his treasure and found that thieves had stolen it. Albert Horst, his nephew, was arrested and made a confession, according to the police.

The large frame barn owned by Edward Maloney, one-half mile north of Churubusco, was destroyed by fire. It was caused by lightning during a heavy electrical and rainstorm. The live stock in the barn was all saved. A large amount of hay, feed and implements were destroyed. The loss on the building and contents will be about $2500 with $1500 insurance.

There was an unusual reunion at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Eberhardt Klefoth, in Richmond, it making the seventieth birthday anniversary of Mrs. Klefoth, the golden anniversary of her marriage and the silver anniversary of the marriage of her son, Christopher Klefoth, of Cincinnati. The families of both, together with guests from various towns, joined in the day's festivities.

Automobiles driven by Luther Terrill, son of Dr. L. B. Terrill, and Richard Wright, son of T. W. Wright, were in headon collision two miles north of Anderson. Terrill and one of the four young men in his machine were hurled out of the automobile. Terrill received a bad cut on his forehead. M. C. Norton, one of Wright's three companions, had a leg hurt. Both parties were pleasure riding.

Manfred Ingram was buried by a sand cave-in, while working in a well twenty-five feet deep at Terre Haute. Other men who were trying to release Ingram, before a second cave-in completely covered him, narrowly escaped his fate. It is probable that the coroner will investigate, as the men were digging a well through sand with no curbing until twenty-five feet down. Ingram was twenty-four years old, and is survived by a widow and one child.

John W. Adams, of Farmersburg, has a patent on a gasolene can in the way of a phonographic device. Whenever the cap is turned to unscrew, the phonograph says: "Gasolene—Explosive." By this means one can tell when he has the gasolene can, even in the dark. Mr. Adams says he has been offered $50,000 for the invention, but declines to sell. With this device perfect safety is obtained, as one can not make the mistake of placing gasolene in an oil lamp without knowing it.

Abraham Doyle, eighty-two years old of Anderson, gave his friends a surprise by buying an automobile and also demonstrating that it was no trick for him to guide it in crowded streets. He was on the street recently and is probably the oldest man in Indiana who owns and drives an automobile. Mr. Doyle is the head of the several Doyle families in Madison county. He retired from his large farm only a few years ago. Questioned if he were not a bit nervous while guiding his automobile, he replied: "I've broke a hundred colts in my time, and I guess this machine is easier to handle than a colt.

Lloyd Cooney, son of Theo. Cooney of Kosciusko county, is eight years old and a champion speller. Preparing for a contest, he spelled for four hours without missing more than one out of 1,500 words.

Opal, the little daughter of Charles Comer, a well known farmer near Oakland City, was bitten by the family dog, a large Newfoundland, and probably fatally injured. The animal was eating when the child patted it on the head, causing it to become enraged.

The name of the village of Kelso, in Huntington county, has been officially changed to Majenica, the cognomen of an early Miami Indian chieftain. The settlement is one of the oldest in Huntington county, but it never drew a railroad and did not grow.

One of the largest owls seen in that section of the country in some time was killed at Princeton by Allen Brownlee and Clifford Lockhart. The bird measured three feet and nine inches from tip to tip of its wings. In color it resembled a Plymouth Rock chicken.

The Very Best Clothes in America—$10 to $25

When we say that CLOTHCRAFT CLOTHES are the very best clothes in America for the average man, we mean exactly that in so many words.

We know what the average man wants:

Clothes with style
Clothes that hold style
Clothes that wear well
Clothes at sensible prices.

We know that no other clothes in the world combine these four points.

Clothcraft Clothes

Style that Holds—$10 to $25

These clothes have style. They are pure wool (guaranteed) and are splendidly tailored. Hence they hold their style and wear well. And they sell at $10 to $25.

No other Guaranteed pure wool clothes sell at such prices.

We know the honest men who make CLOTHCRAFT and we know the remarkable processes and methods that enable them to save several dollars in factory costs on each suit or overcoat.

We know that the savings from these processes enable the makers to put better woolens and better tailoring in these clothes.

We Know How They're Made

And so we know how these clothes can be made so astonishingly good at such low prices.

We have never dared make such strong claims for any other clothes.

We have the future of our business to look to and we would not dare make these claims for CLOTHCRAFT if we did not know them to be true.

We wish we could make you realize that you will make a real mistake if you buy clothes without first looking at CLOTHCRAFT to judge these claims for yourself.

Uncle Sam, Job Printer

THERE is perhaps no more loyal body of men in the support of the general government of the country than that class known as the allied printers. They may be found in the front rank of every worthy enterprise for the good of the people. They are practically the mouthpiece of the government; they are the first to impart information from the seat of government to the people. They distribute through the channels of trade, the literature bearing on all important subjects. Much of this work is done without expense to the general government, yet, when it comes down to business, Uncle Sam is found in direct competition with this class. It is a well known fact that no job-printing establishment can successfully compete with Uncle Sam in the matter of supplying printed envelopes. Paper cannot be bought in quantities to make the business profitable to any commercial printer. The people's money is being used to foster this branch of the governments business, to the detriment of the individual firm, or even corporation. Many firms decline to bid against the ruling prices of the government, because there is no money in the business, consequently let the job pass. It is not fair, to say the least of it, and the business should be discontinued by the government. The congress should pass laws to protect the commercial printers of the country.

WM. J. BRYAN, who has been defeated three times for the presidency, has declared himself as follows:

"While I hope that my party will not find it necessary to call for me as a presidential candidate in the next campaign, I make the emphatic statement that I have no intention of retiring from politics. I began to fight for democratic principles long before my party heard of me, and as I live I shall continue it as long as I have strength."

The HERALD has always been a great admirer of Mr. Bryan. He has accomplished much good for the common people, but we do not believe the party can ever win with him as its standard bearer. Let us try other timber next time.

HON. CYRUS CLINE, congressman from this district, is giving a good account of himself at Washington. The other day he made a speech in congress and attacked the vicions measures in the Payne tariff bill in a vigorous manner. Mr. Cline is a credit to his constituency and will prove of inestimable value to the people of this district.

WE NOTICE in an exchange that Texas intends to give a humming bird banquet to President Taft to offset the Georgia possum. Texas doesn't do things by halves. Last week she handed a large juicy lemon to the Standard Oil Co.

Committed Suicide

While his two daughters were watching, Edward Sacks broke down the door of his residence, 245 Eighty-first street, last evening and found that his wife, Mrs. Goldie Sacks, had committed suicide by gas. Sacks is a prosperous milk worker and can give no reason for his wife's act. She left a note reading:

"Dear Ed: I couldn't endure things any longer. You will be happy now. Bury me cheaply and kiss the children for me."

Sunday noon, while her husband was away, Mrs. Sacks sent her daughters to visit an aunt. Physicians say Mrs. Sacks probably died Sunday

Mrs. Sacks was a niece of Joel Latson of this place. The suicide occurred in Chicago on Sunday, April 18. Her funeral was held on the twelfth anniversary of her marriage.

Dr. Kramer returned from Indianapolis, last Tuesday, where he has been spending a few days with his mother, who was operated on Thursday of last week.

Mrs. Elizabeth Willock, of Kansas City, is the guest of relatives here.

Mrs. Jacob Stiefel was the guest of friends at Montpelier, Ohio, the first of the week. She also attended the Eastern Star lodge while there.

Helpful Hints on Hair Health

Scalp and Hair Troubles Generally Caused by Carelessness

Dandruff is a contagious disease caused by a microbe which also produces baldness. Never use a comb or brush belonging to someone else. No matter how cleanly the owner may be, these articles may be infected with microbes, which will infect your scalp. It is far easier to catch hair microbes than it is to get rid of them, and a single stroke of an infected comb or brush often produces the cause of baldness. Never try on anybody else's hat for the reason that many a hat band is a nesting place for microbes.

If you happen to be troubled with dandruff, itching scalp, falling hair or baldness, we have a remedy which we positively know will cure these troubles and we are so sure of this that we offer it to you with the understanding that it will cost you nothing for the trial if it does not produce the results we claim. This remedy is called Rexall "93" Hair Tonic. It is the most scientific remedy for all scalp and hair troubles, and we know of nothing else that equals it for effectiveness. We know this because of the results it has produced in hundreds of cases.

Rexall "93" Hair Tonic will positively banish dandruff permanently, restore natural color when its loss has been brought about by disease, and make the hair naturally silky, soft and glossy. It does this because it stimulates the hair follicles, removes dandruff, destroys the germ matter, and brings about a free, healthy circulation of blood which nourishes the hair roots, causes them to tighten and grow new hair. We want everybody in Butler who has any trouble with hair or scalp to know that Rexall "93" Hair Tonic is the best hair tonic and restorative in existence, and no one should scoff at or doubt this statement until they have put our claims to a fair test, with the understanding that they pay us nothing for the remedy if it does not give full and complete satisfaction in every particular. Marshal Lowe has been scraping the streets this week, using a traction engine for motive power. Good work has been done.

Dick Moughler has purchased Belgian Prince, the stallion formerly owned by W. H. Wilson. He also owns Black Prince, the French Norman stallion No. 12006, and the Spanish jack, Jack Morell, and the well known trotting stallion Harry Almont. All of these will be found every day in the week at his barn at the Clifton House. Come and look them over. 1t

THE important advantage in Devoe Lead-and-Zinc Paint is in the security it offers to the man who doesn't know anything about paint.

You'll save trouble and expense by finding a good painter, saying "Devoe Lead-and-Zinc Paint" and let him do the rest.

Devoe has been furnishing paint satisfaction to users of paint things for over 150 years. Geo. W. Geddes, Agent.

CERTAIN RESULTS

Many a Butler Citizen Knows How Sure They Are

Nothing uncertain about the work of Doan's Kidney Pills in Butler. There is plenty of positive proof of this in the testimony of citizens. Such evidence should convince the most skeptical doubter. Read the following statement:

W. S. Chapman, Cherry street, Butler, Ind., says: "I have taken Doan's Kidney Pills procured from Phillips' drug store and they have always brought the best of results. I was subject to attacks of backache for several years and often when I stooped, sharp pains would suddenly catch me in the kidneys and make it almost impossible for me to straighten. This trouble was generally worse after I caught cold and at such times I was in great distress. When Doan's Kidney Pills were recommended to me, I at once began their use and in return for the benefit they brought, I am pleased to endorse them."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States.

MASURY'S HOUSE PAINT

THE PAINT WITH THE LONGEST LIFE

There is no question about it.

Masury's House Paints have been submitted to every possible test during the past sixty-five years. They have withstood the attacks of extreme heat, extreme cold, moisture and time. When properly applied on the proper surface they invariably give good accounts of themselves. Painters praise them because of their endurance and preservative qualities. Consumers endorse them because, by their use, they are spared the expense of repainting for the longest possible period. The wonderful success of the house of John W. Masury & Son for more than half a century is due to the care with which they select the ingredients used in the manufacture of their paints. Many substances could be used to lessen cost, but they are unhesitatingly rejected.

PURE LINSEED OIL

is used on account of its superior preservative qualities. The pigments ground with it are selected because experience has proved them to be best. In deciding upon paints for original painting or repainting you must remember it costs just as much to spread poor paints as it does to spread the best paints, and that in the interests of economy you should choose Masury's House Paints for the reason that they live the longest and retain their brilliancy of finish long after inferior paints have completely vanished. They are manufactured only by Word has been received by DeKalb county friends of the death of Mrs. Laura Jane Work at Conconully, Washington, on April 19, at the age of seventy-one years. Mrs. Work was a pioneer resident of DeKalb county, coming to this county with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas, in 1838, when she was but three months of age. She resided at Newville. She was married to Oscar Work by James Rose, who at that time was a justice of the peace. Her husband died in 1862. He was a member of the 111th Ohio Volunteers and was killed in battle early in the war. After his death she was postmaster at Newville until 1868.

Rev. Albertson, last Sunday, asked his congregation to write upon slips of paper suggestions of the things most needed in Butler. The papers were collected and some of them contained highly edifying as well as amusing suggestions. One person said we need more trains on the Vandalia; another wanted the ladies to remove their hats in church; and paved streets seemed to be an almost unanimous wish among the number. Many of the improvements wished for we are certain to get, but we can hardly dare to hope that the ladies will consent to remove their hats in church. However, Rev. Albertson will make the request next Sunday.

A few weeks ago he came to life and returned to Silver Lake. According to law he cannot recover the property for it is disposed of according to statute.

The Yost & Conroy cigar factory, whose owners recently mysteriously left the city, has been closed and practically all the debts liquidated, at least all the creditors have been satisfied. The debts, stock and everything were taken over by Bless & Martin, a Cincinnati leaf tobacco house. A representative of this concern has been in the city for some time settling up the affairs of the factory. This representative paid all the outstanding bills of the concern and stated that after everything had been paid his firm would come out almost even. Today's HERALD abounds in good things. The local field is thoroughly covered, and the county news is given in a complete manner. The important happenings of the world, state news, stories, ladies' fashions and interesting miscellaney are found in the inside pages. Every week the HERALD grows better. It is the only paper in Butler that prints the news without fear or favor. It caters to no clique, clan or class. It is fair and honest in its discussions and wins favor with all intelligent and broad minded people. We will be pleased to send anyone sample copies if they will notify us of a desire to look the paper over. One dollar and fifty cents pays for fifty-two numbers.

A Waterloo fellow from down the pike dropped a bunch of items in the office for us Monday forgetting that he had written the following on the reverse side: "Dearest, my love for you is stronger than coffee or the kick of a cow. When I think of you, my heart flops up and down like my mother's churn dasher and visions of doubt creep over my soul until I feel like an old cheese board made full of holes by skippers. Sensations of exquisite joy go through me like young goats on a stable roof. I feel as though I could lift myself with my boot straps to the height of a church steeple. As a gosling swimmeth in a mud puddle, so do I swim in a sea of delightfulness when you are near me. My heart oscillates like a shaker in a fanning mill, and my eyes stand open like cellar doors in a country town. If my love is not reciprocated I will pine away like a poisoned bed bug, and you will catch cold over my grave. —Ashley Times.

ON THE CHICAGO BOARD OF TRADE

Chicago makes the price of wheat the world over. Chicago doesn't make the price of wheat because, as many people believe, the pit in the big Board of Trade, the scene of many a stirring speculative drama, gathers together a horde of rich, rash plungers who make prices go up or down by sheer force of money. Nor does the Chicago pit make the price because any considerable part of the actual wheat crop of the country is handled in Chicago. Nor does the pit make the price because the United States raises the bulk of the world's crop.

The wheat pit, where fortunes are made and lost by daring speculators, makes prices for the world because the pit is the clearing house of the world's opinion of the production and consumption of wheat. All the world's knowledge of the wheat trade, from the Dakotas to Argentine, from the Red River to the Danube, from Manitoba to India, is focused in the Chicago wheat pit. The telegraph wires carry instantly to Chicago news and rumors of monsoons in India, rain in Kansas, frost in Minnesota, war clouds in the Balkans, drought in Argentine, failures in Liverpool, "black rust" in Russia—every bit of information that may affect the price of wheat. Chicago knows from day to day the weather in every wheat-producing country on the globe, the shipments from every seaport and inland distributing point, the receipts and deliveries by the railroads, lake boats and ocean steamers, the receipts at elevators and flour mills. Chicago knows just how many acres are sown to wheat in every country in the world, and knows, besides, from day to day, in the season, just what its promise is for the harvest. No factor than can have any bearing on prices to-day, to-morrow or next year is overlooked.

"How Are the Crops?"

The wheat pit focuses this knowledge not only for the speculators in the commodity, but for the world of industry and commerce. Early in the spring the country begins to ask: "How are the crops?" Our prosperity during the twelve months following the harvest depends, in a very large measure, on the answer to this question. Out of the ground comes our wealth. In these years of abundant prosperity the farmer takes from the earth each harvest season products of a value of $4,000,000,000, and more than a third of this enormous sum represents the two great crops of the West—corn and wheat.

The question, "How are the crops?" becomes each year, as the harvest time approaches, one of vital importance, and the earlier the knowledge of the size and quality of the crops the more valuable it is to the commercial community. Railway men need to know in advance the outcome of the harvest, that they may prepare for the transportation of the crops to the markets. Bumper corn means big tonnage, not only of products from the farms to the consumers, but also of merchandise from the manufacturing towns to the farms, bought by the farmers with their produce. When railway men are assured of big crops they spend many millions of dollars for new locomotives and cars and rails, and many millions more for the improvement of their roadbeds and the extension of their lines into new territory. The steelmakers are jointly interested with the railway men in the harvest, for half of the enormous product of the steel mills of this country is purchased by the railways. When the crops fail the railways cancel their orders for rails and bridges and equipment, and steel descends from prince to pauper.

Then all the big manufacturers of the country, whether of wagons or plows, of shoes or clothing, must know whether their great consumer, the farmer, is to have money to spend from harvest to harvest. So it is with the merchants all through the agricultural country. Even more important is early knowledge of the crop prospects to the bankers, who must not only finance the movement of the crops to market, but must also know whether the harvest is to cause expansion or contraction of capital ventures through the country. Then there are the flour millers and elevator owners, who are directly interested in the marketing of the crops.

Speculation as Science.

Finally there is the great body of men who speculate in the rise and fall in commodity prices and who risk many millions of dollars annually in backing their opinions as to the volume of the crops and the demand for them in the grain markets of the world. The big speculation in wheat results from the fact that no one knows from year to year what the outcome of the harvest will be or whether prices will go up or down. But men of intelligence, foresight and daring can make use of all the news that comes to hand from day to day and forecast prices. When their forecasts are sound they have the opportunity of making great fortunes. When their forecasts are wrong or when they attempt to obstruct the natural laws of supply and demand they invite ruin, and many a man has been ruined in the wheat pit.

The great wheat speculators make speculation a science. Patten, Armour and other big wheat speculators plan their campaign in a large measure on the estimates made of the size of the forthcoming world harvests by trained forecasters. The government, recognizing the importance of early knowledge of the outcome of the harvest, has established a very elaborate system of crop reporting, and the government figures as to the acreage, condition and yield of the cereals form a basis of all crop estimates. At the service of the government are more than 250,000 crop correspondents, of whom 10,000 are paid, and the weekly and monthly reports of these correspondents, forwarded by telegraph or post to Washington, are reviewed by a board of statistical experts, who consolidate them into public reports.

The Government Reports.

The government's monthly report for the first of the month is issued on the 10th. On December 10 is issued the first report of the acreage sown to winter wheat, and the average condition, 100 being used as the normal. Three months later is reported the amount of the previous season's crop still in farmers' hands. Condition reports are made in April, June and July. The May report also revises the acreage estimate, deducting for winter-killed and abandoned acreage. The July report makes a second estimate of the amount of wheat in farmers' hands. In August the yield per acre is reported. The spring wheat reports begin in July, and in September the harvest condition of both crops is given. In October the yield per acre and the quality of spring wheat are reported. Late in December a final estimate is made by the Department of Agriculture of the volume of all the crops of the country for the year.

But the government's crop reports, despite all the elaborate system that has been developed to make them trustworthy, do not satisfy the big speculators or the men whose business ventures are influenced by the harvest. Every railway system in the wheat and corn belt has its own reports from correspondents and experts. Hill, of the Great Northern, for example, knows just how much wheat he will have to haul from every station on his lines in Minnesota and the Dakotas weeks in advance of the government reports. The Hill lines receive many millions of dollars a year from the transportation of wheat and corn, and this revenue varies with the volume of the crops. One of the big Chicago banks, which has correspondents all through the grain country, publishes a detailed estimate of the wheat crop, and other banks have private reports.

Large industrial companies, like the Standard Oil Company and the International Harvester Company, have elaborate systems for private estimates. So do the great elevator people, like the Armours, and the large grain brokerage houses. Grain experts are employed by these principals, not only to travel back and forth over the grain belt of this country and Canada, but also to study and estimate the probable crops of the other great exporting countries—Russia, India, Australia and Argentina. But the crop reports that are behind the speculative campaigns are those made by private experts.

Cornering a Losing Game.

Cornering the wheat market nowadays is almost a sure losing game. No wise men try it. "Joe" Leiter's bold attempt was typical. In 1897, when he tried to corner the market, he had the strongest wheat position ever known in the trade. The importing countries of Europe had produced only 770,000,000 bushels of wheat, against 990,000,000 bushels the year before. Reserves everywhere were low. Among exporting countries the United States alone showed any considerable surplus. To buy this surplus was to make Europe pay the holders' own price for it—theoretically.

But with every few cents' advance at Chicago, grain appeared as if by magic. The Northwest scraped its granaries. Russia ate rye and emptied its mill bins of wheat. Argentina swept the floor. In December the Chicago market was cornered—on paper; but Armour kept steel-prowed tugs plowing up the ice at the head of the lakes, and by lake and rail moved 6,000,000 bushels from Minnesota and the Dakotas in midwinter. Mr. Leiter paid for every bushel of it, and marked the price up from 85 cents to $1.09. Still more granaries were emptied, and wheat poured to market.

The war between the United States and Spain came on, as opportunely for the deal as though it had been carefully devised. Europe became panic-stricken over a vision of American wheat shipments cut off by Spanish men-of-war. France suspended her wheat import duties of 36½ cents a bushel. Other countries followed. At Chicago $1.45 was paid for cash wheat for export. The newspapers figured Mr. Leiter's profits far into the millions. But with every advance in price more wheat appeared, and when it came to disposing of the forty or fifty million bushels that had been accumulated in controlling the market, the paper profits melted, a huge deficit appeared.

Then there was the Harper deal in 1887. A mysterious "bull clique" began to dominate the market by enormous purchases of the May option. Everyone knew that a "deal" far greater than any ever attempted on the board was afoot. The purchase of wheat went on. A thousand carloads a day poured into the city. Warehouses were choked. Railroad sidings were full of laden cars waiting for some place to unload. Still the mysterious clique bought it; it seemed to have endless resources.

Panic and Ruin.

The air of the board was tense with battle. It was a fight between the clique and the trade. Saturday, June 11, the market opened firm, with May wheat 86 cents, the clique apparently in full control. But some operators of skill and power at length were ready to come to close quarters—to try a thrust of pikes. There was a furious raid on "May," and the price broke to 82½ cents—not so much, only it showed that the clique was not omnipotent after all. Monday there was a truce. But early Tuesday morning defeat was in the air. At the first tap of the bell July was down to 80 cents. The pit became a rout, a panic. The immense structure of the clique, built into the trade by enormous purchases extending over four months, was plainly going to pieces. The bears flung themselves upon it without thought of caution. By noon cash wheat had dropped 20 cents. At that hour Secretary Stone appeared in the small south gallery and began announcing the failures. There were nineteen failures on the board. When the wreck was cleared up a few days later it was found that E. L. Harper, vice president of the Fidelity Bank of Cincinnati, was the clique; that he had ruined himself and looted the bank of its last available dollar to carry on the deal.

J. A. PATTEN, SAID TO HAVE MADE FORTUNE IN WHEAT.

JAMES A. PATTEN

James A. Patten, who is said to have gained a fortune out of the recent rise in May wheat, has been conspicuous for several years as a daring and successful Chicago board of trade operator in wheat and corn. He has been in the board of trade business since 1878 and previously served four years as an employe of the State grain inspection department in Chicago. Mr. Patten lives in Evanston, Ill., and was mayor of that city four years, besides serving two terms as alderman. He was born in Dekalb County, Illinois, in 1852, and as a boy worked in a country store and on a farm.

RIPE OLIVES.

A Trick Which People in California Play on Newcomers.

"I have just returned from California," said the traveler, "and for your information, in case you ever wander thither, let me post you on one of the merry little jests which the inhabitants love to play on the innocent tenderfoot.

"About the first thing they'll run you up against the California ripe olives. Ever eat them? You can hardly get them here because they won't stand shipment. And they're mighty good.

"Most real olive eaters prefer them to the ordinary green pickled olive. The ripe olives are pickled also, you understand, and come out of the brine jet black.

"After you have eaten and approved, they will lead you on by remarking:

"'Well, if you like them that way you'll like them better fresh. Just stroll out to the orchard with me and we'll have one."

"Then they lead you out to one of their long lanes of trees. I pause to remark that you don't know what olive green and olive brown mean until you've seen those colors in that slim, graceful little tree.

"There are fresh olives all right, hanging among the gray leaves and looking mighty tempting. You pick one, and bite into it.

"Whew! Bitter? I can taste it yet. It's all the quinine and rhubarb and wormwood in the world, combined in a nasty, haunting bitterness that hangs to you until you have eaten two meals. It is an oily bitterness that gets into the corners and crannies of your mouth and won't be washed out.

"When you recover a little they explain that the brine takes out the bitterness, and that's why olives are pickled."—New York Sun.

FOOD FACTS.

What an M. D. Learned.

A prominent Georgia physician went through a food experience which he makes public:

"It was my own experience that first led me to advocate Grape-Nuts food and I also know, from having prescribed it to convalescents and other weak patients that the food is a wonderful rebuilder and restorer of nerve and brain tissue, as well as muscle. It improves the digestion and sick patients always gain just as I did in strength and weight very rapidly.

"I was in such a low state that I had to give up my work entirely, and went to the mountains of this state, but two months there did not improve me; in fact, I was not quite as well as when I left home.

"My food did not sustain me and it became plain that I must change. Then I began to use Grape-Nuts food, and in two weeks I could walk a mile without fatigue, and in five weeks returned to my home and practice, taking up hard work again. Since that time I have felt as well and strong as I ever did in my life.

"As a physician who seeks to help all sufferers, I consider it a duty to make these facts public."

Trial 10 days on Grape-Nuts, when the regular food does not seem to sustain the body, will work miracles.

Investing in Nature.

A man must invest himself near at hand, and in common things, and be content with a steady and moderate return, if he would know the blessedness of a cheerful heart and the sweetness of a walk over the round earth. This is a lesson the American has yet to learn—capability of amusement on a low key. He expects rapid and extraordinary returns. He would make the very elemental laws pay usury. He has nothing to invest in a walk. It is too slow, too cheap. We crave the astonishing, the highways of the gods when we see them—always a sign of the decay of faith and simplicity of man.—John Burroughs.

Four-Horse Evener.

This particular form of four-horse evener is entered to work with one horse in the furrow and the other three on the land. To get an even draft will perhaps require some adjustment of the left hand double tree and the proper place to attach the chain to the plow beam can be found by experiment. The two double trees are of the ordinary length and the stick used for evener needs to be tough oak and five feet four inches in length. The two pulleys should be large enough to allow a small link log chain to work through them. Two bolts are required for the pulleys, and two pieces of strap iron two inches wide, used as braces. The illustration does not indicate exactly the distances between the different points which should be as follows: From the right end to the first pulley, 7 inches; from the point of attachment of the plow to the center of right hand pulley, 15¼ inches; from the point of attachment of the plow to the center of the left hand pulley 8½ inches. This places the two pulleys almost 24 inches apart. At the left end have three or more holes into which the double tree for left hand team can be hitched.

For an even distribution of the draft the proper point of attachment of the left hand double tree will depend solely upon the point of attachment of the chain to the plow. If the chain is carried far back, its draft will be different from what it would be if it were attached closer to the nose end of the plow. Assuming that the angle of attachment of the chain to the plow is 30 degrees the left hand double tree should be attached to the main piece of the evener at a point about 26½ inches from the point of attachment of the plow to the double tree. There is no reason why this evener should not work on any kind of plow provided that the lengths of the parts are adjusted to suit the distance of the point of attachment of the main tree from the furrow and that there is a rigid brace to which to attach the chain.

A Smooth Field.

It worries the good farmer to see his neighbors plowing the fields round and round the same way year after year. He knows that by-and-by there will be deep furrows all over the farm, and all the while these might be avoided. How? Change the order of things this spring by going out into the center of the field where the dead furrow is and turning it full the first thing. Then gee around instead of haw, as is usually done, plowing back to the place of beginning. Keep this up to the end and you will have no ditch in the middle, but a field that is nice and smooth and good to look upon. It may be a little awkward turning round to the right where one has always been in the habit of turning to the left, but you will soon get accustomed to it, and to will the horses.

Wash for Nursery Stock.

Dipping nursery stock in lime-sulphur wash or other insecticides has recently been much advocated as a substitute for fumigation with hydrocyanic acid gas. The station at Geneva, N. Y., finds, however, that this treatment, if used at all, must be handled with care to secure scale destruction without injuring the trees. With the sulphur wash, exposure of the trees for too long a time or at too high temperature resulted in injury; while with any of the materials used, exposure of the roots to the mixture resulted in serious injury to the stock. For nurserymen the station still recommends fumigation as most effective and least liable to injury, and would advise orchardists to use the lime-sulphur as a spray after the trees are set, rather than as a dip when they are received.—Farm Journal.

To Wool Growers.

Don't use binder twine or any other kind in tying fleeces save the regular wool twine. The trade generally made extra efforts last year to have this detrimental custom discontinued, and did do much then to eradicate it. This year most of the mills and leading dealers reiterate their determination not to handle wool tied with sisal twine, as it renders the wool unfit for dyeing; hence, if growers or those preparing wool for market expect to find ready sale and top prices for their wools, they must adhere to this advice. Higher prices and active competition for the receipts, if properly and carefully handled, is confidently anticipated in this market the coming season, and shippers are also advised that in order to realize the best results consignments should be sold here on the open market, where all buyers can compete for them.

Concerning Hogs.

A hog is a hog frequently because he is given no opportunity to be cleanly and decent. There are farmers who believe a hog would die if not allowed to wallow in mud and filth, while others are of the opinion that the hog should have plenty of clean water. The hog needs a great deal of water in hot weather, and if he cannot get it he will take mud as the next best thing. A hog rushes to a mudhole to cool off. He comes out and the mud dries on his skin. The next mud bath he takes adds another layer to that already dried on, and in a short time the pores of his skin are completely clogged with mud. Now, a hog cannot thrive with his pores all clogged up any better than a man. If a hog has access to a deep pool of water, as he should in hot weather, he will keep clean and thrive much more than if he lies around in a mudhole made filthy by continued use. Most farmers who supply a bathing place for their hogs make them so shallow that they are soon converted into mudholes. On our farm we usually keep from thirty to fifty pigs, and they have a pool of water fed by a stream, and it is deep enough for them to swim in. The sides are dug down sharply, and were laid with cobblestones for a distance of four or five feet from the water's edge. The pool was always clean; we never have trouble with mange or lice, and when on two occasions cholera swept through the country our hogs were not affected. The hogs never used the pool unless the weather was extremely hot.

A piece of timber 4x6 two feet long, with a notch in one end 3x6 inches, a piece 2x4 two feet long with one end beveled and a notch 2½x6 inches cut in position as shown in sketch serves to hold the gate open. The dotted lines show the position of the holder as the gate is forced over the bevel. The post should be set to correspond with the height of the gate when open. If the gate drags on the ground there is something wrong; hang the gate a little bit higher. The end opposite the notch of the holder should be the heaviest so as to keep the notch in position on the gate.

Treatment for Potato Scab.

It is true that as early as 1842 a German investigator suggested that the trouble was caused by a parasitic organism, but later it was definitely determined that the fungus, Sorosporium scabies, which he had isolated, was not invariably the cause of the trouble. It was not until 1890 that Prof. Bolley definitely determined that potato scab was caused by a fungus parasite. Until resistant strains could be bred up it was necessary that some temporary preventive be applied, says Farm, Stock and Home. Treatment of scabies may be made by the use of formalin or corrosive sublimate (bichloride of mercury). The latter is perhaps the most effective, but it should be handled with the greatest caution, as it is a very powerful poison when taken internally. The solution is prepared by dissolving two ounces of corrosive sublimate in two gallons of hot water. When the potatoes are well dissolved, add twelve gallons of water, making fourteen gallons in all. The potatoes, which should be reasonably clean, should be put in a gunny sack and the whole suspended in the solution for an hour and a half. Then empty them out on a floor to dry thoroughly before cutting and planting.

Confinement of Fowls.

In the old days it was thought that hens should not be confined to the least extent, but people have come to think differently nowadays. The poultry books of a few years ago were full of recommendations to give hens plenty of room, advising ten or twelve square feet of floor space per hen. There is no doubt that ample space per hen is beneficial to an appreciable extent, but there are few commercial poultrymen who find it necessary to devote so much space as that. Experiments recently conducted have shown that a hen with five square feet of space, the latter showing evidences of congestion and inaction. As it is less expensive to build a low henhouse than a higher one, the former are more popular, and by this means it is practical to give the hens more room.

Cure for Blind Staggers.

The Louisiana Experiment Station has been studying blind staggers in horses, its cause and cure. But nothing definite could be found. It is their opinion that the cause of the disease is in some way associated with the conditions of the feeding materials, such as grass, or cured products of corn, brought about by the attacks of mold or fungus.

Pig-Eating Sows.

Sows may be kept from eating their pigs by giving them a great variety of food for two months or more before the pigs come along. It should include some animal food and plenty of salt.

Steam-Cooked Food.

By a very simple improvement in the familiar cooker, it is claimed that the preparation of food is greatly facilitated. The cooker consists of two pans, one nested within the other and the improvement referred to lies simply in the making of a number of perforations along the edge of the inner receptacle, which is the one designed to contain the food to be treated. The lid fits over both pans in such a way that steam from the water in the lower receptacle passes up to the interior of the chamber containing the food. Because of the additional heat the cooking is accomplished in less time and the moisture supplied by the steam prevents the food from becoming too dry.

NEW COOKER.

Making Hard Soap.

Put on a pair of old gloves; open a can of the best patent lye; empty it into a stone jar; add one quart of cold or warm water and stir with a stick until the lye is thoroughly dissolved. Put the grease on in a pot over a slow fire to melt. When it is liquid, dip a cheesecloth into hot water, wring hard and strain two quarts of the grease into a pail; add this to the dissolved lye and stir until it looks like a smooth sirup. Now let it stand, stirring now and then. When it is like thick gruel, have an old bread pan ready to receive the "gruel." First, line the bottom with thick paper cut to fit; dip a clean cloth into cold water, wring it dry and spread it smoothly all over the pan, covering sides as well as the bottom. Pour in the soap; smooth it on top and let it stand to harden. When it begins to harden all over, cut into squares with a broad-bladed knife. When quite firm, lift the squares from the pan; lay them on clean paper, not touching one another. When perfectly hard it is ready for use.

Potato Shells.

Add to a pint of hot mashed potatoes half a teaspoonful of celery salt, one-fourth of a teaspoon of Hungarian paprika, a tablespoonful each of butter and cream and the stiffly beaten whites of two eggs; press firmly into buttered shells, unmold carefully, brush the corrugated side with beaten yolk, lay on a buttered pan and bake brown; garnish with parsley.

Raised Waffles.

Raised waffles are excellent. Scald two cupfuls of milk in a double boiler, add a rounding tablespoonful of butter, one-quarter cup of sugar and a level teaspoonful of salt. When lukewarm add one-half yeast cake dissolved in one-quarter cup of lukewarm water, three cupfuls of sifted flour and two well-beaten eggs. Cover, let rise very light and bake.

Pecan Cookies.

Cream one scant teaspoonful of butter with half a cup of sugar; add two eggs, one scant cup of flour, one teaspoonful of baking powder, one-half teaspoonful of salt, four tablespoonfuls of milk, a generous cup of chopped pecan meats and vanilla to flavor. Drop with a teaspoonful on buttered pans about 2 inches apart. Bake in moderate oven.

Imitation Sauerkraut.

Select a small, solid head of cabbage and chop it up fine. Place in a granite or porcelain kettle for twenty-four hours. Before putting away add salt and a little water; cover well; next drain off the water, rinse well and fry in fat, lard or butter, as may be desired. It also can be boiled with meat.

Bird's Nest Pudding.

Cover the bottom of a granite pie plate with sliced apples, cover with a soft, rich biscuit dough, bake and serve with the apples on top, sprinkled with sugar and dotted with bits of butter. Cream may be served with it if desired.

Washing Fluid.

A useful washing fluid is made by boiling together half a pound of slaked lime and a pound of soda in six parts of water for two hours. Let it settle and then pour off the clear liquid for use.

Short Suggestions.

Do not put turnips on to cook in large pieces. It only wastes fuel.

A slice of onion in a dish of water if left in the room will kill the odor of paint.

A little sugar added to boiled starch will give a desirable gloss to the clothes when ironed.

In making a cake, grease the tin with sweet lard rather than butter and sift a little dry flour over it.

It is said that the flavor of chicken is greatly improved by adding a pinch of white soda while it is cooking.

When nuts have become too dry to be good remove the shells, let stand over night in equal parts of milk and water, then dry them in the oven and they will be fresh and good.

When oilcloth is badly worn and you wish to paint it, first fill the worn places with a mixture of ocher and paste. This fills up the cloth and when dry it makes a substantial foundation for paint.

When the top cannot be removed from a fruit can, if the lid is carefully pried at one point so the gum can be caught, the rubber can easily be removed. It is not difficult to pull the band from beneath the metal cap.

Mildew, if not of too long standing, can be removed by the use of raw tomato and salt. Rub the stains with tomato, sprinkle thickly with salt and lay in the sun. It may be necessary to repeat the process two or three times.

CHICAGO.

Trade is stimulated by the more seasonable weather, and there is notable reduction of idle hands in the spread of industrial and farming activities. The volume of payments through the banks is seen to be well above that of a year ago, and money has a firmer tone, but rates for choice commercial paper are unchanged. Preparations for the May settlements indicate a release of interest and dividends exceeding former totals.

Confidence in the business outlook is reflected in a larger investment in bonds, stocks and improvements. Agricultural advices show more agreement as to extending acreage, there being much breaking of soil for the first time in the Northwest, where new settlements multiply rapidly.

Implement factories have increased outputs and there is wider absorption of wagons and hardware. Lumber receipts exhibit considerable gain, and the mills remain well employed, but shipments of various woods to Western points steadily grow, and building needs draw heavily upon planing mill outputs and quarry products. Numerous contracts have been negotiated for structural steel, pipe, merchant iron and forge work. Car builders obtained further orders for future deliveries and a fair tonnage is booked for rails and pig iron. Steel mills at South Chicago run closer to capacity, and the improved conditions afforded work to several hundreds of additional hands. Leather working trades find inquiries encouraging in belting, novelties and trunks. Shoe factories accumulate forward orders, while there is more steadiness in the markets for the raw material. Other factory supplies come forward amply for current requirements, but prices hold steady and, in some respects, have a firmer tendency.

Failures reported in the Chicago district number 32, against 21 last week, 34 in 1908 and 19 in 1907. Those with liabilities over $5,000 number 8, against 5 last week, 10 in 1908 and 7 in 1907.—Dun's Weekly Review of Trade.

NEW YORK.

Trade conditions are without much change, and irregularity is still the leading feature in business and industrial lines. Results of spring business are as a whole disappointing. There is, however, more doing in wholesale lines for next fall and winter, and the tone in this branch is fairly optimistic.

There is considerably more activity in the pig iron markets, and the volume of business doing in iron and steel is heavier. A large part of this, however, appears to be at the expense of prices, because structural material is apparently at the bottom, wire prices have been cut, and a number of other lines show the effect of the desire of manufacturers to get business.

Manufacturers are certainly buying more freely, though they report little increase in orders. Eastern shoe shipments are 24 per cent larger than a year ago, but still behind 1907.

Business failures in the United States for the week ending April 22 were 247, against 201 last week, 251 in the like week of 1908, 157 in 1907, 177 in 1906 and 193 in 1905.

In Canada the week's failures number 36, against 27 last week and 36 in this week of 1908.—Bradstreet's.

CURED ITCHING HUMOR.

Big, Painful Swellings Broke and Did Not Heal—Suffered Three Years—Tortures Yield to Cuticura.

"Little black swellings were scattered over my face and neck and they would leave little black scars that would itch so I couldn't keep from scratching them. Larger swellings would appear and my clothes would stick to the sores. I went to a doctor, but the trouble only got worse. By this time it was all over my arms and the upper part of my body in swellings as large as a dollar. It was so painful that I could not bear to lie on my back. The second doctor stopped the swellings, but when they broke the places would not heal. I bought a set of the Cuticura Remedies and in less than a week some of the places were nearly well. I continued until I had used three sets, and now I am sound and well. The disease lasted three years. O. L. Wilson, Puryear, Tenn., Feb. 8, 1908."

Sure Thing.

"Henry," said the rich old uncle, "if you think I am likely to die suddenly some day when I least expect it you may as well rid your mind of that idea. There is nothing whatever the matter with my heart."

"You'll never die of enlargement of it, anyway, uncle," cheerfully acquiesced the spendthrift nephew.

A Faux Pas.

"How do you happen to be here?" asked the sympathetic lady visitor.

"I was caught on the wrong side of a residence," answered the prisoner.

"And how was that?"

"I was on the inside when I should have been on the outside."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Value.

"O, George!" cried the young bride "I've split one of my finger nails! And there's no $5,000 insurance on the finger either!"

"Never mind, dear," said the young husband, kissing the injured digit. "It's worth $5,000, just the same."

"Isn't it worth $5,250, George?" she asked, snuggling up to him. "It's the one that has my engagement ring on it."

"What did he do that for?"

"To show me that he was talking through his hat, I guess."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

FASHION HINTS

Foulards are high in favor this season and really there is nothing more practical and satisfactory for a gown that must fit many occasions. The model shown here would be very good for a foulard, either plain or figured. If plain material is used, then the neck and lower sleeves should be in an open work pattern in lace or batiste. If figured silk is used then make the neck and sleeves of net or chiffon cloth.

Deaths of Physicians.

compiled by the Journal of the Americ- mortality rate among physicians in the United States in 1908. The number of deaths was 2,261. Based on an estimate of 130,000 physicians in the country, this is equivalent to an annual death rate of 17.39 per thousand.

There is no material change from the annual rates of the last six years. These were: 1907, 16.1; 1906, 17.2; 1905, 16.36; 1904, 17.14; 1903, 13.73, and 1902, 14.74. The average age at death was 59½ years. The deceased had practiced all the way from one year to seventy-five. The average was thirty and one-half years.

Among the principal causes of death were heart disease, violence, pneumonia and cerebral hemorrhage, in the order named. It is considered remarkable that 175 physicians met violent deaths.

Included in the assigned causes of death were 335 attributed to general diseases, 269 to diseases of the nervous system, 288 to diseases of the circulatory system, 201 to diseases of the respiratory system, 79 to diseases of the digestive system, and 34 physicians committed suicide and 12 were murdered.

Western Canada's Happy Prospects.

In no year since the development of Western Canada began has spring brought a brighter outlook than it brings this year. In no preceding spring has there been greater assurance of advancing development and prosperity. The movement of immigration has already assumed large proportions, and is as desirable in character as it is satisfactory in volume; from across the Atlantic sturdy, industrious and thrifty newcomers are arriving in large numbers, homeseekers from Ontario and the other older provinces are coming in a steady stream, and from across the international boundary a movement is already in full flow which, it is confidently predicted, will beat the records of all previous years; special settlers' trains are crossing the line, loaded with effects, actual material wealth being thus brought into the country at the rate of millions of dollars' worth monthly.

The movement is so unprecedently large that extra Dominion Immigration officials have had to be provided at both North Portal and at Emerson, and it is estimated that the total number of new settlers from the United States this year will be 70,000 at least, and may run well up toward 100,000. Last year's total of new settlers from the South was 53,723; thus the area that will be placed in wheat and other grains this year will greatly exceed that of last year. Settlers are making extraordinary efforts to get on their lands and begin seeding operations. The price of wheat now, away above the dollar mark, is incentive enough, and when one has in view the splendid results that the past few years have shown, it is not to be wondered at that the present will be the banner year for immigration to Canada. Ask your nearest Canadian government agent for rates of transportation, and he will also send you illustrated pamphlets.

His Idea of Good Company.

The late General William Preston, one of the most genial and hospitable of Kentuckians, was noted for his ability to absorb a conversation without attracting attention or giving offense.

Once, having traveled from Louisville to his home in Lexington, he was greeted at the railroad station by several friends, who expressed the hope that his journey had been a pleasant one. "I enjoyed it very much," said General Preston, "for I had the companionship of the most entertaining young man I ever met. I found his society so delightful that I was sorry when I bade him farewell here on the platform."

"Who was he?" was the inquiry.

"I can't recall his name just now, though I am sure he mentioned it; but there he is," said the General, pointing to a youth who by his unerring accuracy in lip-reading was regarded as the most intelligent deaf-mute in the State, but who never in his life had been able to hear or utter a sound.

Too Inquisitive.

"What is 'Boston' coffee?" asked the customer at the lunch counter.

"It's the kind you put the cream in first," answered the waiter girl.

"But why is it called Boston coffee?"

"Because the cream is put in first."

"Yes, I know; but when a man orders Boston coffee why do you put the cream in first?"

"Because he orders Boston coffee. Anything else you wish to know, sir?"—Chicago Tribune.

"Don't you think," queried the reporter, "there ought to be an honorary degree to be conferred on men who have distinguished themselves by conspicuous acts of bravery?"

DOCTOR ADVISED OPERATION

Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Paw Paw, Mich.—"I suffered terribly from female ills, including inflammation and congestion, for several years. My doctor said there was no hope for me but an operation. I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I can now say I am a well woman."

EMMA DRAPER.

Another Operation Avoided.

Chicago, Ill.—"I want women to know what that wonderful medicine, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, has done for me. Two of the best doctors in Chicago said I would die if I did not have an operation, and I never thought of seeing a well day again. I had a small tumor and female troubles so that I suffered day and night. A friend recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it made me a well woman."—Mrs. ALVENA SPERLING, 11 Langdon St., Chicago, Ill.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has proved to be the most successful remedy for curing the worst forms of female ills, including displacements, inflammation, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, and nervous prostration. It costs but a trifle to try it, and the result has been worth millions to many suffering women.

Eat What
You want of the food you need Kodol will digest it.

You need a sufficient amount of good wholesome food and more than this you need to fully digest it.

Else you can't gain strength, nor can you strengthen your stomach if it is weak.

You must eat in order to live and maintain strength.

You must not diet, because the body requires that you eat a sufficient amount of food regularly.

But this food must be digested, and it must be digested thoroughly. When the stomach can't do it, you must take something that will help the stomach.

The proper way to do is to eat what you want, and let Kodol digest the food.

Nothing else can do this. When the stomach is weak it needs help; you must help it by giving it rest, and Kodol will do that.

Our Guarantee

Go to your druggist today, and purchase a dollar bottle, and if you can honestly say, that you did not receive any benefits from it, after using the entire bottle, the druggist will refund your money to you without question or delay.

We will pay the druggist the price of the bottle purchased by you.

This offer applies to the large bottle only and to but one in a family.

We could not afford to make such an offer, unless we positively knew what Kodol will do for you.

It would bankrupt us.

The dollar bottle contains 2½ times as much as the fifty cent bottle.

Kodol is made at the laboratories of E. C. DeWitt & Co., Chicago.

Just because the landlady keeps chickens is no sign that she feeds them to her boarders. In fact, that she keeps them is sufficient evidence that he—well, that she keeps them.

Pain makes an eternity of one night.

Pineules are for Backache, and bring quick relief to lumbago, rheumatism, fatigue and all other symptoms of Kidney diseases. They are a tonic to the entire system and build up strength and health. Price 50c and $1.00. Sold by Geo. W. Geddes. 9-3m

Vincent Skelton has been named as chief of police at Logansport.

We would like to prove to every sufferer of Kidney diseases that Pineules will bring prompt relief. Backache, rheumatism, lumbago, fatigue and impure blood are merely symptoms of Kidney disorders. The $1.00 size contains 2½ times as much as the 50c size. Sold by Geo. W. Geddes. 9-3m

While poverty may be a cause for sorrow, I still maintain that riches have nothing to do with happiness.

Bees Laxative Cough Syrup is instant relief for coughs, colds, croup, whooping cough. It is gently laxative and drives the cold from the system clearing the head and throat. Pleasant to take. Good for hoarseness, and all bronchial trouble. Guaranteed because we know what it will do. 25c, 50c and $1.00 Sold by Geo. W. Geddes. 9-3m

Impossible to be Well

It is impossible to be well, simply impossible, if the bowels are constipated. You must pay attention to the laws of nature, or suffer the consequences. Undigested material, waste products, poisonous substances, must be removed from the body at least once each day, or there will be trouble. A sluggish liver is responsible for an immense amount of suffering and serious disease. Ask your doctor about Ayer's Pills. He knows why they act directly on the liver. Trust him. J. C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass.

Hours are years to the unhappy.

DeWitt's Little Early Risers, the best known pills and the best pills made, are easy to take and act gently and are certain. We sell and recommend them. Sold by Geo. W. Geddes. 13-1m

The lesson easiest learned is soonest forgotten.

ManZan Pile Remedy is put up in a tube with nozzle attached convenient for use. May be applied directly to the affected parts reducing and relieving the pain and inflammation For all kinds of Piles. Guaranteed Price 50c. Sold by Geo. W. Geddes. 9-3m

A clear conscience never has to brush red hairs from its coat.

A Guaranteed Cough remedy is Bees Laxative Cough Syrup. For coughs, colds, croup, whooping cough, hoarseness and all bronchial affections. Best for children because it is quick to relieve and tastes good. Gently laxative and drives the cold from the system. Sold by Geo. W. Geddes 9-3m

A pessimist is a man who kicks a hat and finds a brick under it.

Children especially like Kennedy's Laxative Cough Syrup, as it tastes nearly as good as maple sugar. It not only heals irritation and allays inflammation, thereby stopping the cough, but it also moves the bowels gently and in that way drives the cold from the system. It contains no opiates. Sold by Geo. W. Geddes. 13-1m

The value of money depends on the tastes of the man who spends it.

Woods Liver Medicine is a liver regulator which acts directly on this organ, invigorates and produces natural action. Brings quick relief to sick headache, constipation, biliousness and other symptoms of liver disorders. Particularly recommended for Jaundice, Chills, Fever and Malaria. The $1.00 size contains 2½ times as much as the 50c size. Sold by Geo. W. Geddes. 9-3m

Even the rarest day of June is only an interim between darkness and darkness.

You should not delay under any circumstances in cases of Kidney and Bladder trouble. You should take something promptly that you know is reliable, something like DeWitt's Kidney and Bladder Pills. They are unequaled for weak back, backache, in flammation of the bladder, rheumatic pains, etc. When you ask for DeWitt's Kidney and Bladder Pills, be sure you get them. They are antiseptic. Accept no substitutes; insist upon getting the right kind. Sold by Geo. W. Geddes. 13-1m

Do not try to please everybody, else you will soon be a worn-out weathervane.

The Happy Family Circle

Father and mother, sisters and brothers, soon get to know one another's intimate affairs, and the little bowel and liver disturbances soon become household comment. It is well to remember that in constipation and indigestion, and other troubles of the stomach, liver and bowels a quick cure can be had by the use of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Take it tonight and you will feel perfectly well in the morning. It is absolutely guaranteed to do what is claimed, and if you want to try it before buying, send your address for a free sample bottle to Pepsin Syrup Co., 119 Caldwell Bldg., Monticello, Ill. It is sold by all druggists at 50c and $1 a bottle. 13-1m

The public is like a barrell of apples—all are not good and only a few are perfect.

The Strain of Life

This is a busy, active world, and the man succeeds best who has the greatest health and strength to fight the battles of life. You can't be healthy, strong and clear minded if you suffer from constipation, dyspepsia, liver trouble, flatulency, heartburn, etc. To cure these diseases take Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, the great regulator. It is absolutely guaranteed to do what is claimed, and if you would like to try it before buying, send your address for a free sample bottle to Pepsin Syrup Co., 119 Caldwell Bldg, Monticello, Ill. It is sold by all druggists at 50c and $1 a bottle. 13-1m

The man who expects to hold office without being kicked at, is an amateur indeed.

Its a Top Notch Doer

Great deeds compel regard. The world crowns its doers. That's why the American people have crowned Dr. King's New Discovery the King of Throat and Lung remedies. Every atom is a health force. It kills germs, and colds and lagrippe vanish. It heals cough-racked membranes and coughing stops. Sore, inflamed bronchial tubes and lungs are cured and hemorrhages cease. Dr. Geo. More, Black Jack, N. C. writes, "it cured me of lung trouble, pronounced hopeless by all doctors." 50c, $1.00. Trial bottle free. Guaranteed at Stone's drug store. 13-1m

There is never an excuse for a man saying he cannot do a thing, until he has tried.

Frightful Fate Averted

"I would have been a cripple for life, from a terrible cut on my knee cap," writes Frank Disberry, Kelliher, Minn. "without Bucklen's Arnica Salve, which soon cured me." Infallible for wounds, cuts and bruises, it soon cures Burns, Scalds, Old Sores, Boils, Skin Eruptions. World's best for Piles. 25c at Stone's drug store. 13-1m

No matter what happens, keep on hoping and trying. Despair is the height of folly.

Money Comes in Bunches

to A. A. Chisholm, of Treadwell, N. Y., now. His reason is well worth reading: "For a long time I suffered from indigestion, torpid liver, constipation, nervousness, and general debility," he writes. "I couldn't sleep, had no appetite, nor ambition, grew weaker every day in spite of all medical treatment. Then used Electric Bitters. Twelve bottles restored all my old-time health and vigor. Now I can attend to business every day. It's a wonderful medicine." Infallible for Stomach, Liver, Kidneys, Blood and Nerves. 50c. at Stone's drug store. 13-1m is, by no means, the dreadful disease it is thought to be—in the beginning.

It can always be stopped—in the beginning. The trouble is: you don't know you've got it; you don't believe it; you won't believe it—till you are forced to. Then it is dangerous.

Don't be afraid; but attend to it quick—you can do it yourself and at home. Take

Dr. Hathaway was at Butler on business last Monday.

George Bulbeck, of Elkhart, was in Edgerton last Saturday.

William Lewis, accompanied by Dr. Hoover, started on a three weeks trip last Monday. They expect to go to Washington, Norfolk, Va., Florida, New Orleans and Hot Springs, Colorado.

Grandma Snevers died at her daughter's near Hicksville, Ohio, last Sunday. She was 88 years old.

Frank Cassil has his new blacksmith shop ready for occupancy. It is a fine shop, and he is grading his yard and planting shade trees which adds greatly to the looks of that part of town.

Sidney Gregg, of the reform bureau of Cleveland, spoke at the men's meeting in the M. E. church at 2:30 p. m. last Sunday on the subject of "Giants and Giant Killers." There was a large and attentive audience. Mr. Gregg gave a fine talk. The collection amounted to $46.65. He spoke to a mass meeting in the town hall at 7:30 p. m., on the subject "How Lobyists Make Our Laws." The hall was filled to overflow, and several people were turned away for the want of room. The men's choir of twenty-five did the singing which was fine. There will be another men's meeting in the town hall in four weeks.

Miss Louisa Keniath, of Chicago, spent part of last week with her sister, Mrs. Jennings, in Edgerton.

D. A. Geauque and Frank Dohner, each took a big load of corn to Montpelier last Wednesday for E. A. Wanamaker.

The L. S. & M. S. Ry. is getting ready to put in two miles more of side tracks at Mina. Butler talks about getting a division there, but it looks to us as though they were getting ready to put the division at Mina, as they have the third track nearly graded to Edgerton, and the amount of new tracks that they are going to make look as though there was something doing down this way. The only drawback is the lack of houses for the men to live in. Butler, you had better move some of your empty houses this way, as there isn't an empty house in Edgerton.

Best Treatment for Colds

"Most ordinary colds will yield to the simplest treatment," says the Chicago Tribune, "moderate laxatives, hot foot baths, a free perspiration and an avoidance of exposure to cold and wet after treatment." While this treament is simple, it requires considerable trouble, and the one adopting it must remain in doors for a day or two, or a fresh cold is almost sure to be contracted, and in many instances pneumonia follows. Is it not better to pin your faith to an old reliable preparation like Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, that is famous for its cures of colds and can always be depended upon? For sale by Geo. W. Geddes. 16-3

Stafford and East Wilmington

Peter Bechtel recently built a new wood house which will be a great convenience to his rural home.

I. M. Diehl and Peter Teutsch recently spent a few days at Auburn serving on the county council.

Many farmers sheared their sheep too early on account of the cold severe weather in April. The poor sheep should not be robbed of their winter coats till May.

Frank Gunsenhouser and wife visited at the home of Joseph Wilson last Sunday. They report conditions good at Artic, but do not give much credit for it to Mr. Taft's administration.

John Greenwald's horse died one day last week. It had been sick for several days and had been doctored by Dr. Hiner, of Butler. This loss leaves Mr. Greenwald without a horse and is a serious loss to him just now.

It is reported that John Greenwald recently took a party of land buyers to Colorado, but how well he succeeded in the sale of land is not known. He, it seems, went with those directed by Mr. Rickel, of Auburn, on the 20th inst.

Last Sunday quite a few from Butler and other places were fishing in the St. Joe river in south Stafford.

Joseph N. Miller is one of our pushing farmers. He now has eighty hogs on his farm.

Oat sowing is likely to be finished this week. The land is now in fine order for cultivation.

C. U. Johnson has been indisposed lately, but is some better at this writing.

Commissioner Dannells was in Stafford and Wilmington townships, Tuesday, looking after bridges and other public matters. It is said that there is some dissatisfaction with some of the appropriations lately made by the county council.

There is an effort being made to raise a large sum of money to repair and improve the U. B. church at Newville, and some members in Stafford have been requested to make contributions. It is said that some regard the plans as extravagant and uncalled for and the effort may be a failure for this reason.

Rheumatism

More than nine out of every ten cases of rheumatism are simply rheumatism of the muscles, due to cold or damp, or chronic rheumatism. In such cases no internal treatment is required. The free application of Chamberlain's Liniment is all that is needed, and it is certain to give quick relief. Give it a trial and see for yourself how quickly it relieves the pain and soreness. The medicines usually given internally for rheumatism are poisonous or very strong medicines. They are worse than useless in case of chronic and muscular rheumatism. For sale by Geo. W. Geddes. 16-3

You can always tell whether a newly made benedict is game by watching him eat his wife's first apple dumplings.

Object to Strong Medicines

Many people object to taking the strong medicines usually prescribed by physicians for rheumatism. There is no need of internal treatment in any case of muscular or chronic rheumatism, and more than nine out of every ten cases of the disease are of one or the other of these varieties. When there is no fever and little (if any) swelling, you may know that it is only necessary to apply Chamberlain's Liniment freely to get quick relief. Try it. For sale by Geo. W. Geddes. 16-3

A brass band is said to have extinguished a fire in New Orleans by playing "Roll Jordan, Roll."

For Constipation

Mr. L. H. Farnham, a prominent druggist of Spirit Lake, Iowa, says: "Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets are certainly the best thing on the market for constipation." Give these tablets a trial. You are certain to find them agreeable and pleasant in effect. Price, 25 cents. Samples free. For sale by Geo. W. Geddes. 16-3

A mule is not very handsome, but neither are some men who kick all the time.

A Healing Salve for Burns, Chapped Hands and Sore Nipples

As a healing salve for burns, sores, sore nipples and chapped hands Chamberlain's Salve is most excellent. It allays the pain of a burn almost instantly, and unless the injury is very severe, heals the parts without leaving a scar. Price, 25 cents. For sale by Geo. W. Geddes. 16-3

The next number on the program quite frequently is a back number.

Better Than Spanking

Spanking does not cure children of bed-wetting. There is a constitutional cause for this trouble. Mrs. M. Summers, Box W, Notre Dame, Ind., will send free to any mother her successful home treatment, with full instructions. Send no money, but write her today if your children trouble you in this way. Don't blame the child, the chances are it can't help it. This treatment also cures adults and aged people troubled with urine difficulties by day or night. 4-1m

One way to make the world glad is to practice it on yourself first.

Agonies Of Pain

Never give up, and think that all women, yourself included, have to suffer pain.

Thousands of women have written to tell how they have cured their womanly ills, and relieved their pains; and over a million have been benefited, in various other forms of female disease, during the past 50 years, by that popular and successful female remedy

WINE OF CARDUI
WOMAN'S RELIEF

"I believe I would now have been dead," writes Mrs. Minnie Lambe, of Lebanon Junction, Ky., "if it hadn't been for Cardui. I had suffered with bad cramping spells, pains in my back, sides and arms, and awful bearing-down pains. Now these pains have all gone, as a result of using Cardui."

PYTHIANS' MEET AT COUNTY SEAT

The 1st district convention of Pythians' met at Auburn, Wednesday, April 28, 1909. The morning session consisted of reception of delegates and visitors, and at 12 o'clock Red Cross Temple No 47, of Auburn, served a bounteous chicken dinner in their dining room.

The secret session began at 1:30, with D D G C. Mrs Dot B. Luckey in the chair. Mrs. Mary Beidler gave the address of welcome, which was responded to by Lina Jacob Williams of No 36

Twenty-five temples responded to roll call with good reports. Angola reported a loss by fire. A collection was taken for benefit of said temple, which amounted to eleven dollars.

Mrs Kate Kuhns, of No 107, read a very interesting paper on "True Sisterhood." After business the public session opened with "America." Prayer by Rev. Elliott. Piano solo by Mrs. Fell. Reading by Miss Rood, of Goshen, which received loud applause. Dr. Nusbaum gave a grand talk on "Pythianism," followed by a solo by Miss Geraldine Nusbaum. The trio by Auburn ladies was highly appreciated. Miss Thelma Grover gave a pleasing reading. The grand chief, Mrs Luna King, of Red Key, gave a splendid address which was instructive and impressive.

This closed the afternoon session when all were invited to the Presbyterian church parlors to partake of a fine supper served by the church ladies.

The evening session opened at 7:15, in form by Red Cross Temple, who very beautifully exemplified the initiatory work.

Kendallville team of sixteen, with Mrs. Frank Lyle as their captain, gave a fancy drill which brought forth commendation. Genevieve Butler, of Angola, rendered a pleasing solo. A few talks on "How Can We Improve Our Temples," by the M. E. C.'s was interesting, and the fact was brought out that more careful study of law and rituals would improve all temples and the grand chief would have less questions in the query box.

Letters were read from Carrie M. Fanning, past grand chief, and M. Josie Nelson, G M. of R. and C., regretting their inability to attend said convention.

Red Cross Temple did herself proud in the royal manner in which she entertained the Sisters, numbering in all two hundred thirty-four.

Butler extended an invitation for the meeting next year which was accepted.

About twenty Butler people attended this convention and report a royal good time.

CHAIRMAN PRESS COM.

Use Butler flour.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Fales, residing on a farm at Solo, were driving home from this place when their horse was frightened at a camp fire near the road and became unmanageable, throwing the occupants from the rig. They were taken to their home by the campers and neighbors. Mr. Fales is badly bruised, but Mrs. Fales lies in a critical condition. Dr. Hull, of Hicksville, is the attending physician.

John Tustison and Frank Scholes, of St Joe, were callers at this place Monday.

Mike Porter and grandson came over from Auburn Sunday and spent the day with Geo. Engles'.

The last examination for township graduates will be held at Coburntown May 15.

Arthur Gillingham is home from Iowa.

Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Stackhouse and baby, of Coburntown, Sundayed with Mr. and Mrs. Henry Shaffer.

The U. B. aid meets with Mrs. Chas. Thorpe the 14th.

Mrs. Geo. Engle is on the sick list.

Miss Belle Blair left for Angola, Tuesday, to be gone a few weeks.

Word was received here of the death of Harold Chapman in South Dakota. Mrs. C. was here in the winter with her little son for treatment. Mr. and Mrs. Chapman are well known here and they have the sympathy of their friends.

Geo. Oberlin came near having a destructable fire last Friday. The brooder which was up stairs caught on fire and was discovered in time by Mrs. Oberlin to prevent much damage. Nine little chickens lost their lives and a carpet was badly burned.

Jesse A. Baldwin, 16 years of age, of Fort Wayne, met instant death in falling from a Baltimore & Ohio train one mile west of Hicksville, O., some time during Sunday night. His lifeless body, badly mangled, was found along the railroad tracks at 5 o'clock Monday, by the crew of passenger train No. 4. When it was noticed the train was stopped, the body placed abroad and taken to Hicksville, where it was turned over to Dr. H. W. Cook, coroner of Defiance county. Later it was placed in charge of Undertaker C. W. Miller, at Hicksville.

At a meeting of the Fair board held Saturday afternoon, A. L. Ridenour, T. T. Armstrong, B. P. Dorsey, Alex McConkey and Dr. Scudder Hull resigned from the board. E. J. Pugh, Earl C. Bear, Alex McConkey, B. P. Dorsley and Dr. Scudder Hull were elected to fill the vacancies. The new board with the hold over members will organize in a few days. A resolution was passed calling a meeting of the stockholders, June 7, to amend the constitution so as to enable the stockholders to lease the grounds to the Defiance county fair.—Hicksville Review.

THE INDIAN OPERA WAS GRAND SUCCESS

Monday night Thompson's opera house was well filled with an audience that fully appreciated the splendid work done on the stage by local talent. Seldom, if ever, have we seen a larger or more enthusiastic crowd, and with but few exceptions has a better entertainment been given by either foreign or home talent.

Many were present who expected to see a production of no consequence, but from the first to last curtain all were delighted with the clever acting and excellent singing, both in chorus and solo work.

Mr. Wm. A. Baker, of Chicago, acted as instructor, and his splendid ability was clearly shown in the results effected on Monday night.

The Indian opera "Powhatan," is a spicy and realistic comedy, filled with catchy songs, drills and dances that were executed very artistically.

Miss Ethel Nimmons presided at the piano and added greatly to the success of the performance by her proficiency and skill.

Space forbids a detailed mention of the entertainment, but it would not be just should we fail to make special comment on the dances by the American beauties, Indian sprites and pappooses. The little folks did themselves proud, and the adults acquitted themselves in a delightful manner.

The play was given for the benefit of the Pythian Sisters, and their share of the receipts will swell their treasury considerably.

Mrs. Stage's orchestra rendered several fine selections.

ODD FELLOWSHIP IN FINE CONDITION

The yearly report of the financial condition of the grand and subordinate Odd Fellows lodges of Indiana has just been completed and made public. The report covers the year, 1908. It shows a membership at the beginning of that year of 74,919. At the end of the year the paid-up membership was 76,326, a net gain of 1,407. A total of 10,004 were relieved. This does not include 337 widows' families relieved nor 808 members buried. The total sum expended for relief of members, widows, orphans and the burial of the dead was $313,133. The total receipts for dues, admissions and degrees and invested funds and receipts from other sources were $729,290 91. The invested funds of subordinate lodges is given as $3,484,751.02. The invested funds of the grand lodge are given as $470,573 01. The grand lodge expense for the year was $34,819. The subordinate lodges expense was $178,529 89.

Notice

Having purchased the C. A. Newman property on West Oak street, which has been occupied by J. O. Gee, I will after May 10, 1909, move my office in that building in connection with my residence. This will give me a better chance to give the public prompt service at all hours.

Thanking those who have been my patrons in the past and soliciting a portion of the public's patronage in my new quarters in the future, I remain

Yours truly.

SHE MAKES A VIGOROUS PROTEST

Monday we received a communication from some lady who is too modest to sign her name to her letter. She takes exceptions to Rev Albertson's request last Sunday to the ladies to remove their hats, and she goes into the subject in a very vigorous manner. It is not our rule to publish anonymous communications, but we make exception in this case on account of the peculiar attitude of the lady in question. The fact that many women wear such enormous hats as to obstruct the view of those sitting behind them is certainly grounds for the request that their hats be removed during church service. As a way of illustration we would ask, what would the ladies think and say if men came to church decked out in the flaming headgear of the wild and untutored savage with great feathers protruding from their top pieces? Wouldn't it be just as sensible as some of the styles adopted by many of our Butler sisters? Wouldn't the sight be just as inspiring? We respect Rev. Albertson for his courage, because it takes a lot of it to make such a demand as he did last Sunday. In the cities and in many of our neighboring towns the rule to remove ladies hats during church service is rigidly enforced and it should be in Butler. While we believe our communicant wrongly interprets the meaning of the words she selects from Holy Writ, still if she is right in her quotation, we don't believe the Lord would frown upon the request of a preacher when it is made for such a splendid purpose. The letter is as follows:

Butler, Ind., May 3, 1909.

EDITOR HERALD—I read in your last week's paper that some of the brethren of the Methodist church requested the ladies to remove their hats. I wonder if they don't know that somewhere within the lids of the Bible "that a woman dishonoreth her head by uncovering it," I believe is the way it reads, at least that is what it means. I do not believe a lady should wear so large a hat as to cause inconvenience in a church; neither do I believe a lady should remove her hat in church. I know I am one who will stay away from church before I will do so. Wonder what the brethren would think if they would be requested to sit in church with their hats on. Such a request is no more out of place than the one they have made. Hope they will consider this matter and not stay away from the place of worship on account of the ladies' hats.

Indiana Pythians

Despite the depression in commercial life during the year, the report of the Grand Lodge Knights of Pythias of Indiana to the supreme lodge for the year 1908 shows that the Pythian lodges in Indiana have been prosperous. In a letter to Harry Wade, grand keeper of records and seal, R. L. C. White, of Nashville, Tenn., supreme Keeper of records and seal, says:

"It may interest you to know that the reports from the grand domains show that Indiana has the largest net gain of membership in the supreme domain for the year 1908."

Indiana's report to the supreme lodge December 31, 1908, showed the following: Number of members, 62,818; number of lodges, 491; receipts during the year, $697,374.75; expended for relief, $171,374.02; cash on hand, $1,721,845.14; total assets $2,892,060 51.

NEW COMPANY TAKES POSSESSION

Last week a deal was made whereby a mercantile company to be known as the W. R. Holden Co. came into possession of the F. L. Farnsworth dry goods, clothing and shoe store.

Mr. W. R. Holden, one of the most enterprising business men of this section is at the head of the concern, and the energetic manner in which he usually handles things is evidence that a largely increased patronage to the store will be the result of his management.

A large and splendid stock of goods will be kept constantly on hand, and it is the intention of the management to so price their goods that the public will be attracted to their establishment.

Mr. Farnsworth leaves this place for Fremont, Indiana, where he has an interest in a dry goods store.

We extend best wishes both to the retiring and present owners with the hope that their enterprises may be successful to a large degree.

FEATURES OF INTEREST

ABOUT THAT WHICH HAS BEEN AND IS TO BE.

All Sides and Conditions of Things are Shown. Nothing Overlooked to make it Complete.

Three Lake Vessels Go to the Bottom.

Three vessels lost, one of them with her crew of seven men, and a fourth craft found floating deserted on Lake Michigan, with the fate of her crew unknown, is the summary of the disaster from storm and ice on the great lakes. On the bleak and rocky points of Huron island the schooner George Nestor, of Detroit, was torn to pieces by the furious gale and all of her crew of seven were lost. On Lake Huron the packet freighter Russia, of Port Huron, succumbed to the waves after her cargo had shifted and went to the bottom. The Russia's crew of twenty-two men, however, escaped in small boats. On Lake Michigan the Ann Arbor railway car ferry No. 1 picked up nineteen miles south of Fox island the big steel lighter Batavia, deserted by her crew and with no positive evidence as to whether they perished or were taken off the lighter by the steamer which is believed to have been towing her. To these fresh stories of marine disaster was added from Saut Ste. Marie with the arrival there of the crew of the steamer Aurania the first story of how she was crushed by the ice and sank, and how the members of the crew made a perilous way over nearly four miles of ice floes to the steamer J. H. Bartow.

Straus and Rockhill Appointed.

A dispatch from Washington, D. C., says: Oscar S. Straus, former secretary of commerce and labor, has been selected for ambassador to Turkey, and W. W. Rockhill for ambassador to Russia. Mr. Rockhill was formerly assistant secretary of state and later minister to China. Mr. Straus telegraphed from New York his acceptance of the mission to Turkey to Secretary Knox. It is not known at the state department when he will take up his diplomatic duties. Mr. Rockhill is a native of Pennsylvania. He will remain at Pekin for a time, the president not yet having determined on his successor.

Four Ohio Men Drowned in Flood.

Swollen by floods resulting from rains the past seven days, the Tuscarawas river claimed four men as victims. Two others almost dead from exhaustion were rescued as they were sinking in the swirling waters for the third time. The six men comprised a pelasure party which set out in a motor boat for a trip on the river near Coshocton, Ohio. By some accident the boat was capsized and the four victims went down to rise no more.

Entire Wabash Train Leaves Track.

One hundred passengers on a Wabash railway east bound limited express, had a narrow escape from death when the entire train jumped the track at Eden, O., near Montpelier. All of the cars left the track and went into the ditch after running along the roadbed for about 1000 feet. Some of the cars were overturned but only one passenger, N. Burgess, of New York, was injured, beyond slight bruises.

Blows Himself to Bits.

A dynamite bomb was the means employed by Carson Martin, a farmer, forty-five years old, living in Belle River south of Mount Vernon, Ill., to commit suicide. Mr. Martin took the explosive to an out building early in the morning. The structure was blown to bits and his body was scattered over the premises.

TWO DIE IN BIG FIRE; LOSS OF $1,000,000

Elevator "B" of Illinois Central in South Water Street, Chicago, Burns.

FIGHT ON BLAZE IS STRENUOUS

Striking of Structure by Lightning Followed by Terrific Explosion, Then Fall of Wall.

Two firemen were killed, eleven persons injured and a loss of $1,000,000 caused early Thursday by the fire that destroyed Illinois Central elevator B, foot of South Water street, Chicago. A cordon of firemen narrowly escaped being caught beneath falling walls, while dozens of others were overcome by the heat and smoke.

Lightning is believed to have caused the blaze which was blown cityward by a heavy wind from the lake, when the flames burst through the roof and the gale sent thousands of burning embers and sparks flying over the loop district, imperiling big business houses.

Within an hour the huge elevator was a mass of fire and looked like an immense oven, as the sheet iron became redhot and the walls began to tumble.

So intense was the heat that firemen were constantly overcome, and one after another fell at their posts of duty. It was seen to be impossible to save the burning structure. Consequently the firemen's main fight was to prevent a spread of the flames to nearby property.

Firemen Cooper and McElligott met death in the collapse of the south wall. They were leading the battle at that point, when somebody shouted a warning. A rush for safety was made by the firemen, but Cooper and McElligott were too close to the building to escape being caught. Both were buried beneath tons of brick and burning beams.

Several other firemen who narrowly escaped a similar fate were seriously injured, being struck by flying bricks.

The elevator stood between two river slips and contained 491,000 bushels of wheat and about the same amount of corn. It was one of the largest in the city and was surrounded by big business houses. It was nearly 100 feet high and about 350 feet long.

For a time the flames threatened to destroy the Illinois Central docks, the Goodrich docks, the Wisconsin Central freight house and other huge buildings. The two freight houses caught fire more than a dozen times, but hard work by the firemen prevented their destruction.

8 DIE IN "BLACK HAND" BLAZE

Children Among Fire Victims in Crowded New York Tenement.

Eight persons, five of them children, were burned to death and fourteen others were injured, some of them fatally, in an incendiary fire in a five-story tenement at 37 Spring street, New York, occupied by twenty Italian families, early Friday. The blaze followed a demand by members of a so-called "black hand" society for the payment of $1,000 blackmail. It spread through the building iwth startling rapidity, as the hallways were soaked with kerosene oil by the blackmailers. In a panic which followed the alarm the tenants fought their way down the fire escapes or jumped from the windows, while babies were thrown from windows into the arms of policemen on the sidewalk. Six injured, three of whom are children, are not expected to recover. Jacob Bruck, the proprietor of a grocery store on the mail floor of the building, received on April 18 a letter reading: "We demand $1,000 or death. Bring it in Mott street. Petrosino is dead but the black hand lives.—Black Hand Society." On Monday last Bruck received another letter written in a similar strain. He turned both letters over to the police.

RICH GIRL ON TRIAL FOR LIFE.

Faces Jury to Answer Charge of Slaying Sister's Sweetheart.

"Johnny" Davidson, a wealthy young woman, who killed Roy Ramsour in Neosho, Mo., on June 6, 1908, following a quarrel at the Davidson home, in which it is alleged Ramsour applied an epithet to the girl, is on trial there. Miss Davidson's plea is self-defense. Ramsour was a suitor for the hand of Miss Grace Davidson, the defendant's sister. A few days before the murder the two had quarreled. Ramsour used improper language toward Miss "Johnny" Davidson, and when he refused to retract she killed him with a revolver.

HELD AS SLAYER OF GIRLS.

Man Said to Have Admitted Crime—Arrest May Clear Many Crimes.

Elmer Carr, declared to be the murderer of Mary Forschner and Lizzie Fulhart, has been placed under arrest in Dayton, Ohio, at the instance of H. H. Hollenbeck, assistant State fire marshal, and Bert Hullinger, a deputy fire marshal.

So strong is the web of evidence in which both Houlenbeck and Hullinger believe they have inwined Carr that Hollenbeck was given instructions to proceed to Dayton and file affidavits against Carr for murder and arson.

This arrest, while having no direct connection with the Dona Gilman crime, it is firmly believed by the authorities, who have been ceaselessly working on the murders of young girls in Dayton, that Carr may be able to explain how Dona Gilman was killed.

Mrs. Carrie Middlestetter was being examined by officers of the Fire Marshal's office relative to the destruction of a house belonging to a relative of hers, and during her testimony she said that Carr had confessed to her that he had killed Elizabeth Fulhart. Mary Forschner's body was discovered by her stepfather on Jan. 23 in North Dayton. One arrest followed another, but nothing came of them. On Feb. 5, or about two weeks later, the body of Elizabeth Fulhart was found in a cistern in the rear of a house on West Jefferson street, Dayton.

Again many arrests took place, but no prosecutions were instituted because of the inability of the police to get the proper evidence.

Recently a fire destroyed a house belonging to Joseph Voges, a relative of Mrs. Middlestetter, near Dayton, and the inquiry held adduced the following testimony: That Carr had brought the Fulhart girl to a room in Mrs. Middlestetter's house. The following Sunday the same program was carried out, but that was the last seen of her. The dress which she wore that day, as described by the Middlestetter woman, and the dress which she wore when her body was recovered are identical.

The next Monday, Mrs. Middlestetter says, Carr confidentially asked her if she had seen anything in the newspapers regarding the disappearance of any young girl. She replied that she had not. "Well, you will," he is said to have replied, according to her testimony. On the following Friday the discovery was made, and although she was taken before the court during the Coroner's inquest, Mrs. Middlestetter states that she did not dare to tell what she knew of the case through fear of Carr. Carr was arrested and held as a suspect, but later released because of lack of evidence. Carr is said to have known Dona Gilman, who was also slain.

NATIONAL DEBT IS GROWING.

Expenditures for Month of April $3,000,000 Larger than Receipts.

The monthly statement of the public debt shows that at the close of business April 30 the debt, less cash in the treasury, amounted to $1,025,983,825, which is an increase for the month of $3,207,303. The total cash in the treasury is $1,725,479,434, against which there are demand liabilities outstanding amounting to $1,448,045,599, which leaves a cash balance on hand of $277,433,835. The government receipts for April were $52,075,974 and expenditures $55,650,620.

The monthly coinage statement shows the total coinage executed during April agregates $31,851,614, of which $30,641,000 was gold, $1,172,00 silver and $38,614 minor coins. The monthly circulation statement shows national bank notes outstanding $687,648,227, a decrease for the year of $10,237,471 and an increase for the month of $3,001,612.

Laundress Leaves $20,000 Cash.

MEHEMMED RECHED EFFENDI.

Rechad is 65 years old, and next to the deposed sultan, is the oldest male descendant of the house of Othman, the founder of the dynasty. He is the twenty-ninth sultan to take the throne since the conquest of Constantinople in 1451.

Abdul's nephew, Yussef Izzedin, was preferred by many as his successor, but his selection would have violated the Turkish law that the succession shall go to the oldest male descendant of Othman. Otherwise, Yussef would have been chosen, as Rechad is considered a man of weak qualities.

Rechad has had no experience in governmental affairs. For twenty-five years he has been almost a prisoner in the Yildiz Kiosk. It is conceded that he will do whatever the Young Turks demand, as he is lacking in the craftiness and initiative of Abdul.

ODDS & ENDS OF SPORT

On a wager of $500 Charles Lambie, St. Paul, agreed to walk to Seattle, 1,912 miles, in ninety days.

"Eddie" Dugan, the jockey, is back in New York after having failed to procure in England a jockey's license.

The French Prix de Palaisan was won by W. K. Vanderbilt's Northeast. Nash Turner's Pillard was second.

At Leicester, Eng., the Gadby 2-year-old plate of 103 sovereigns, distance five furlongs, was won by Midhurst.

For the seventeen minutes tussling it took Frank Gotch to upset Mahmout, the terrible Turk, twice, the champion received a total of $14,088.05.

George Demsey, of Columbus, was given the decision over Hugh McMahon of St. Paul in a six-round boxing contest. The contest took place at Columbus.

At Nottingham, England, the Littlejohn plate of 200 sovereigns for 2-year-olds, distance four furlongs, was won by H. P. Whitney's Oversight, ridden by J. H. Martin.

As a result of the efforts of a number of prominent Yale and Princeton alumni it appears probable that the 'varsity crews of these two universities will meet in a dual regatta on Carnegie Lake.

Another runner looking for Marathon honors, with the hope of a contest with St. Yves, Dorando or Longboat, has arrived in New York. He is "Indian" Simpson, who has been winning laurels in Canada.

Charley Comiskey announced that he had chosen Catcher Billy Sullivan as manager for the White Sox this season, to succeed Fielder Jones. This action was generally expected and was what Chicago fans wanted.

In a battle at Savannah, Ga., Jimmie Dasher, of Savannah, received credit for a knockout over Owie Liss, of Brooklyn, in the seventh round of a scheduled fifteen-round engagement.

Mack Catlin, coach of the Iowa University track team, has notified the men that any violation of diet or other training rules will be followed by expulsion of the offender from the team.

The failure of the New York Jockey Club stewards to provide any dates for the Brighton Beach Racing Association has brought forth a protest which may develop into a skirmish before the State racing commission.

GIRL SLAIN AT COLLEGE.

Youth Shoots Senior on Campus and Ends Own Life.

Porter Macdougal Smith of Chicago, traveling representative of the R. P. Smith Sons Company of Chicago, wholesale shoe dealers, shot and fatally wounded Miss Helen Ayer Marden, a senior in Smith College, Northampton, Mass., who had broken her engagement with him, and then committed suicide by turning the revolver upon himself. Miss Marden died a few hours later. She was a daughter of Frank Marden, of Somerville, Mass.

Smith, who was about 25 years old, was graduated from Dartmouth College a year ago last June. He had since been traveling for the company of which his uncle, Edward E. Smith, of Chicago, is president. For several days prior to the shooting he had been in Northampton trying to renew the engagement. Miss Marden evaded him and sent him word that his attentions must cease. He persistently followed her, and she apparently was afraid of him, for she kept away from chapel exercises, at which Smith was accustomed to meet and speak to her. At Thursday morning's chapel Smith was seen at his usual post, and when Miss Marden did not appear he started in the direction of her dormitory. Before he reached the dormitory the girl came out and they met.

No one was near enough to hear what words passed between the two, but a second or two after the meeting Smith was seen to draw a revolver and fire three shots at Miss Marden. She fell, and he then sent a bullet into his brain that caused his death before a number of workmen on the campus could reach his side. Miss Marden was taken to Dickinson Hospital, where she died shortly before noon. Two bullets entered her back near the neck and a third entered her head.

ROOSEVELT PARTY GETS LIONS.

Three Killed by One Shot Apiece by Ex-President.

Four lions are trophies of Theodore Roosevelt's camp in the Mau Hills near Nairobi, British East Africa, and the two hundred or more native followers joined with the American party in the celebration of the unusually good luck.

The lions were bagged Friday, and Mr. Roosevelt's mighty gun brought three of them to earth, each on the first shot. Thus one of the former President's fondest ambitions has been realized, and he is proud, too, that the fourth of the jungle kings fell before the rifle of his son Kermit, who, however, took three shots to kill his quarry. Both father and son are jubilant. It was their first lion hunt and so magnificent a kill was far beyond their expectations, but lions have been plentiful in the hills for the last month, and the English hunter, F. C. Selous, has been out for several days laying plans for their extinction.

Mr. Selous accompanied the former President, who also was attended by the usual retinue of beaters. As a rule the beaters go into the jungle with considerable trepidation, but as Mr. Roosevelt' reputation as a hunter had reached there long before he arrived in person the beaters on this occasion were exceptionally enthusiastic. They seemed ever eager to play a part in the first hunt of the distinguished American.

Raises Fares in Missouri.

The St. Louis and San Francisco Railway management gave instructions to its agents to put in effect May 1 the 2½-cent rate basis for passenger fares in Missouri and Arkansas, with 3 cents for fares paid on trains. This will be the maximum and minimum basis.

Auto Kills Policeman's Son.

Thomas Flynn, 8 years old, son of Edward Flynn, a special policeman on duty at the 72d street station of the subway in New York, was run over and instantly killed by an automobile owned by Le Roy W. Baldwin, president of the Empire Trust Company.

Elevator in Buffalo Is Burned.

The elevator of the Husted Milling and Elevator Company, in Tronatt street, Buffalo, was destroyed by fire, together with 200,000 bushels of grain. The loss is estimated at $300,000, with insurance covering the amount.

Work of Congress

Denouncing the principle of a protective tariff as unfair in taking money from one man to give it to another in order to encourage him in the pursuit of an otherwise unprofitable business, Senator Bailey of Texas Monday delivered a set speech on the Democratic side in opposition to the pending tariff bill. Referring to Mr. Bailey's statement that the duties of the pending bill might be lowered 33 1-3 per cent, Mr. Aldrich asked whether he supposed the profits to American industries equaled that amount. Mr. Bailey replied that in the case of the United States Steel Corporation he believed they had, and he cited the increased capitalization of that organization as an evidence of enormous profit. Mr. Bailey discussed his amendment providing for an income tax, which was criticised by Mr. Aldrich as tending to reduce the protection that would be given American labor if it should result in a proportionate decrease of customs duties. Mr. Bailey favored restriction of immigration as a protection to American labor. Mr. Aldrich retorted that, while Mr. Bailey was ready to keep the foreign laborer from our shores, he was not averse to allowing the product of this cheap labor to come in competition with the product of American workingmen. Only a brief session of the House was held and an adjournment until Thursday was taken.

-:—:-

As the last half of his two-day speech Senator Bailey devoted nearly three hours in the Senate Tuesday to a discussion of the legal aspects of his income tax amendment to the tariff bill, citing numerous cases and authorities to maintain the view that such a law would be constitutional. He was interrupted frequently by Senators, who at times offered objections to his position or suggested authorities to sustain him. Mr. Scott spoke upon the tariff with especial reference to its effect upon the South and especially upon his own State of West Virginia. Mr. Gore of Oklahoma spoke in denunciation of the protective tariff. The house was not in session.

-:—:-

An exhaustive treatment of the lumber schedule of the tariff bill by Mr. Simmons of North Carolina was the feature of the session of the Senate Wednesday. Mr. Simmons spoke for three and a half hours in support of the retention of the present tariff, which, he maintained, was but a revenue rate. Several times the national Democratic platform of 1908, which declared for free lumber, was injected into the discussion by Republican Senators, and Mr. Bacon of Georgia remarked that he was not bound by declarations written into a platform at midnight by a few interested men. Burkett of Nebraska, whose home city is Lincoln, sought to state when and where the Democratic platform actually was drawn, but Mr. Simmons refused to yield time to prolong that discussion. Mr. Brown of Nebraska advocated a constitutional amendment for the collection of an income tax, thereby placing it beyond the power of the courts to further hold that such a tax was not constitutional. The House was not in session.

-:—:-

The entire time of the Senate was again Thursday given to the general discussion of the tariff bill. Senator Rayner of Maryland led off with a general denunciation of the protective system of the Republican party, and was followed by Senator Nelson of Minnesota, who made an earnest plea for the admission of lumber free of duty. His assertions aroused a general discussion, which was participated in by Senators Hale, Warren, Carter, Clapp, McLaurin, McCumber, Elkins, Aldrich and Gallinger. In an eleven-minute session the House did not take up any of the important business which will have to be considered this session. Mr. Wanger (Pa.) endeavored to obtain the adoption of a resolution of good will and friendliness for the people of Turkey and the new sovereign, but as Mr. Macon (Ark.) objected the matter went over. At 12:11 p. m. the House adjourned to meet again at noon on Monday.

-:—:-

An extended speech by Senator McCumber favoring free lumber occupied several hours in the Senate Friday. His remarks provoked an extended controversy among advocates of a tariff on lumber. Mr. McCumber said while he was a thorough protectionist, he would not agree to a tariff on products such as coal, iron ore, lumber and oil, that are being exhausted and cannot be replaced. Senator Aldrich reported from the committee on finance additional amendments to the tariff bill and the Senate adopted a motion made by him that until further notice the Senate shall meet at 11 o'clock daily. At 6:05 the Senate adjourned until 11 o'clock Monday. The House was not in session.

SHORT NEWS NOTES.

Delight and Morjarie Loos, sisters, 10 and 8 years old respectively, who disappeared from the home of their uncle in Toledo, Ohio, were found last evening at Haskins, Ohio, in custody of their mother.

Anna A. Mangano, a public school teacher, was shot in the head and killed while on her way to her school in 103d street, New York. A man, who is alleged to have shot her, was arrested as he was about to turn the weapon on himself.

The government has taken steps to stop the waste of fuel resources by testing the coals of the Rocky Mountain region at the geological survey's plant in Denver, Col.

The business section of Clayton, N. Y., on the St. Lawrence River, was destroyed by fire. The flames spread so rapidly merchants and residents were unable to save anything. Loss $100,000.

Mr. Meyer, Secretary of the Navy, has directed that one of the torpedo-boat destroyers recently autnorized by Congress shall be given the name of Monaghan, in memory of Ensign John Robert Monaghan, United States navy, who was killed in Samoa, April 1, 1890, by natives.

LIVES SNUFFED OUT BY STORM IN SOUTH

Nearly Thirty Persons Are Reported Killed and Many Injured in Three States.

ONE TOWN IS BLOWN AWAY

Lake Steamer Lost in Hurricane on Whitefish Bay—Blizzard Conditions in Northwest.

Between twenty and thirty persons are dead in Tennessee, Mississippi and Arkansas, and scores of injured were the total Thursday night of a series of tornadoes in those States. The storms which wrought this havoc appear to have been little outriders of the big disturbances which simultaneously were sweeping through the North.

Although more fatal to life than the Northern storm, these Southern tornadoes each covered only a small area of a few acres or a few square miles. They struck at widely scattered points at intervals.

The death list as received was as follows: Youngs Crossing, Tenn., five; Medina, Tenn., two; Horn Lake, Miss., twelve; Forest City, Ark., two; West Marion, Ark., one.

During the night telegraph wires went down all over the South, with the exception of the South Atlantic States. On both sides of the Mississippi, for hundreds of miles, it was a gusty night, with here and there a puff of wind which knocked trees over, and which isolated many sections of the South for hours.

Memphis, Tenn., was the center of a storm that destroyed plantation buildings, caused loss of life and injury, and made useless many telephone and telegraph wires.

Near West Marion, Ark., the storm demolished twenty-four houses. Miss Nancy Young was killed and four persons were injured. Near Wheatley, Ark., a negro was killed. Near Horn Lake, Miss., plantation cabins were wrecked and twelve negroes killed.

At Raleigh, Tenn., a score of buildings were blown down and trees uprooted. Locke, Tenn., a village 18 miles from Memphis, was practically obliterated and a number of persons injured. At Youngs Crossing, near Jackson, Tenn., five persons were killed and many injured. In the vicinity of Medina, Tenn., two were killed. The wind cut a path half a mile wide through the towns of West Marion and Weakley and vicinity.

In Northern Arkansas, a dispatch from Fort Smith says, ninety persons were injured. At Plum Point a dozen houses were wrecked and one person was killed. Near Jackson, Tenn., seven persons were killed and others injured. At Medina three houses were wrecked.

Four persons were killed, at least twelve injured, and great damage done by a tornado in Golden, Mo. The town was destroyed, every building being razed.

It is the general opinion that it was the Corrigan line steamer Aurania which Capt. Boyce of the Peavey saw sink in Whitefish Bay. A furious storm raged over the upper lake region. Capt. Robert C. Pringle of Cleveland and a crew of twenty men were in charge of the Aurania when it left Buffalo for Lake Superior with coal.

A terrific wind and rain storm struck Chicago early Thurhday evening and left death and destruction in its wake. One man was killed outright, one fell dead from heart disease during the tumult, and nearly fifty were injured, some probably fatally. Twenty-five houses were blown down, many more unroofed, several set afire, and more than fifty families rendered homeless.

The extreme south end of the city was cut off from street car service and thrown into darkness by the destruction of electric light wires. A deluge of rain accompanied the wind, and west of the city hundreds of acres were flooded. Two inches of rain fell during the day and the evening. Telegraph and telephone wires were down in nearly every direction. A tidal wave in Lake Michigan did great damage in Waukegan and Kenosha.

FATHER AND SON INDICTED.

Brokerage Firm Accused of Embezzling Railroad Bonds.

W. J. Hayes and his son, Harry E. Hayes, of the firm of W. J. Hayes & Son, Cleveland bond brokers, were indicted by the county grand jury on the charge of embezzling $227,000 worth of bonds of the Cincinnati, Bluffton and Chicago Railway Company. It is alleged that the father and son, to whom $500,000 worth of bonds were intrusted for sale, converted the $198,000 worth to their own use. The son was arrested immediately and released on bond. His father is out of the city.

BEACH HARGIS FOUND GUILTY.

Youth Who Shot Father Convicted of Murder Charge.

In Irvine, Ky., the jury in the case of Beach Hargis, who was tried on a charge of killing his father, Judge James Hargis, returned a verdict of guilty, and he was sentenced to life imprisonment. This was the second trial of Hargis, the first having resulted in a mistrial. The murder of Judge Hargis by his son Beach occurred in the father's store at Jackson, Breathitt County, on Feb. 6, 1908.

TORNADO KILLS ONE IN KANSAS.

Wrecks Many Houses in Douglas and Adjoining Towns.

One person was killed and ten injured by a tornado which wrecked a large portion of Douglas, Kan., Wednesday evening. The storm spread over a wide area, doing much damage to farm property. At Udall the storm, accompanied by hail, did much damage. Between Rose Hill and Douglas many houses were blown down. Three school buildings were completely wrecked. At Rock, south of Douglas, a store building was wrecked and one man injured.

COMMERCIAL AND FINANCIAL

CHICAGO.

While the stormy weather interfered with transportation and outdoor work, the course of trade shows steady progress. Aside from the commercial barometer and other favorable signs of returning activity the financial statistics furnish a healthy exhibit. April bank clearings testify to the increasing use of money. Aggregate discounts are seen to be well above the previous showing, and the decrease in gross deposits is largely due to withdrawals for investment and new enterprise.

Conditions in agriculture from now on will enter largely into calculations for the future. Reports show that farm work has become widely extended, and, while some fields are being plowed over, the actual acreage is much greater than at this time last year, especially for spring wheat and corn.

Manufacturing slowly reduces the idle capacity and another blast furnace resumed operations. Pig iron tonnages enter more frequently into third-quarter deliveries, while specifications for rails and structural steel add to the pressure at the mills.

Preparations are made for a larger movement of iron ore, coal and lumber. Receipts of the raw materials for factory consumption run in excess of those reported earlier this year. Heavy contracts impend for railway equipment, and the buying is good for structural forms, plates, wire and finished shapes. Metal values reflect no special change, but there is firmness in furnace product, hides, leather and hard woods.

Wholesale merchandise markets find the demand equaling expectations, and some increase is noted in mail orders for fall goods. Leading retail trade here and at the interior would be better with higher temperatures.

Failures reported in Chicago district number 23, against 22 last week, 30 in 1908 and 15 in 1907. Those with liabilities over $5,000 number 7, against 8 last week, 9 in 1908 and 3 in 1907. —Dun's Weekly Review of Trade.

NEW YORK.

Summed up, the situation may be said to be a current trade, wholesale and retail better than last year, but disappointing as a whole, while the tone for the future is still quite markedly optimistic.

Reports from leading industries are rather better than for some time past. The business doing and the reports coming from the iron and steel trades are distinctly better. Low prices have evidently brought out slumbering orders and there is talk of the bottom having been touched and a new ascent begun. In the textile trades, quiet as to the present, but optimism as to the future is the rule.

Cotton goods still lead the rest of the market, but the strength of raw wool seems to point to confidence in finished lines. High prices are being paid in the West for the new wool clip, shearing of which is active. The leather trades are strong, sole leather being active and hides higher. Shoe orders are below normal, but improving.

Coal is in better demand, and the new agreement for three years in anthracite being signed, stability and peace are certain for a long period. Coke is still weak and low in price. Lumber is irregular, despite activity in building, and southern production is slackening. Naval stores are close to or below cost of production.

Business failures in the United States for the week ending with April 29 were 268, against 247 last week, 282 in this week last year, 163 in 1907, 139 in 1906 and 193 in 1905.

Failures in Canada for the week number 21, against 36 last week and 22 in the like week of 1908.—Bradstreet's.

A TALE OF A CARAVAN

By

CHAPTER XII.—(Continued.)

He had not gone far when he saw approaching him a tall figure which he seemed to recognize. It came closer, and he saw that it was Mr. Monk, of Monkshurst.

This time Monk was on foot. He wore a dark dress, with knickerbockers and heavy shooting boots, and carried a gun. A large dog, of the species lurcher, followed at his heels.

Brinkley was passing by without any salutation, when, to his surprise, the other paused and lifted his hat.

"I beg your pardon," he said. "We have met once before; and I think I have to apologize to you for unintentional incivility. The fact is—hum—I mistook you for a—vagrant! I did not know you were a gentleman."

So staggered was the artist with this greeting, that he could only borrow the vocabulary of Mr. Toots:

"Oh, it's of no consequence," he said, attempting to pass on.

But the other persevered.

"I assure you, Mr.—Mr.—(I have not the pleasure of knowing your name) that I had no desire of offending you; and if I did so, I beg to apologize."

Brinkley looked keenly at the speaker. His words and manner were greatly at variance with his looks—even with the tone of his voice. Though he smiled and showed his teeth, a dark frown still disfigured his brow, and his mouth twitched nervously as if he were ill at ease.

Regarding him thus closely, Brinkley saw that he had been somewhat mistaken as to his age. He was considerably under fifty years of age, but his hair was mixed with gray, and his features strongly marked as with scars of old passions. A handsome man, certainly; an amiable one, certainly not! Yet he had a peculiar air and power of breeding, as of one accustomed to command.

Curiosity overcame dislike, and the young man determined to receive Mr. Mon's overture as amiably as possible.

"I dare say it was a mistake," he said. "Gentlemen don't usually travel about in Caravans."

"You are an artist, I am informed," returned Monk.

"Something of that sort,' was the reply. "I paint a little for pleasure."

"And do you find this neighborhood suit your purpose? It is somewhat flat and unpicturesque."

"I rather like it," answered Brinkley. "It is pretty in summer; it must be splendid in winter, when the storms begin, and the uneventful career of our friend William Jones is varied by the excitement of wrecks."

How Monk's forehead darkened! But his face smiled still as he said:

"It is not often that shipwrecks occur now, I am glad to say."

"No," said Brinkley, dryly. "They used to be common enough fifteen years ago."

Their eyes met, and the eyes of Monk were full of fierce suspicion.

"Why fifteen years ago especially?"

The young man shrugged his shoulders.

"I was told only to-day of the loss of one great ship at that time. Matt told me, the little foundling. You know Matt, of course?"

"I know whom you mean. Excuse me, but you seem to be very familiar with her name?"

"I suppose I am," replied the young man. "Matt and I are excellent friends."

Monk did not smile now; all his efforts to do so were ineffectual. With an expression of savage dislike, he looked in Brinkley's face, and his voice, though his words were still civil, trembled and grew harsh "as scrannel pipes of straw."

"May I ask if you purpose remaining long in the neighborhood?"

"I don't know," answered the artist. "My time is my own, and I shall stay as long as the place amuses me."

"If I can assist in making it do so, I shall be happy, sir."

"Thank you."

"Do you care for rabbit shooting? If so, there is some sport to be had among the sand hills."

"I never shoot anything," was the reply, "except, I suppose, folly as it flies; though with what species of firearm that interesting sport is pursued," he added, as if to himself, "I haven't the slightest idea!"

"Well, good day," said Monk, with an uneasy scowl. "If I can be of any service to you, command me!"

And, raising his hat again, he stalked away.

"Now, what in the name of all that is wonderful, does Mr. Monk, of Monkshurst, mean by becoming so civil?"

This was the question the young man asked himself, as he strolled away seaward. He could not persuade himself that he had wronged Monk, who was in reality an amiable person, instead of a domineering bully; no, that suggestion was contradicted by every expression of the man's baleful and suspicious face. What, then, could be the explanation of his sudden attack of courtesy?

An idea! an inspiration? As it flashed into his mind, the young man gave vent to a prolonged whistle. Possibly, Monk was—jealous!

The idea was a preposterous one, and almost amusing. It was not to be conceived, on the first blush of it, that jealousy would make a surly man civil, a savage man gentle; it would rather have the contrary effect, unless—here Brinkley grew thoughtful—unless his gloomy rival had some sinister design which he wished to cloak with politeness.

But jealous of little Matt! Brinkley laughed heartily, when he fully realized the absurdity of the notion.

CHAPTER XIII.

Brinkley crossed the sand hills, and came again to the path which he and Matt had followed the previous day. A smart breeze was coming in from the sou'-west, and the air was fresh and cool, though sunny; but clouds were gathering to windward, and the weather was evidently broken. Reaching the cliffs, he descended them, and came down on the rocks beneath. A long jagged point ran out from the spot where he stood, and the water to leeward of the same was quite calm, though rising and falling in strong, troubled swells. So bright and tempting did it look in that sheltered place, that he determined to have a swim.

He stripped leisurely, and, placing his clothes in a safe place, took a header off the rocks. It was clear at once that he was a powerful swimmer. Breasting the smooth swell, he struck out from shore, and, when he had gone about a hundred yards, floated lazily on his back and surveyed the shore.

The cliffs were not very high, but their forms were finely picturesque. Here and there were still green creeks, fringed with purple weed; and large shadowy caves, hewed roughly in the side of the crags; and rocky islets, covered with slimy weed and awash with the lapping water. A little to the right of the spot from which he had dived, the cliff seemed hollowed out, forming a wide passage which the sea entered with a tramp and a rush and a roar.

Toward this passage Brinkley swam. He knew the danger of such places, for he had often explored them both in Cornwall and the west of Ireland; but he had confidence in his own natatory skill. Approaching the shore leisurely with strong, slow strokes, he paused outside the passage, and observed that the sea swell, entering the opening, rushed and quickened itself like a rapid shooting to the fall, turning at the base of the cliff into a cloud of thin prismatic spray. Suddenly, through the top of the spray, a cloud of rock pigeons emerged, winging their flight rapidly along the crags.

Brinkley knew by this last phenomenon that the spray concealed the entrance of some large subterranean cavern. If any doubt had remained on his mind, it would have been dispelled by the appearance of a solitary pigeon, which, leaving its companions, wavered lightly back, flew back through the spray with a rapid downward flight, and disappeared.

He was floating a little nearer, with an enjoyment deepened by the sense of danger, when a figure suddenly appeared on the rocks close by him, wildly waving its hands.

"Keep back! Keep back!" cried a voice.

He looked at the figure and recognized William Jones. He answered him, but the sound of his voice was drowned by the roar from the rocks. Then William Jones shouted again more indistinctly, and repeated his excited gestures. It was clear that he was warning the swimmer against some hidden danger. Brinkley took the warning, and struck out from the shore, and then back to the place where he had left his clothes.

Watching his opportunity, he found a suitable spot and clambered in upon the rocks. He had just dried himself and thrown on some of his clothes, when he saw William Jones standing near and watching him.

"How are you?" asked the young man, with a nod. "Pray, what did you mean by going on in that absurd way just now?"

"What did I mean?" repeated William, with a little of his former excitement. "Look ye, now, I was waving you back from the Devil's Caldron. There's many a man been drownded there, and been wash'd away Lord knows where. I've heerd tell," he added, solemnly, "they're carried right down into the Devil's own kitchen."

"I'm much obliged to you, Mr. Jones, but I'm used to such dangers, and I think I know how to take care of myself."

William Jones shook his head a little angrily.

"Don't you come here no more, that's all!" he said, and muttering ominously to himself, retired. But he only ascended the neighboring crag, and squatting himself there like a bird of ill-omen, kept his eyes on the stranger.

Having dressed himself, Brinkley climbed in the same direction. He found William seated on the edge of the crag, looking the reverse of amiable, and amusing himself by throwing stones in the direction of the sea.

"You seem to know this place well?" said the young man, standing over him.

William Jones replied, without looking up:

"I ought to; I were born here. Father were born here. Know it? I wish I know'd as well how to make my own fortin'."

"And yet they tell me," observed the other, watching him slyly, "that William Jones of Aberglyn has money in the bank, and is a rich man!"

He saw William's color change at once; but recovering himself at once, the worthy gave a contemptuous grunt, and aimed a stone spitefully at a large gull which just then floated slowly by.

"Who told you that?" he asked, glancing quickly up, and then looking down again. "Some tomfool, wi' no more sense in 'un than that gull. Rich? I wish I was, I do!"

Brinkley was amused, and a little curious. Laughing gayly, he threw himself down by William's side. William shifted his seat uneasily, and threw another stone.

"My dear Mr. Jones," said the young man, assuming the flippant style which Matt found so irritating, "I have often wondered how you get your living."

William started nervously.

"You are, I believe, a fisherman by profession; yet you never go fishing. You possess a boat; but you are seldom seen to use it. You are not, I think, of a poetical disposition; yet you spend your days in watching the water, like a poet, or a person in love. I conclude, very reluctantly, that your old habits stick to you, and that you speculate on the disasters of your fellow-creatures."

"What d'ye mean, master?" grunted William, puzzled and a little alarmed by this style of address.

"A nice wreck, now, would admirably suit your tastes? A well-laden Indiaman, smashing up on the reef yonder, would lend sunshine to your existence, and deepen your faith in a paternal Providence? Eh, Mr. Jones?"

"I don't know nowt about no wrecks," was the reply. "They're no consarn o' mine."

"Ah, but I have heard you lament the good old times, when wrecking was a respectable occupation, and when there were no impertinent coast guards to interfere with respectable followers of the business. By the way, I have often wondered, Mr. Jones, if popular report is true, and if, among these cliffs or the surrounding sand hills, there is buried treasure, cast up from time to time by the sea, and concealed by energetic persons like yourself?"

William Jones could stand this no longer. Looking as pale as it was possible for so rubicund a person to become, and glancing round him suspiciously, he rose to his feet.

"I know nowt o' that," he said. "If there is summat, I wish I could find it; but sech things never come the way of honest chaps like me. Good-mornin', master! Take a poor man's advice, and don't you go swimming no more near the Devil's Caldron!"

So saying, he walked off in the direction of the deserted village. Presently Brinkley rose and followed him, keeping him steadily in view. From time to time, William Jones looked round, as if to see whether the other was coming; lingering when Brinkley lingered, hastening his pace when Brinkley hastened his. As an experiment, Brinkley turned and began walking back toward the cliffs. Glancing round over his shoulder, he saw that William Jones had also turned, and was walking back.

"Curious!" he reflected. "The innocent one is keeping me in view. I have a good mind to breathe him!"

He struck off from the path, and hastened, running rather than walking, toward the sand hills. So soon as he was certain that he was followed, he began to run in good earnest. To his delight, William began running, too. He plunged among the sand hills, and was soon engaged busily running up and down them, hither and thither. From time to time he caught a glimpse of his pursuer. It was an exciting chase. When he had been engaged in it for half an hour, and was almost breathless himself, he suddenly paused in one of the deep hollows, threw himself down on his back. A few minutes afterward, he heard a sound as of violent puffing and breathing, and the next instant William Jones, panting, gasping, perspiring at every pore, appeared above him.

"How d'ye do, Mr. Jones?" he cried, gayly.

Instead of replying, William Jones looked completely thunderstruck, and after glaring feebly down and muttering incoherently, disappeared as suddenly as he had come. Brinkley then strolled back to the Caravan.

ARCHAEOLOGY IN ST. LOUIS.

Wonderful Articles Unearthed in Excavation for Public Library.

So many wonderful objects have been found in carrying on the excavation for the new public library that a stimulating inquisitiveness begins to pervade those of us who have followed the progress of the digging there, the St. Louis Globe-Democrat says. Besides great blocks of stone and underground walls of cement, which supported the old exposition building, a large brick conduit has been discovered which must have been in use half a century ago, before the sewers were lowered to properly accommodate a city where the buildings now extend several stories below the surface. The remains of the St. Louis ante-bellum times continue to crop out as the delving goes on. We are now looking for the hoopskirts of 1858, and the cove oyster cans of 1867. The work of the archaeologist at Pompeii and Mycenæ are no more interesting. Each layer of debris is of historical interest, and indicates as clearly as the "rings" in the trunk of a tree the exact time of its deposit.

The excavators are now close on the era of the ancient "amphora," or beer mug, with the reinforced bottom long since obsolete, by means of which the total amount of beverage was decreased to a slender amber thread, between the foam on the top and the false underpinning beneath. We refer to this vessel as an "amphora" because it is more classic. It differs from the Greek amphora, in that the ancient one had no bottom at all, while the Teuto-American one of the middle of the last century was all bottom. Among other relics of a former civilization—if we don't mind what we say—that have come to sight are a number of wire articles somewhat resembling small rat or mouse traps, semicylindrical in shape, which are incomprehensible to the workman. It was thought advisable at first to call in a number of learned men, such as Prof. W. J. McGee or Prof. Triggs, of Chicago, to identify these objects, but later they were declared by an elderly gentleman who refused to give his name as articles of feminine wear forty years ago—"busties," we believe he called them.

Other curios unearthed which will be classified and placed in the museum of the State Historical Society were a number of boots with long leather legs now practically unknown in this age, well preserved remains of a "whatnot," a piece of furniture that once stood in the corners of parlors, "charmstrings" of buttons, each button different from any other, the skeleton frame of a "melodeon," a queer combination of piano and "cottage" organ, known in America long years ago. The finding of these antiquities is convincing proof that the earlier races which inhabited St. Louis were people of taste and refinement, and were quite far advanced in the arts. They did not have phonographs and telephones or automobiles, it is true, but they had melodeons and cottage organs and velocipedes five feet high, which were nearly as bad.

The Wealth in Endeavor.

Was there ever a greater delusion than that of one who thinks his father's fortune a blessing, when he never earned a penny of it by his own effort? It is only a permium on laziness. It makes one's own development into manhood more unlikely. It furnishes him crutches, instead of teaching him to walk alone. It means the arrested development of his own powers for achievement, a paralysis of his own efforts.

The money we make in our vocation is a small part of the pay for the endeavor. The education we absorb in getting it, the disciplining of the mind by solving intricate problems, the constant exercise of the judgment in discriminating and weighing, the planning, the adjustment of means to ends is infinitely more important.

The world's great doers know very well that if you are not making a manly or a womanly struggle to establish a place for yourself, there is something wrong; either you have not the ability, or you have not the inclination. And human nature is so constituted that they will only hold you in contempt for your excuses.—Orison Swett Marden, in Success Magazine.

She Threw Him Over Twice.

"Why have you thrown over Mr. Pitcoe?"

"Oh, I could never marry a man with a crooked leg."

"What made his leg crooked?"

"I ran over it with my motor car."—Success Magazine.

Why She Remained.

Leading Lady—I had a quarrel with the manager this morning and threatened to leave the company.

Heavy Comedian—Wasn't there any one to take your part?

Leading Lady—Yes, my understudy. That is why I didn't leave.

What She Loved.

He—If you don't love me, and if you will not listen to me, why do you always take my boxes of chocolates?

She—I love chocolates.—Meggendorfer Blätter.

A DEPARTMENT FOR WOMEN

The Directoire Frock.

Long, languid lines unbroken by a frill,
Superfluous festoons reduced to nil,
A figure like a seal reared up on end
And poking forward with a studied bend;

A shortish neck imprisoned in a ruff,
Skin-fitting sleeves that show a stint of stuff,
A waist promoted half way up the back,
And not a shred that's comfortably slack;

A multitude of buttons, row on row,
Not there for business—merely made for show;
A skirt whose meager gores necessitate
The waddle of a Chinese lady's gait.

A "busby" toque extinguishing the hair
As if a giant hand had crushed it there—
Behold the latest mode! and write beneath,
"A winter blossom bursting from its sheath."
—Punch.

Comb That Won't Fall Out.

There is no longer any reason for women losing their backcombs. A Massachusetts man has devised a comb that "stays put" and will not come out unless the hair comes off, so women with detachable puffs must anchor it securely. This comb is made in two parts, one of which is a plain comb with apertures at the top, and the other a plate, on which is the carrying, the gold or silver mounting or whatever there is of ornamentation. This plate has projections on it that fit into the apertures in the top of the comb proper, and by catching a few strands of hair, between the parts before they are joined the whole will be kept in place. Many a valuable comb, jewel-studded or otherwise costly, has been lost through working its way out of the hair and falling to the ground or floor unnoticed. With this new device in use there will be no danger of such misfortune, and my lady may wear the most costly hair ornament without fear.

NEW COMB.

MILLINERY

For the most part hat shapes are towering.

Among the small hats are turbans of silver with colored bigrettes.

There is a fad just now for making the color of the hat pins contribute to the trimming of the hat.

Some of the smartest of the new hatpins are small enameled plaques in all tones of color.

The lavender sweet pea is new and is seen only on the most expensive hats.

Grapes are used as millinery trimmings and in iridescent colorings, chiefly greens, they are beautiful.

Handsome Evening Toilet.

One of the richest as well as the most beautiful gowns seen this season is an empire model of rose pink chiffon satin with low corsage and sleeves of wide bands of Irish lace. It is extremely simple in construction, but every line and fold is perfectly hung. This could, of course, be carried out in any of the soft clinging materials with equally good results.

Caring for the Patterns.

To keep paper patterns from being mussed take a strip of denim four feet long, twenty-seven inches wide; band or hem edges. Take narrow elastic webbing and make loops just as wide as pattern envelopes, running across denim. Make other rows of these loops below the first about six inches apart, sew a large ring or loop to each of the four corners of cloth, fold through middle and hang on two small screws in back of machine or sewing screen. Your patterns are in neat rows and the elastic holds them securely.

For the Bath.

One athletic young woman indulges frequently in what she calls her "home-made Turkish bath." It is a fact, as she says, that one cannot always cleanse the skin thoroughly with only soap and water and comparatively smooth cloth. A cold-cream bath on the face will prove that. Therefore she takes a small scrub brush, of the sort sometimes sold in drug stores for nail brushes, and, first wetting the body with a sponge and hot water, the brush and a thick soap lather. This goes down into the pores and cleanses them, carries off more old skin and particles of dust and waste than the ordinary wash cloth, and stimulates the circulation. The soap is next thoroughly rinsed off with hot water, and the bath followed by a cold shower and a brisk rub. For the not too vigorous person, a slight rest adds to the beneficial effect, but, whether with or without the concluding soap, the treatment will be found both refreshing and invigorating.

The Home Hospital.

The hospital drawer should be fitted up with the following articles:

Two large and four small bed pads. To make these use two old bed quilts, one cut in two pieces and the other in four. Fold these together, the best side out, and quilt on the machine. Have two covers for each pad. The best is cheap unbleached canvas, as it washes white and looks well.

Three packakes of thin cloth. This is to be used for mustard plasters. Cut in various sizes, some square and some longer than wide.

One roll of old linen. This cloth is used for bathing the face or for burns, cuts or sores, where lint or cotton cloth would be harmful. Save for this purpose all old tablecloths, napkins and handkerchiefs.

One roll of long strips of muslin and flannel. Use this for sore throats and sprains, cuts and abscesses.

One roll cotton.

One package large, square, soft cloths. Sew on two sides for making bran, slippery elm, hop and flaxseed meal poultices.

One package small sacks for dry, hot poultices, such as salt or hops.

One and one-half yards of rubber sheeting.

One box mustard.

One cake pure castile soap.

One hot water bag.

One bottle smelling salts.

One small jar of air-slaked lime and linseed oil, as it affords instant relief for burns.

Pin a label on the rolls so that no matter who goes to the drawer they can lay their hands on just what is wanted and not keep the suffering one waiting.

Take Exercise.

It will be good news to the stout woman to know that what she eats is now thought to have little to do with obesity, and that if enough exercise is taken even a fleshy woman may eat what she wants. To half starve oneself means to look haggard and altogether unlovely. Don't drink while eating, even water. Don't drink alcoholic stuff at any time.

Fads and Fancies in Dress

Plain shirt waists prevail.

Checks and plaids are popular.

The extra long corset has won out.

Many variations of bolero are seen.

The dainty embroidery vogue increases.

Shoes, stockings and gloves should match the gown.

Black lace edged with velvet is the latest thing in sashes.

The turnover linen collar with jabot will be worn as of yore.

For the dressy waist the tucked sleeve is generally chosen.

The old fashioned sailor collar has come back for the younger set.

With the tailored suits coarse mesh net waists will be much worn.

Because of the thumb-length sleeves gloves are very often omitted in the evening.

The fashionable stocking is the filmiest, laciest, daintiest bit of gauze imaginable—also the costliest.

Double effect veils come in all sorts of modish colorings, green over brown being a smart combination.

Metallic net bids fair to be much used for hats for more dressy occasions during the coming season.

ABOUT THE BABY

The best treatment for baby during its first year is to attend carefully to its physical wants and to absolutely neglect the fact that it has a mind at all. There should be no romping or playing or, in fact, anything which can interest or excite its mind. Next in importance come proper feeding and correct training in sleeping. Bad nutrition is the great cause of the nerves getting into that state which easily leads up to nervousness, stammering, St. Vitus' dance, and even convulsions. If the nerve centers and the brain get insufficient food and sleep they become exhausted and over-strained. To be well nourished the baby must not only have suitable food, but must be fed at regular intervals. The baby's nap should be continued until he is 4; at this time he should be having fully twelve hours' sleep. Between 6 and 10, ten and eleven hours are required; from 10 to 16, nine hours.

Remedy for Nose Bleed.

For obstinate and persistent nose bleeding either put an ice pack or a cloth rung out of ice water at the back of the neck just at the base of the brain, or drop cold water from a sponge held well above the head so that it will strike the crown of the head with considerable force.

The head should be kept well elevated; even in cases of extreme weakness do not allow the patient to lie down, and small wads of absorbent cotton wet with a weak solution of carbolic acid should be used to plug the nostrils.

If the arms are held above the head for five or ten minutes the bleeding, if not severe will usually stop.

The Child's Bath.

Some children are timid about venturing into a bath tub. Often the fright comes from being plunged bodily into water that is either too cold or too warm. Sometimes this plunge is accidental. One woman solved the problem by laying a large Turkish towel in the tub and providing a small stool on which the child could sit part of the time. This was found very convenient when the little girl was having her hair washed. Instead of filling the tub with water, put a little in. The use of the bath towel to prevent slipping is also suggested for elderly persons, especially if you do not have a gum mat for this purpose.

The Grind That Dulls.

If the scissors grinder kept his blade on the whetstone unceasingly the scissors would soon be useless. The grind that dulls women is not daily household duties, but never letting up on those duties. The housewife who is knowing keeps herself sharpened with frequent change and recreation.

HANDSOME BALL GOWN.

A stunning creation in coral satin, with pointed design in front of skirt and bodice embroidered in small jet and gold beads. The Greek key on hem of skirt and on bodice is done in jet beads. A band of Irish crochet lace outlines the square cut neck and undersleeves of same fall just a trifle below those of satin. This is one of the richest costumes shown by a well-known importer.

REVIEW OF INDIANA

Mrs. Jesse Osborne, aged 30, of Peru, placed a pitsol in her mouth and fired a bullet into her brain because the husband to whom she was married but ten days, threatened to leave her. She had been married three times.

Mort White, driver for the Brazil Ice and Power company, was kicked by a vicious horse and his condition is critical. The iron shoes of the animal struck White in the groin, producing serious internal hemorrhages. White is thirty-four years old and married.

Goldie Kenworthy, 14, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Kenworthy, of Richmond, who disappeared a week ago, has not been located and her mother remains in a distracted condition. It was found the missing girl had been reading a sensational novel entitled "the Runaway Girl."

Mrs. George Hobson, wife of a molder employed at the plant of Reeves & Co., at Columbus, attempted to start a fire in the kitchen stove with coal oil. She did not know of the existence of live coals in the stove and an explosion followed. Mrs. Hobson was so seriously burned she died.

English sparrows by the thousands have invaded Nashville and Brown county. The martins have been driven from their homes. Garden seed is even stolen by these birds and they are being killed by hundreds. The citizens can not understand where so many sparrows could have come from so suddenly.

Effie Lantz, fifteen years old, daughter of Andy Lantz, of Bedford, had a narrow escape from burning to death. While she was ironing her dress caught fire. Instead of trying to smother the flames with her hands she made a rush for a pond, into which she plunged head foremost, thus saving her life. Her back is badly burned.

William Curd, a farmer living near Oakland City, has a Maltese cat that is literally turning into a dog. The animal's ears some time ago began to grow and are now three inches in length, while its hair has diminished until it resembles the coat of a dog. If the transition keeps up the cat will in a short time become a diminutive hound in appearance.

An unknown hero saved the life of 12-year-old Margaret Ebert on the Big Four bridge over the Wabash at Terre Haute. When a passenger train came on the bridge the man caught her up, and, swinging out from a girder with one hand, held her in the air with the other until the train passed. Then helping her to the end of the bridge, he went away without giving his name.

Holding firmly to his belief that a rooster was not an animal, Blackford White, who was arrested for cruelty to animals, refused to plead guilty in the city court at Terre Haute. He did not deny the cruelty, but maintained that as the Bible says animals were made one day and fowls another day, he was not guilty of the offense charged. He engaged an attorney to fight the case along that line.

John Robinson, of New Albany, has more than fifty bird shot in his left arm, leg and side. His wounds are serious, but it is thought he will recover. While seated on the river bank fishing and partly concealed by underbrush he was mistaken for a duck by men who were passing in a motor boat and was fired on. His scream of pain attracted their attention and they drew to the shore and assisted him to his home.

One of Fort Wayne's newest industries is the silk stocking and underwear plant which has been organized by Theodore F. Thieme, John A. Thieme and J. G. Thieme, the brothers who have built up the Wayne knitting mills to its present great size, employing 1,500 persons in knitting hosiery. The new mill will be located near the Wayne mill and will confine itself to a higher grade of hosiery and will add silk underwear to its output. The company will have a capital of $150,000.

While walking in his sleep at the Benson boarding house in Anderson, James Cravens, a factory employe, twenty-eight years old, fell from a second story window and may die from his injuries. Other occupants of the house were aroused by the crash of glass when Cravens tumbled through the window, and they found Cravens unconscious on the ground. He suffered a broken collar bone, three ribs were fractured on one side and four were torn from the spine on the left side. An internal injury caused hemorrhage at the mouth and ears. Cravens did not rally for several hours. He said he was addicted to somnambulism and did not know he was out of bed until he crashed through the window and cold air revived him.

While returning from a visit with friends, Mrs. Frank Riley, of near Young's creek, six miles south of Paoli, died suddenly of heart failure while riding in a buggy with her husband.

Despondent over ill health and half intoxicated also, so the officers say, Mrs. George Carver of Columbus, ate a quantity of corn cure and tried to kill herself. Physicians were called and after some difficulty they saved her life.

Weldie Dugan, 10 years old, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Dugan, of Owensville, suffered intense pain after he ate a number of raw mushrooms. A companion of the Dugan boy was also severely ill from eating raw mushrooms. Both have fully recovered.

While workmen engaged in quarrying stone for the Washington township rock roads were blasting along White river, near Rogers, six miles miles east of Petersburg, a den of thirty snakes, of different species, was unearthed and twenty were killed. Several escaped.

D. E. Studabaker, of Decatur, famous as a breeder of fine Duroc hogs, has retired from the business, selling his herd to Mr. Steeman, of Middletown.

The wireless telephone tower in Elkhart will not be in perfect working order for two months yet. John W. Culp, of Goshen, will be in charge of it.

Members of the Columbia City Militia company as in training for a competitive shoot with the members of company D, Fort Wayne, to be held early in May.

F. J. Lourent, of Hartford City, writes from Ochiltree, Texas, denying the rumor that he was recently swindled out of $6,000 on a hotel deal in the south.

John Scarf, who lives six miles east of Silver Lake, was thrown from a road grader which he was operating, and both legs were broken. He also received internal injuries that may cause death.

The beautiful country home of Mrs. George Wilson, three miles west of Geneva, was destroyed by fire which originated from a chicken brooder. Mrs. Wilson had a narrow escape from death or severe injuries in the flames.

S. F. Miller, who is the leading bee man of Wabash county, reports that bees have not only wintered well, but that they will begin the season strong in numbers, and that so far there is every indication of a successful and prosperous year for the beekeepers of northern Indiana. Mr. Miller cares for from 350 to 400 colonies of bees.

On the Zook farm in Polk township, Huntington county, formerly owned by William Miles, on less than fifty old Indian darts were found in the fields. The farm lies near the old state road which ran through Mt. Etna and only a short distance from the Salamonie river, and was therefore a favorite haunt of the old Miami Indians.

James Moffit, was engaged in helping to blow out stumps in a field on the farm of Ira Lockwood, near Kendallville, was seriously injured by the premature discharge of a stick of dynamite. Flying pieces of wood struck him in the head and one side of the head was practically torn off. Moffit is over fifty years old and was formerly employed as a detective on the Lake Shore railroad.

Dr. William De Hart, of Logansport, has sent to John C. Davis, of New York City, a wallet containing $2000 in notes and cash, which he found on the street two weeks ago. Davis was motoring through Indiana, and did not discover his loss until he was on board a train bound for home. A friend saw the newspaper accounts of Dr. De Hart's find, Davis asked the finder to keep the cash, $163.

The organization of a rolling mill company with a capital stock of $150,000 was begun in Brazil recently and it is expected to have a large plant in operation there within the next ninety days. Recently a lot addition to the city was sold to raise a factory fund, of which $20,000 was to be given as a bonus for the erection and operation of a rolling mill plant. All the stock of the new concern is to be held in Brazil.

Street signs and house numbers are all in place at Sullivan, for the first time in the history of the town. The work of numbering was started several weeks ago, as the first step toward getting free delivery of mail for Sullivan. The government has now ordered free delivery of mail and an examination for applicants for position as carrier is to be held in a short time. It is thought service here will be started about the last of June.

Earl, five-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Williams, of Muncie, narrowly escaped death in an attack by a vicious bulldog. But for the courageous efforts of a man who was near and who literally choked the animal to death, the boy probably would have been killed, as the animal had fastened its teeth in the cheek and lips of the lad and would not let go. The boy will always be scarred as a result of the attack, but he will recover. It was feared that the dog was mad, but this is now regarded improbable.

That Indiana's stringent marriage laws are inadequate when Cupid gets to work, is shown by two Curtisville girls, sisters, age thirteen and seventeen, who went to Tipton a few days ago with their lovers, obtained two licenses and were married. The girls were Velvia, age thirteen, and Mrs. Dorothy Warner Richards, age seventeen, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Wellington Warner, of the Curtisville neighborhood. The youngest girl was married to Cyrus Shipley, a farmer, age twenty-three. Mrs. Dorothy Warner Richards was wedded to Sylvester Vest, age forty.

A Shetland pony valued at $300, a draft mule and two heavy draft horses were killed by the fast Chicago-Cincinnati express at Hagerstown. The animals were thrown 500 feet and badly mangled.

Movable open-air hospitals, where patients suffering from tuberculosis will be treated, may soon be installed in Evansville under the direction of the State Board of Health, the National Red Cross society and the local Tuberculosis society.

An operation which promises to be successful was performed at the City hospital in Bedford. The patient, Mrs. Alex Freed, had been a sufferer for some months from gall stones, and as a result of the operation 192 of the stones were removed.

The temperance women at Mt. Vernon, have entered into a contract with B. O. Hanby, editor of the Unafraid, a socialist paper, at Mt. Vernon, to publish a daily paper for them to fight the saloons during the local option campaign that is now waging in Posey county.

Two Panic Views

THE other day the Indianapolis Star (Rep.) said in the morning: "The discreditable myth that the panic of 1893 was due to the election of Grover Cleveland and the Wilson tariff law of 1894 has long been so outcast in respectable society that it hardly needed the attention bestowed upon it by Senator Nelson. No intelligent person ever believed it." On the same day, in the afternoon, the Indianapolis News (Ind. Rep.) said: "In the late campaign Mr. Taft himself took the view now characterized as false by Senator Nelson. General Harrison, in his famous speech in Carnegie Hall fifteen years ago, was at great pains to trace the panic to the Democratic experiment in tariff-making. And though he criticised methods rather than results, he nevertheless said that he could not understand "how any man of sound mind could have supposed that we could pass from the McKinley bill to a bill framed upon the lines of the Chicago platform without a business convulsion that would shake the country to its center." Republican stump speakers have gone into every nook and corner of the land proclaiming that the Wilson tariff bill was the canse of the panic of 1893. Republican organs have said the same thing over and over again. There is hardly an article of the republican creed that has been more vigorously maintained than this has been."

Of course, everybody knows, or should know, that the Wilson law had nothing to do with bringing a panic that was in full swing a full year before it was passed. But what must be thought of the persons who made the charge and stuck to it, false and silly as it was? The Indianapolis News inclines to the view that they were honest though mistaken. The Star says "no intelligent person ever believed it." If the views of these two papers are to be accepted our republican friends have quite a puzzle to solve.

"The Master's Voice"

IN its issue of Wednesday, April 21, the Philadelphia North-American, a republican paper, prints a long editorial entitled "The Master's Voice."

In this editorial the North American denounces Senator Aldrich, the republican leader. The North American says that although Rhode Island is the tiniest state in the union, its senator "lays down the law to ninety million of Americans in forty-five commonwealths, almost every one of which is an empire by comparison with Rhode Island."

The North American says: "But when the Rhode Island corner grocer Aldrich made as much of a statement as he cared to make about what he proposes to allow this country to have in the way of a tariff, the representatives of a supposedly free people listened reverentty to his insolent ultimatum. For Aldrich does not speak for Rhode Island. Through him speak Wall Street and Standard Oil and every one of the moneyed powers of prey."

But Aldrich also speaks for the republican party and the North American, as well as other republican papers that now protest, had every reason to know that the triumph of republicanism meant the triumph of Aldrichism.

The North American says that on the tariff question Mr. Aldrich is "playing the same swindling game that he played last year with the currency." And the North American concludes thus: "We shall see to what extent Aldrich of Rhode Island can make of the president a nullity and of republican party a pledge-breaking liar." The editor of the North American is simple, indeed, if he expected from Mr. Aldrich any other attitude than he now assumes. He is simple, indeed, if he expects a political party that derives its campaign funds from highly protected trusts to do anything against the special interests of its benefactors. He is simple, indeed, if he does not know that, as a republican leader, Aldrirh towers above them all and that Aldrichism is the real spirit of the republican party.

THE republican party had undertaken to recast the tariff schedules, and it should do something positive to redeem its pledges and to meet obvious public expectations. The weakness of the Senate bill as it stands today is that it represents no sufficiently definite change from the Dingley programme—and with this programme the country has expressed dissatisfaction in unmistakable language. The senate bill should offer some evidences of a rational adjustment to present conditions which can be grasped and accepted by the public.

THE false report that Emperor William had swallowed a fish bone caused a panic in the Berlin stock market recently. People are so credulous in the matter of fish stories when spring first opens up, you know.—Washington Herald.

AND now Editor Higley has virtually called the Butler business men who appeared before the council and asked for pavements, a bunch of mollycoddles. Isn't it horrible? But the mollycoddles win, just the same.

THERE certainly should be a "clean-up day" in Butler. The time is at hand when every street and alley in the city should be overhauled. How about it?

THE Federation of Labor states that there are 2,000,000 men out of emyloyment in the United States. And the "full" dinner pail—what of that?

TIME to prepare for the Decoration Day program.

Spring Fever

(Written for the Herald.)

There's a germ that's mighty "ketchin'," that's a floatin' in the air,
When the days get long and warmer and the weather bright and fair,
And everyone's afflicted by its presence, more or less—
But strange to say, they seem to love the malady's distress.

It's never very fatal, though a lingerin' disease,
And though it's hard upon him although he is pretty well at ease,
And takes it with it's aches and pains with heart that's light and free,
It's strange how that spring fever with a fellow will agree.

And yet he feels as if he wasn't worth a single cent,
And he acts as if his vital force was nearly spent,—
In fact he is so near gone the helpful carpet beater,
He cannot raise from off the hook, when he has got spring fever.

You always find him layin' 'round wherever he may be,
And just a-layin' loafin' 'cause he's very sick you see,
He's late to bed and late to rise, but never late to eat,
I tell you that spring fever is mighty hard to beat.

—J. W. BARBER.

Lots in Garrett are assessed from $1 to $25 each for the big city ditch, on which the commissioners, J. J. Eakright and James Provines, have recently filed their report. The estimated cost is $35,869.96 and it was the duty of the commissioners to make the assessments according to the benefit to be derived by the owners of the properties. The commissioners cost of locating the ditch was $1,165. The ditch is the outlet to the city's sewarage system and the principle benefit will be sanitation.

William Bowers, editor of the New Haven Herald, was attacked on the streets at New Haven Saturday by Eben Bell as the outcome of trouble which had been brewing between the two for some time. Bell struck Bowers over the head with a cane and the other retaliated by knocking Bell down. Bell, it is said, was getting much the worst of the fray when his brother, Marshal Robert Bell, interfered. It is alleged the trouble arose over certain items which appeared in Bowers' paper, which caused the displeasure of Bell.

Early Monday morning Mrs Lintz, of Butler, who on account of her demented condition has been at the country infirmary, escaped from the jail department of that institution and walked to Auburn. In some way she secured a piece of wire from the grated window of her cell and with it unlocked the door. Barefooted she was wandering around in the vicinity of the home of Attorney D. D. Moody. He took her into his home, telephoned to Marshal Brown and later to Supt. Brown, of the county infirmary. The latter came and took the demented woman back to the institution.—Auburn Courier.

Col. Strathmore 2:12¼

Col. Strathmore 2:12¼, owned and in the stud of L. J. Diehl, Butler, Ind., the sire of Clatemore, with a four-year-old record of 2:21¼, winner of five straight races his first year out, and Marion Strathmore, with a two-year-old record of 2:27 in a three-year-old class, is a representative of the greatest family of early producers in the world. He is an exceptionally fast horse himself and also a sire of early speed. His sire, Strathmore, is the sire of Abbie Strathmore 2:07½, Terrell S. 2:08¼, Strathmeath 2:10¼, Strathdennis 2:10¾, and eighty-five other standard performers. He is one of the greatest of the trotting horse family builders. His dam, Crescent, is herself a race mare with a record of 2:24¼, and is the dam of Col. Strathmore 2:12¼, Crescendo 5:15¼, and George Crescens 2:17¼ as a three-year-old, she by Irb Wilkes, sire of eighteen standard performers; his second dam, Rigolette, took a race record of 2:22 and is also the dam of Exmore 2:18¼, Crescent 2:24¼. Many of his colts now in training show extreme speed, one in particular, a yearling, owned at Logansport, Ind., that has stepped an eighth in 17¼ seconds hitched to a cart. They are uniformally good individuals, good headed and have plenty of speed. Col. Strathmore is a coming young sire, worthy the consideration of breeders. Terms $20.00 to insure. $25 00 for living foal

The Early Bird---Caught

At the hour of 6:30, Saturday morning, Rev. O. B. Wells performed the ceremony and solemnized the marriage vow to two of Butler's highly respected, in the persons of Mr. Bert Gearhart and Miss Bessie Moughler.

The marriage took place at their newly furnished apartments on Green street where the bridal party had very neatly and richly furnished, the house which is to be their future home.

Mr. and Mrs. Gearhart took the 7:23 a. m. Lake Shore train for Chicago, expecting to return to this city about Wednesday of this week. They will at once take up housekeeping in the place as above described where they will be at home to their many friends.

At Iven's barn, in Jackson township, was blown down last Friday night, and a valuable milk cow was killed.

The Lake Shore railroad company have cut their men down to shorter hours on account of the bad business conditions prevailing over the country which has seriously affected their traffic.

LEGAL NOTICES

ORDINANCE

NO. ——

An ordinance requiring the owner or owners of all lots, pieces or parcels of land abutting on Broadway or Main streets, Oak street from Canal street to West street and on Depot street from Broadway street to the west line of West avenue, in the city of Butler, Indiana, to tap the water main and bring the pipe to the lot line, and to take the house slants from the sewer to the lot line in accordance with the ordinances now governing such water and sewer connections.

SECTION ONE

Be it ordained by the common council of the city of Butler, Indiana, that the owner or owners of each lot, part of a lot, piece or parcel of land abutting on either of the following named streets in said city, viz: Broadway and Main streets, Oak street from Canal street to West street, and Depot street from Broadway street to the west line of West avenue, be, and they are hereby required, within ninety (90) days from and after the taking effect of this ordinance, to tap the water main and bring the pipe to the lot line, and to take the house slant to the sewer from its present ending to the lot line in accordance with the ordinances now governing such water and sewer connections.

SECTION TWO

Upon the failure of the owner or owners of any lot, part of a lot, piece or parcel of land abutting on said streets named in Sec. 1, hereof, to make such water tap or house slant connection, within the time and in the manner provided in Sec. 1, hereof, then the common council of said city of Butler, Indiana, shall cause such water tap or house slant to be made, and the costs thereof to be assessed against, and become a lien upon, such lot, part of a lot, piece or parcel of land to which such water tap or house slant is connected, and the collection thereof, together with a reasonable attorney's fee, may be enforced in any court of competent jurisdiction.

SECTION THREE

This ordinance shall be in force from and after its passage and publication in the Butler Record and the DeKalb County Herald, once each week for two successive weeks.

Passed in council this 26th day of April, 1909.

GEORGE L. ROWE,
President of the Council.

There's Always a Reason

THERE'S a reason for Patterson-Fletcher Co. doing over twice the clothing business done by any other clothing firm in Northern Indiana. First, we have always filled our store with the finest clothing made. We began to sell it at prices we really could not afford to sell for, but we were sure we knew what was coming. The public soon found out that we were giving them more for their money than they could get elsewhere. Our trade began to increase rapidly. We soon found that we could sell on a still smaller margin of profit. Several years ago we promised the people to lessen our margin of profit as our business increased. This we have done and our business has increased until we are doing four times the business we did a few years ago.

IS THERE ANY REASON

Why we cannot sell four suits for the same profit we did make on one? That is, if we did make $4 on every suit we sold we can now sell them at $1 profit. Is there any reason why the firm that buys four suits should pay any more for each suit than the firm that buys one? You know there is a reason why the firm that buys the four should pay less for each suit than the firm that buys one.

THERE IS EVERY REASON

Now why the Patterson-Fletcher Co. can sell at the prices they do. There is a reason why people can afford to come forty to sixty miles to trade with us. There is a reason why every one of our costomers should be interested in the growth of our store because they know it's to their's and their neighbors' advantage. If we have made it plain that "There is a Reason"—when you buy your next suit—use "Reason."

MASURY'S HOUSE PAINT
THE PAINT WITH THE LONGEST LIFE

There is no question about it.
Masury's House Paints have been submitted to every possible test during the past sixty-five years. They have withstood the attacks of extreme heat, extreme cold, moisture and time. When properly applied on the proper surface they invariably give good accounts of themselves. Painters praise them because of their endurance and preservative qualities. Consumers endorse them because, by their use, they are spared the expense of repainting for the longest possible period. The wonderful success of the house of John W. Masury & Son for more than half a century is due to the care with which they select the ingredients used in the manufacture of their paints. Many substances could be used to lessen cost, but they are unhesitatingly rejected.

PURE LINSEED OIL

is used on account of its superior preservative qualities. The pigments ground with it are selected because experience has proved them to be best. In deciding upon paints for original painting or repainting you must remember it costs just as much to spread poor paints as it does to spread the best paints, and that in the interests of economy you should choose Masury's House Paints for the reason that they live the longest and retain their brilliancy of finish long after inferior paints have completely vanished. They are manufactured only by

The following method does away with fishy dishes, disagreeable odors, etc.: Clean and wash the fish thoroughly, salt, pepper, and flour it inside and out (sparingly), then roll in manila paper at least three times. Pinch the ends of the paper together, then fold back, and pin securely, to prevent the escape of the juices. Bake in a moderate oven, and allow fifteen minutes more than if baking the same fish in a pan. When ready to serve, remove the paper, to which the skin will adhere and place the delicious, juicy meat upon the platter. Garnish as desired.

Ex-Governor James E. Campbell has been selected toastmaster of the Bryan dollar dinner to be given at the Goodale street auditorium, Columbus, Saturday evening, May 15, by the Jefferson club. Mr. Bryan's subject will be "What of the Night?" It will be his first political speech since the tariff bill has been presented to congress and it will be of national interest. It is probable that a number of democrats from this county will attend the banquet.

Having purchased the feed store of Shaw & Hubbard and the farm machinery stock of Eugene Hubbard, we will offer some special bargains in this line of machinery. LAXATIVE FOR WOMEN FREE

There is a great difference in the purposes to which a laxative should be put. Tablets and pills, salts, etc., are usually violent purgatives or cathartics, and altogether too powerful for the average person.

A woman at all times needs only a mild laxative—in fact, none other is needed by anyone, weak or strong though they may be, for the object is simply to move the bowels, and if a gentle laxative will do it, what is the use of a violent one?

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin has earned a well-deserved vogue among women and children and old folks—people who must necessarily be careful of what they take.

It is a liquid laxative tonic and admittedly the greatest stomach, liver and bowel remedy before the American people. The price is only 50 cents or $1 a bottle, as it comes in both sizes, and all druggists sell it. Its pleasant taste and gentle action make it an ideal remedy for women in constipation, torpid liver, sour stomach, sick headache, heartburn and such like digestive complaints. Its use for a short time will remove the trouble entirely so that future medication will be unnecessary. Its tonic properties build up the stomach and intestinal muscles so that they act naturally again. That this is so is the experience of many heads of families, like Mrs. Brannan, of Alvarado, Va.; Mrs. K. L. Stout, of Louisville, Ky., and numerous others; in fact, way out in Williams, Cal., as Mrs. J. E. Blackmore, of that place, writes, the whole town seems to be using it.

If the remedy is new to you and you want to make a trial of it before buying, send your name to the doctor's address as below, and a free test bottle will be sent you. Then, if results are satisfactory you can buy it of your druggist.

If there is anything about your ailment that you don't understand, or if you want any medical advice, write to the doctor, and he will answer you fully. There is no charge for this service. The address is Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 202 Caldwell bldg., Monticello, Ill.

On Laziness.

Dr. Charles A. Eaton of the Madison Avenue Baptist church, said in the course of a brilliant after-dinner speech in Cleveland:

"Laziness is responsible for too much of the misery we see about us. It is all very well to blame alcohol for this misery, to blame oppression and injustice; but to what heights might we not all have climbed but for our laziness?"

He paused and smiled.

"We are too much like the supernumerary in the drama," he went on, "who had to enter from the right and say, 'My lord, the carriage waits.'

"Look here, super,' said the stage manager one night, 'I want you to come on from the left instead of the right after this, and I want you to transpose your speech. Make it run hereafter, "The carriage waits, my lord."'

"The super pressed his hand to his brow.

"'More study! More study!' he groaned."

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by Catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Contagious.

Poetry is catching. A playwright recently told a story of rehearsing "Twelfth Night" for an open air performance, in a garden which was overlooked by a rising brick edifice. As the amateurs recited their lines, the workmen continued their labors. The Washington Star prints the tale.

One afternoon, during a silent pause in our rehearsal, we heard a voice from the building operation saying gravely:

"I prithee, malapert, pass me yonder brick."

ACROSS the CONTINENT ON THE BRAKE BEAM

Being the Bona Fide Story of an Amateur Tramp Who Won His Way with a Band of Hoboes from Seattle to Washington.

THERE were nine of us—all tried knights of the road—gathered around a little wood fire in the "jungles" outside of Tacoma, Wash. We had arrived in the burg three hours before, covered with ashes and coal dust after a ride of 180 miles on the rods from Portland, Ore. Now we were trying to reach some decision regarding the next point in our journey. We had listened to Reddy Fluke's glowing description of Mexico, and had about decided to get acquainted with the "greasers," when Mickey butted in with his proposal to journey to the Capital City.

It was dusk when we rose from a short nap and started off on our tenmile hike to Auburn, where we expected to catch the Northwestern Limited for St. Paul. A fine rain was falling and a cold, blustering wind blew in from the shores of Puget sound. At last, with her headlight cutting the darkness like a knife, the limited came roaring and rushing around the curve and came to a stop. With a few hurried words of instructions to each other the gang scurried toward the panting engine, and when the Northwestern Limited pulled out on her journey of 1,900 miles to St. Paul we were safely tucked away on the brake-beams, the rods, the blinds, the trucks, and other mysterious places known only to the knight of the road.

On the Blind Baggage.

Off into the night we went, Mickey and I clinging to the grips on the blind baggage. Once we stopped to take water, and the spray from the flying engine drenched our clothes. Somewhere in the early hours of the morning we pulled into North Yakima. Here we were spied by the fireman, and a well-directed lump of coal catching poor Mickey in the eye hurried our departure from the "blind." "Hurry," yelled Mickey in my ear. "We'll make the trucks!" and he grabbed my arm and hurried me beneath the first Pullman. The ashes and dirt from the flying wheels stung our unprotected faces with pitiless persistence, and when we changed our grip on the rods every now and then the skin came off our hands, and the rust of the iron was colored with blood from the torn flesh. Somewhere underneath that train were others like ourselves, gripping on for dear life. Five feet above us were well-groomed men and women, lights and mirth, warmth and cushioned seats. It was about 1 o'clock when we pulled into Spokane. The limited paused here for ten minutes, and no sooner had the wheels ceased to revolve when we were out of the trucks and hurrying up the back track toward the "jungles."

Spokane looked very dreary to us as we huddled together in the bushes alongside of the tracks. Reddy Fluke was missing. He had either been ditched somewhere along the line or had deserted. Eight of us were on hand, however, after the all-night ride, dirty, tired and hungry. Mickey suggested a "mulligan," and the different members of the gang started off in search of handouts. Mickey was to get the spuds (potatoes), Greenie was assigned to secure the punk (bread), Fokes was detailed to bring in junk (meat), and we others were to gather everything we could in the way of eatables and return with them to the "jungles."

I expected unlimited handouts, but there was nothing doing. One elderly lady raised her mop in a threatening manner, and when I went around the corner she was still trying to locate Towser.

The next house I stopped at I ran into better luck. Two apples, three slices of bread and seven sour butter cakes was the total of my haul. As I was leaving the door a small tot in a pinafore handed me a stick of pepsin gum. I think in her young mind she must have had a faint idea that the sour butter cakes were going to cause me trouble.

Banquet of the Hoboes.

Arriving at the "jungles," I found all of the members of the party there ahead of me. A fire was going on and a large can, supported by two forked sticks, was boiling above the flame. I added my bundle to the other bundles lying beside the fire and sat down with the rest to await the "mulligan." Soon it was finished, and every man secured an old tomato can and received a liberal portion of the mysterious mess.

An empty freight car up the track was to furnish us with sleeping apartments for the night. Some time in the night our party was joined by others of our ilk. No attempt was made at friendly greetings that night. The knights of the rails were deep in the land of sleep. A shaft of light from a brakie's lantern and a muttered growl to "come out of that" brought the gang to their feet. At each door stood a brakeman with a gun in one hand and a lantern in the other. A bullet went hurling up toward the top of the car and we all rushed for the door.

Ditched Forty Miles from Anywhere.

"Ditched," said Mickey, as he watched the lights on the caboose fading away in the distance. "Ditched, and about forty miles from anywhere," he continued, as we gazed around at the bleak scene that met our eyes. Everywhere was loneliness and gloom. Not a house, not a light, and to add to our discomfort it was beginning to snow. "Come on; there's nothing to it but a hike," said our leader, as he started up the track, and we dropped along in the rear. How far we walked I don't know, but it seemed an age until the welcome lights of a town greeted our tired eyes. It was snowing hard, and we hurried forward with renewed energy. "Sand Point, Mont.," was the legend we read on the swinging sign at the little station. The town was asleep, and Mickey advised an attack on the barns on the edge of the village.

Butte was our next stopping place. Montana had treated us badly from the start. They don't like gents of the rail in that State. Sleepless nights and hungry days had been our portion through the State.

It was Mickey's rich uncle in "Swampoodle" that braced us up now. Mickey himself had promised us all sorts of new outfits when we arrived in Washington. We were to have feather beds, money in our pockets, and three meals a day once we struck the Capital City, so we smiled at the misery of our present condition and reveled in dreams of the future. Greenie got pinched in Butte, and the last we saw of our comrade he was wandering up a hilly street under the escort of a huge policeman.

We left Butte that night on top of a blind baggage, and after butting into hardships landed in Fargo, N. D., three days afterward. From there on to St. Paul we had it easy, and rode straight through on the blind. Grizzly's appearance didn't rhyme with St. Paul's broad avenues, and when last we saw him he was vainly trying to convince a policeman that he was an actor out of work. We lingered in St. Paul five hours, and left that city for Chicago.

We were lucky enough to jump a train just as she was pulling out of that city. We stuck to this train until we reached Newark, O., where we got off to accept a job at washing dishes in a lunchroom in return for a meal. Mickey buncoed the proprietor out of a quarter in some unaccountable manner. That night we left Newark, happy in the thought that our long trip was almost over. A brakeman threw us off at Harper's Ferry, and we slept that night in the hills. Next morning bright and early we were up, and caught a freight train coming our way. Cumberland was passed before we were discovered and ditched. But it only proved a short halt, for we got hold of another express that evening and rode right into Tacoma Park, Washington.

Here Mickey deemed it advisable to get off and walk into town. Walk we did, and as we roamed into Pennsylvania avenue we almost felt repaid for all of the hardships we had encountered in attaining our goal. Proudly Mickey pointed out the dome of the Capitol to us, and long did he dwell in glowing descriptions of the new District and Congressional buildings; but somehow or other he shrunk from our introducing the subject of his uncle into the conversation. We were finally told to wait in front of the Central Union Mission while he hustled off to dig up a few coins from a mysterious friend. He returned in a few hours, and at night we slept in a real bed in the Central Union Mission.

BABY CROP IS VALUABLE.

Annual Addition to Nation's Population Worth $40,000,000,000.

New York's annual baby crop, aggregating about 100,000 infants, is worth a little more than $2,000,000,000, according to the latest figures. Calculated on a strictly economic basis, this crop of youngsters, which throughout the country is about 2,000,000 a year, represents a value of $40,000,000,000—a sum equal to two-fifths of the estimated wealth of the nation.

These figures are reached by taking from the census reports the value of a worker's year in products turned out and subtracting from that his wages. The result is his value to the community for that period, and his total value is easily ascertained by multiplying the result by the number of years of his working life. The average value of a year's products per worker is now $2,680. For forty years the total, after subtracting wages, is $20,720, and that is the potential value of every member of the baby crop.

At present it is estimated that the country loses more than $6,000,000,000 every year through the death of one infant out of every six under the age of 12 months. It is expected, however, that modern methods of caring for babies will be able to decrease this rate at least one in ten. If this is accomplished, it will mean a saving of $2,627,300,000 every year.

LIFE STORY OF ABDUL HAMID.

Born 1842. Son of a Circassian woman in Abdul Mejid's household.

His name means "Servant of the Praiseworthy."

Always thoughtful, shrewd in perception and of a saving disposition.

Ascended the throne already owning 600,000 Turkish pounds that he had amassed.

Was living in seclusion when offered the throne, his brother, Sultan Murad V., having been deposed for being weak-minded.

Turkey was bankrupt when he ascended, Aug. 31, 1876.

Had a war with Servia on his hands first thing.

Whipped Russia in war that ended in March, 1878.

Grew independent of his Warwick, Midhat Pasha, and revoked the Turkish constitution.

Whipped Greece in a short, bitter war.

He is sad-eyed, gray-bearded and dignified.

Is morbidly suspicious and fearful of assassination.

He loves to practice with revolver and rifle, and is a dead shot.

There are several hundred women in his harem, but nobody knows the exact number.

KIAMIL PASHA.
PREMIER OF THE "YOUNG TURK" ADMINISTRATION.

MEATS AND VEGETABLES.

Stewed chicken without mashed potatoes and pork without apple sauce lose half their zest.

Potatoes are an accommodating sort of vegetable. They are good with all meats, though their digestibility when served more than once a day is questionable.

With roast meats, sweet potatoes are appropriate as are squash, tomatoes, asparagus and stewed onions.

Baked macaroni is a fitting accompaniment to a roast, so are Brussels sprouts and scalloped or creamed cauliflower.

Fried onions fairly cry aloud for a juicy beefsteak, and roast beef without potatoes browned under the meat never tastes quite the same.

It is no longer correct to serve more than two vegetables with the meat course, though with poultry, cranberries are counted as an extra.

ABDUL LONG IN POWER

Sultan on Throne Since the Deposition of His Brother Thirty-three Years Ago.

LAWS OF SUCCESSION ARE ODD

Crown of Turkey Goes to Senior in Male Line of Direct Descendants of Othman.

Sultan Abdul Hamid II. succeeded to the throne on the deposition of his elder brother, Sultan Murad V., Aug. 31, 1876. He therefore reigned for more than thirty-two years, and in that long time his name has become a synonym for cruelty and duplicity throughout the civilized world.

Abdul Hamid was nearly 34 years old when he ascended the throne, having been born Sept. 22, 1842. He is the thirty-fourth sovereign, in male descent, of the house of Othman, founder of the Ottoman Empire, who began his rule in the year 1299. By the Turkish law of succession, the crown is inherited according to seniority by the male descendants of Othman. Any child of the imperial harem, whether of a free or a slave woman, is considered eligible to the throne.

Under this condition the logical successor of Abdul Hamid is his brother, Mehmmed-Reshad Effendi, who was born Nov. 3, 1844, and is two years younger than Abdul Hamid. The Sultan has a sister nearly a year older than himself, two younger sisters and two younger brothers.

It has not been the custom for several centuries for the Sultan to contract regular marriages. By the Mohammedan law a man is restricted to a few wives, though the number of his concubines is unlimited.

Rules for Royal Harem.

Inmates of the imperial harem come by purchase or free will, mostly from districts without the empire, the majority from Circassia. From among the number the Sultan designates a number, generally seven, to be known as "Kadein," or ladies of the palace, and these are usually called wives. The rest of the women are called "odalik" and remain under the seven as servants. The superintendent of the harem is always an aged lady of the palace. She keeps up knowledge of the outside world through the guard of eunuchs, whose chief has the same rank as the grand vizier.

Fundamentally the Turkish Empire is based on the precepts of the Koran, and the irreconcilable differences between Mohammedanism and Christianity are at the bottom of the conflict between the old and the new elements of the population. The new element, whose leaders have been educated or have traveled in Europe outside of Turkey, are considered enemies of Mohammedanism by those faithful to the old religion, and their ideas are considered heretical in politics as in religion. For the government of the country the law as laid down in the Koran, in the "Multeka," or sacred book, of the prophet's supposed teachings and sayings, and the sentences and decisions of his immediate successors are binding upon the Sultan as well as upon his subjects.

Another code of laws, the "canon anmeh," formed by Sultan Solyman the Magnificent from a succession of decrees issued by him and his predecessors, is held in general obedience, but has not the force of spiritual authority which the religious books possess.

The Turkish parliament which was created last autumn by the Sultan, with the ostensible purpose of giving Turkey a constitutional form of government similar to the governments of western Europe, consists of a senate and a chamber of deputies. The senators and their president are appointed by the Sultan. By an arbitrary rule the number of senators is fixed at less than 250. The deputies are elected by the people in the ratio of one for every 25,000 males of the population.

Miss Mary Mattes was awarded a verdict of $25,000 in her suit for breach of promise against Hugh Crabbe of Chicago, former manager of the Leiter estate, who is said to be worth $200,000. This was the full amount asked by Miss Mattes. The plaintiff is 22 years old.

HAT MAKES WOMAN MISS TRAIN.

At Fruitvile, Cal., an immense bonnet caused a woman to miss her train, blockaded the entryway of a street car and was removed only by the knife of the motorman of the car. All this came about when a boy with a huge box placed himself on the rear platform of the car. No trouble came until a woman passenger attempted to get by the bandbox and discovered that it could not be moved. The woman appealed to the conductor, declaring she was in haste to make a train. He advised her to jump over the obstacle, but she refused to attempt the feat. Finally the motorman was appealed to and he severed the strings about the bandbox. When the millinery creation which it contained was revealed the box was kicked out of the way. Released, the woman set out in frantic pursuit of her train, while the boy proceeded to deliver the hat without its bandbox.

She journeyed 6,000 miles to wed the young pathologist who had won her heart, but who had cast his lot with the lepers, for whom he hoped to discover a cure. They were married in August, 1907.

CONSTIPATION MUNYON'S PAW-PAW PILLS

Munyon's Paw-Paw Pills are unlike all other laxatives or cathartics. They coax the liver into activity by gentle methods. They do not scour; they do not gripe; they do not weaken; but they do start all the secretions of the liver and stomach in a way that soon puts these organs in a healthy condition and corrects constipation. In my opinion constipation is responsible for most ailments. There are thirty-two feet of human bowels, which is really a sewer pipe. When this pipe becomes clogged, the whole system becomes poisoned, causing biliousness, indigestion and impure blood, which often produces rheumatism and kidney ailments. No woman who suffers with constipation or any liver complaint can expect to have a clear complexion, or enjoy good health.

Munyon's Paw-Paw Pills are a tonic to the stomach, liver and nerves. They invigorate instead of weakening; they enrich the blood instead of impoverishing it; they enable the stomach to get all the nourishment from food that is put into it.

These pills contain no calomel, no dope, they are soothing, healing and stimulating. They school the bowels to act without physic. Price 25 cents.

Quite In Character.

The late William Terriss, who for many years was invariably the hero in the dramas produced at the Adelphi theater, London, seems to have been in nice accord with the characters he played. One day, writes Ellen Terry in her recently published book, "The Story of My Life," he came into the theater thoroughly soaked.

"Is it raining, Terriss?" asked someone, who noticed that he was wet.

"Looks like it, doesn't it?" said Terriss, carelessly.

Later it came out that he had jumped off a penny steamboat into the Thames and saved a little girl's life.

TEN YEARS OF PAIN.

Unable to Do Even Housework Because of Kidney Troubles.

Mrs. Margaret Emmerich, of Clinton St., Napoleon, O., says: "For fifteen years I was a great sufferer from kidney troubles. My back pained me terribly. Every turn or move caused sharp, shooting pains. My eyesight was poor, dark spots appeared before me, and I had dizzy spells. For ten years I could not do housework, and for two years did not get out of the house. The kidney secretions were irregular, and doctors were not helping me. Doan's Kidney Pills brought me quick relief, and finally cured me. They saved my life."

DOLLAR WHEAT HAS COME TO STAY.

In Less Than Five Years Central Canada Will Be Called Upon to Supply the United States.

A couple of years ago, when the announcement was made in these columns that "dollar wheat" had come to stay, and that the time was not far distant when the central provinces of Canada—Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta—would be called upon to supply a large part of the wheat consumption in the United States, there were many who laughed at the predictions and ridiculed the idea of wheat reaching the dollar point and staying there. Both of these predictions have come to pass. Dollar wheat is here—and it is not only here, but is here to stay; and at the same time, whatever unpleasant sensations it may arouse in the supersensitive American, Central Canada is already being called upon to help keep up our bread supply, and within the next five years will, as James J. Hill says, literally "become the bread-basket of our increasing millions."

There are few men in the United States better acquainted with the wheat situation than Mr. Hill, and there are few men, if any, who are inclined to be more conservative in their expressed views. Yet it was this greatest of the world's railroad men who said a few days ago that "the price of wheat will never be substantially lower than it is to-day"—and when it is taken into consideration that at that time wheat had soared to $1.20, well above the dollar mark, the statement is peculiarly significant, and doubly significant is the fact that in this country the population is increasing at the ratio of 65 per cent, while the yield of wheat and other products is increasing at the rate of only 25 per cent. For several years past the cost of living has been steadily increasing in the United States, and this wide difference in production and consumption is the reason.

This difference must be supplied by the vast and fertile grain regions of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta. There is now absolutely no doubt of this. Even the press of the country concedes the fact. Results have shown that no other country in the world can ever hope to equal these provinces as wheat producers, and that no other country can produce as hard or as good wheat. Said a great grain man recently, "If United States wheat maintains the dollar mark, Canada wheat will be well above a dollar a bushel, for in every way it is superior to our home-grown grain."

With these facts steadily impinging their truth upon our rapidly growing population, it is interesting to note just what possibilities as a "wheat grower" our northern neighbor possesses. While the United States will never surrender her prestige in any manufacturing or commercial line, she must very soon acknowledge, and with as much grace as she can, that she is bound to be beaten as a grain producer. It must be conceded that a great deal of the actual truth about the richness of Canada's grain producing areas has been "kept out of sight," as Mr. Hill says, by the strenuous efforts of our newspapers and magazines to stem the exodus of our best American farmers into those regions. It is a fact that up to the present time, although Canada has already achieved the front rank in the world's grain producers, the fertile prairies of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta have as yet scarcely been scratched. Millions of acres, free for the taking, still await our American farmers; and when these millions are gone there are other millions in regions not yet opened up to immigration. A few years ago the writer, who had been through those wheat provinces several times, laughed with others of our people at the broad statement that Canada was bound to become "John Bull's bread-basket." Now, after a last trip (and though he is a staunch American) he frankly believes that not only will Canada become John Bull's bread-basket, but it will within the next decade at least BECOME THE BREAD-BASKET OF THE UNITED STATES. Perhaps this may be a hard truth for Americans to swallow, but it is a truth nevertheless. And it is at least a partial compensation to know that hundreds of thousands of our farmers are profiting by the fact by becoming producers in this new country.

The papers of this country have naturally made the most of the brief period of depression which swept over Canada, but now there is not a sign of it left from Winnipeg to the coast. Never have the three great wheat raising provinces been more prosperous. Capital is coming into the country from all quarters, taking the form of cash for investment, industrial concerns seeking locations, and, best of all, substantial and sturdy immigrants come to help populate the prairies. Towns are booming; scores of new elevators are springing up; railroads are sending out their branch lines in all directions; thousands of prosperous farmers are leaving their prairie shelters for new and modern homes—"built by wheat"; everywhere is a growing happiness and contentment—happiness and contentment built by wheat—the "dollar wheat," which has come to stay. Notwithstanding this, the Canadian government is still giving away its homesteads and selling pre-emptions at $3.00 an acre, and the railway and land companies are disposing of their lands at what may be considered nominal figures.

FARM NOTES

Barn for Mixed Farming.

The farmer who can so adjust his work that he may dispense with the help of one man is lucky indeed, but many a farmer has done so by simply changing his system of feeding and caring for the stock; also by so disposing of the grain and hay that instead of hauling many tons of it to market it is fed on the farm, and the beef, pork, butter, cheese, etc., sold. This allows the farmer to restore to the ground at least a part of the fertility in the shape of manure.

The barn plan shown herewith in the two illustrations, the ground plan and the perspective view, is so arranged that one man may feed and care for the stock in a short time. As shown on the floor plan, the barn will accommodate fourteen cows, twelve horses, has box stalls for both the cows and horses, also a large calf pen. The installation of manure carriers and hay fork is very easy, and these will soon pay for themselves in the labor saved. A feature of the barn not to be overlooked is the arrangement of the feed room and silo. The four-foot chute extends the entire length of the silo, and has small windows for light, a tight door below separating same from the feed room to keep out dust and odors. The silage is dropped down this chute, and from there shovelled to the mixing boxes—one for the cows and one for the horses. There are two bins in the feed room and two more may be located on the floor above and connected by small spouts for drawing off the grain. These spouts may be located directly over the mixing boxes. All hay is supposed to be fed from above, one hay chute being provided for each two stalls.

The milk room being located as it is, the milk may be taken to it at once. In this room should be located the separator; also plenty of clean water; if possible running water should be provided. The shop is a very necessary room, and it will save many small repair bills. In it may be stored the nails, bolts, etc. In the horse barn the harness room is located in the center, which makes it handy to all parts of the same. The two box stalls provide room for both male animals as well as sick and ailing ones.

The hay bay is supposed to be open clear to the roof. However, some farmers may wish to arrange this space different. The partition separating the cows from the center section is boarded or plastered up tight, except the calf pen, to separate the cows from any odors, dust or dirt from the other animals. The box stalls, however, in both the cow and horse barn are so constructed that the inmates may have a good view of the other animals. They like company, and will do better if they can see their neighbors.

The floors of the cow stable, the milk room, feed room and silo are of cement, the gutter being formed in the floor and having a four-inch drain at the rear leading to the manure pit. The stalls are made to fit both long and short cows. The first stall in front is four feet wide and five feet long. The rear stall is three feet six inches wide and four feet eight inches long. The stalls then slope from front to the rear, each stall being slightly shorter. Stalls are now constructed in so many different ways that it is hardly worth while to mention them, every cow man having his own views of the matter. However, it is wise to so build them that the stall may be easily cleaned and washed. This construction will comply with all sanitary requirements of inspectors. The floor of the horse stable may be of cement or clay.

The location, the local supply of materials, etc., will of course govern to a certain extent the material entering the construction of any building, and, in fact, all buildings. The barn is shown is twelve feet to the eaves and thirty-eight feet to the peak; the silo is thirty-eight or forty feet high.

The barn should, of course, have a good foundation of stone, brick or cement. On many farms it has been the practice to build a small shed here and there and the stock is scattered all over the farm. This causes an unnecessary lot of labor to care for them; also an unsightly appearance to the surroundings. In constructing a barn of this sort it will not be necessary to do all the work before the same may be used, but a portion of it may be left until time and perhaps your purse will allow it to be finished. —Wallace's Farmer.

Fuel from Annual Crops.

For the energy of future ages the United States has its enormous water power, and, as the coal diminishes, F. W. Ballard, addressing Ohio engineers, has suggested that a fuel supply may be developed from vegetation. The internal combustion is far more economical of fuel than the steam engine, 8-10ths of a pint of alcohol in the former producing one brake horse-power hour. A bushel of corn yields 2.5 gallons of alcohol, while a bushel of white potatoes yields 8-10ths gallon. The corn crop for 1905 in the United States was 2,700,000,000 bushels, sufficient to produce 20,000,000 horse-power for ten hours a day throughout the year, which is equal to two-thirds of the horse-power now used in the entire country. The land still available for agriculture is at least ten times that devoted to corn in 1905. The raising of yearly crops for fuel must add much to the importance of the new fertilizers from the nitrogen of the air, and it is noted that calcium nitrals, now produced electrically at $20 per ton, is claimed to be better than sodium nitrate costing $48 per ton.

Small Temporary Smokehouse.

If one butchers only once a year, says a correspondent of Farm and Home, it is not necessary to build an expensive smokehouse, for almost as good results can be obtained from a device such as the one shown herewith. It is made by taking both ends out of a barrel and mounting it upon a box or above a fireplace in the ground. The meat to be smoked is hung from the sticks laid across the top of the barrel, the fire built underneath and the lid put on.

SMALL BUT EFFECTIVE SMOKEHOUSE.

Feeding of Eggs.

Hens will not refuse to lay providing the conditons which surround them are favorable for egg production. Of course, a hen cannot keep on laying all the time, nor will some hens lay ever for a majority of the time, but the farmer who provides the correct conditions of housing, feeding and general management will find that he will not be entirely without eggs at any time of the year. Of course, it is not the hen's nature to lay at this time of the year, but if she is comfortably housed and well fed, the farmer will find that the hen after all really has little sentiment as to just which season she shall produce her eggs.

Getting eggs is not entirely a matter of feeding, yet if we feed correctly the hens will not have that as an actual obstacle to laying. Maturity and vigor are two important things in the hens that are to be heavy winter layers. Keep the hens in a thrifty, vigorous condition, and be sure and feed a variety. These things count for a great deal toward success. Corn, oats and wheat are the three principal grain feeds, but there are others that may well be fed by way of variety and the meat and green stuff in some form should never be neglected. Give any kind of meat scraps or prepared meat foods, as it pays. Try to keep the hens under conditions as near like those in existence at spring time as you can and you will not suffer severely from an egg famine. This is nothing impossible, and briefly, only means comfortable housing, a variety of feeds, green stuff and meat scraps, and sanitary quarters.—Agricultural Epitomist.

To Increase Fruit Yield.

One orchardist is said to have increased the yield of his orchard from fifteen to 250 bushels in the following manner: He reduced the tops of the trees one-fourth; then in the fall he plowed between the trees. After manuring well he planted corn, beans and pumpkins, and harvested a nice crop of each. The next spring he repeated the same form of cultivation, and that year, in addition to the good crops of corn, beans and pumpkins, harvested seventy bushels of good apples. The next spring he manured for the third time and planted potatoes, which did not do well, but he harvested 250 bushels of fine apples from the orchard.

Destruction by Rats.

There are those who declare that nothing is created in vain, and that rats and mice are in some way a benefit to mankind. It is hard to see just how. The statistician of the Agricultural Bureau at Washington computes that they create $15,000,000 damage a year. That is the real money damage, saying nothing of the annoyance. As an offset, the rat catchers of the world sell about $1,000,000 worth of skins per year, and the furriers work them and sell them for five times that sum. It is estimated that a full-grown rat will eat six bushels of corn per year.

Champion Butter Cow Dead.

Pedro's Estalia, champion butter cow of the world, with a record of 712 pounds in twelve months, was killed by an accident at the Missouri Agricultural College farm.

HOUSEHOLD TALKS

Good Hard Soap.

Put five pounds of grease over the fire and as it melts stir in a quarter of a pound of borax. When this is dissolved and the grease is a little more than lukewarm, turn into the kettle slowly a can of patent potash, dissolved in a quart and a pint of salt water. Stir steadily until all the ingredients are thoroughly incorporated, and you have a smooth, thick paste. Turn into molds, and when firm these should be cut into cakes.

Supper Salad.

Mix one and one-half cupfuls of cold cooked chicken, cut in cubes; one cucumber, pared and cut in cubes; one cupful of chopped English walnut meats, one-half cupful of French peas and a cupful of celery cut in small pieces, thoroughly chilled in ice water. Moisten with mayonnaise dressing and garnish with strips of canned red pepper arranged ribbon fashion, and celery tips.

Flannel Cakes.

One pint of sour milk, three teaspoonfuls of melted lard, three eggs well beaten, one teaspoonful of soda, flour to make a good batter. Mix well, beating the whites and yolks of the eggs separately, and adding the stiffened whites last of all. Fold in lightly and quickly, then bake the batter on a griddle as you would other pancakes. They are delicious.

Anise Seed Cookies.

Into two cups of granulated sugar stir five eggs, put over the fire and beat steadily until the mixture is lukewarm, then take from the range and beat until cool. Add enough flour to make a batter that can be poured without running, add anise seed to taste. Put by the teaspoonful on tins and set aside overnight. In the morning bake in a slow oven.

Egg Test.

Take a flat-bottomed dishpan, put at least four inches of water in it and drop the egg in the water. If fresh it will lie perfectly level; if it rises at the thick end in the least it is not fresh. The older the egg the more it rises at the thick end. If it should leave the botton and swim it is not fit for anything.

Butter Scotch.

Into a pound of brown sugar stir a cup of water and two tablespoonfuls of vinegar. Cook steadily for ten minutes, then stir in four tablespoonfuls of butter and cook until a little dropped into cold water hardens at once. Pour into buttered tins, and as it cools mark off into squares.

Nut Bread.

Two cups of milk, one-half cup of sugar, four cups of flour, one cup of broken nut meats, four teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one teaspoonful of salt, two beaten eggs. Put into greased pans and set aside for twenty minutes, then bake for thirty minutes in a moderate oven.

Spanish Stew.

Two pounds of beef ribs, one pint of canned tomatoes, one large onion, one red pepper, six cloves. Cover with a quart of water and simmer very slowly for two or three hours. Salt to taste and thicken the gravy with browned flour just before serving.

Lamb Chops.

A remedy for woolly taste of lamb chops. Rub chop thoroughly with a preparation of lemon juice and butter in the proportion of one teaspoonful of butter to two of lemon juice. Broil them; they are delicious.

Short Suggestions.

After cleaning ivory expose it to the sun. This assists in bleaching it.

Clean mahogany with cold drawn linseed oil and polish with clean cloths.

Marble should be washed with ammonia and water rather than with soap and water.

A great many blemishes on wall paper may be removed with a rubber on a lead pencil.

Dried lemon peel sprinkled over coals will destroy any disagreeable odor about the house.

Try a little lemon and salt mixed the next time a price mark sticks to the bottom of china dishes or bric-a-brac.

Kerosene will polish zinc, if it is rubbed on with a soft cloth until clean and then washing the zinc in boiling water.

Salts of lemon will remove ink stains from wooden floors. Use two tablespoonfuls to a quart of water and use no soap.

To soften the old paint brushes you used last year put them in a can of coal oil. When soft they can be washed in warm suds.

A flat trunk tray kept in the laundry will prove a great convenience. The napkins, doilies, lunch cloths, etc., may be laid out on it in neat separate piles.

A delicious flavor is added to the maraschino cherries used in or as a decoration for a fruit or other salad by stuffing them with pecan meats chopped rather coarse.

When making a flour paste to apply to wall paper always add some dissolved alum. The alum not only makes the starch hold better, but it will kill any insects in the walls.

To skim grease from soup in a hurry, use square sheets of clean tissue paper on the surface of the soup. Lay them on one at a time, lift off lightly and every bit of fat comes off.

One careful housekeeper always keeps a lump of charcoal in the drawer with her flat silver. She finds that the charcoal, absorbing any chance moisture, is a factor in keeping the silver bright.

RASH ALL OVER BODY.

Awful, Crusted, Weeping Eczema on Little Sufferer—A Score of Treatments Prove Dismal Failures—Cure Achieved by Cuticura.

"My little boy had an awful rash all over his body and the doctor said it was eczema. It was terrible and used to water awfully. Any place the water went it would form another sore and it would become crusted. A score or more physicians failed utterly and dismally in their efforts to remove the trouble. Then I was told to use the Cuticura Remedies. I got a cake of Cuticura Soap, a box of Cuticura Ointment and a bottle of Cuticura Resolvent, and before we had used half the Resolvent I could see a change in him. In about two months he was entirely well. George L. Lambert, 139 West Centre St., Mahanoy City, Pa., Sept. 26 and Nov. 4, 1907."

A Child Mathematician.

The best attested case of great mathematical computing powers in children was that of Vito Mangiamele, the son of a Sicilian peasant, who was only eleven years old. He was examined by a committee of French scientists, including such men as Arago, Libri and Lacroix. He found the cube root of 3,796,416 in half a minute, and the tenth root of 282,475,249 in three minutes.

Then came the poser. "What number has the following proportions—that if its cube is added to five times its square, and then forty-two times the number and the number forty be subtracted from the result, the remainder is zero?"

Arago repeated the question; but while he was repeating the last word of it the boy answered correctly, "The number is five."

Feather Duster a Germ Spreader.

Th giant "tickler" known to the housewife as the feather duster has won the enmity of the student of tuberculosis. The feather duster as a creator of miniature whirlwinds, is not to be despised. Like its natural prototype, the fruit of its labors is likely to be much ado about nothing, or worse. Its performances are never of any actual value, for the dust rises from one place only to settle down in another. In the case of the germs of tuberculosis which have previously been scattered by some thoughtless spitter afflicted with the white plague there is always a possibility that they may be included in the dust stirred up by the industrious duster. Therefore, the fighter against the spread of tuberculosis places a ban on the feather duster and proclaims that the proper way to sweep and to dust is to use moisture on the floor and a damp cloth on walls and furniture.

"Oh, well, there are more important preventive measures than discouraging the use of the feather dusters," perhaps someone exclaims, forgetting that some of the other remedies, such as better living conditions are harder to obtain, and that little details count when the active and persistent disease germ is to be opposed. It is difficult to convince persons whose rule for the acceptance of anything is "Seeing is believing," that germs are very real, although unseen and more dangerous than some elephants.

OLD SOAKERS

Get Saturated with Caffeine.

When a person has used coffee for a number of years and gradually declined in health, it is time the coffee should be left off in order to see whether or not that has been the cause of the trouble.

A lady in Huntsville, Ala., says she used coffee for about 40 years, and for the past 20 years was troubled with stomach trouble.

"I have been treated by many physicians but all in vain. Everything failed to perfect a cure. I was prostrated for some time, and came near dying. When I recovered sufficiently to partake of food and drink I tried coffee again and it soured on my stomach.

"I finally concluded coffee was the cause of my troubles and stopped using it. I tried tea and then milk in its place, but neither agreed with me, then I commenced using Postum. I had it properly made and it was very pleasing to the taste.

"I have now used it four months, and my health is so greatly improved that I can eat almost anything I want and can sleep well, whereas, before, I suffered for years with insomnia.

"I have found the cause of my troubles and a way to get rid of them. You can depend upon it I appreciate Postum."

Better Not Get Dyspepsia

If you can help it. Kodol prevents Dyspepsia, by effectually helping Nature to Relieve Indigestion. But don't trifle with Indigestion.

A great many people who have trifled with indigestion, have been sorry for it—when nervous or chronic dyspepsia resulted, and they have not been able to cure it.

Use Kodol and prevent having Dyspepsia.

Everyone is subject to indigestion. Stomach derangement follows stomach abuse, just as naturally and just as surely as a sound and healthy stomach results upon the taking of Kodol.

When you experience sourness of stomach, belching of gas and nauseating fluid, bloated sensation, gnawing pain in the pit of the stomach, heart burn (so-called), diarrhoea, headaches; dullness or chronic tired feeling—you need Kodol. And then the quicker you take Kodol—the better. Eat what you want, let Kodol digest it.

Ordinary pepsin "dyspepsia tablets," physics, etc., are not likely to be of much benefit to you, in digestive ailments. Pepsin is only a partial digester—and physics are not digesters at all.

Kodol is a perfect digester. If you could see Kodol digesting every particle of food, of all kinds, in the glass test-tubes in our laboratories, you would know this just as well as we do.

Nature and Kodol will always cure a sick stomach—but in order to be cured, the stomach must rest. That is what Kodol does—rests the stomach, while the stomach gets well. Just as simple as A, B, C.

Our Guarantee

Go to your druggist today and get a dollar bottle. Then after you have used the entire contents of the bottle if you can honestly say, that it has not done you any good, return the bottle to the druggist and he will refund your money without question or delay. We will then pay the druggist for the bottle. Don't hesitate, all druggists know that our guarantee is good. This offer applies to the large bottle only and to but one in a family. The large bottle contains 2½ times as much as the fifty cent bottle.

Kodol is prepared at the laboratories of E. C. DeWitt & Co., Chicago.

Does Not Stimulate

Ayer's Sarsaparilla does not stimulate. It does not make you feel better one day, then as bad as ever the next. It is not a strong drink. No reaction after you stop using it. There is not a drop of alcohol in it. You have the steady, even gain that comes from a strong tonic and alterative. We wish you would ask your doctor about this. He knows. Trust him. Do as he says. J. C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass.

What are Ayer's Pills? Liver Pills. How long have they been sold? Nearly sixty years. Do doctors recommend them? Ask your own doctor and find out.

There are times when things happen in a community that ought, in one sense, be published, and in another sense ought not. The Commercial is up against that proposition this week. Of course all the conditions must be considered. In a small place like Edon, the editor knows every one of his patrons personally, and it is policy for him to make as few enemies as possible. On the other hand people take the paper for the news and they are entitled to it. So there are the conditions. Will those who do not believe in suppressing the news, bear with us at this time, for the sake of innocent parties.—Edon Commercial. We understand that a sensational thing occurred at Edon last week, in which a business man and a married woman of that place were the star actors.

Woods Liver Medicine is a liver regulator which acts directly on this organ, invigorates and produces natural action. Brings quick relief to sick headache, constipation, biliousness and other symptoms of liver disorders. Particularly recommended for Jaundice, Chills, Fever and Malaria. The national government will build this summer one mile of permanent road in Williams county, from Dick's corners to West Jefferson. It is the policy of the United States government to build one mile of road in each county that requests it free of charge to the county. This mile will be constructed under the supervision of and after specifications approved by the national highway commission. The only expense to the county will be that of conveying the superintendent of construction from and to the work from Montpelier. This mile was designated by the commissioners as being central and one that would be used as much if not more than any other mile in the county. The purpose of this free construction is that it will serve as an object lesson in the benefits of and construction of improved highways.—Montpelier Leader.

THE STANDARD OF THE WORLD

ARRESTED FOR DISTURBING THE PEACE

Ralph Sommerlott, a nineteen year old boy from Waterloo, was this morning convicted in Judge E. P. Lash's court of disturbing the peace and in default of settlement of a fine and costs amounting to $11.20, he was taken to jail at Albion by Marshal O. F. Rimmel to spend twelve days. Sommerlott, it appears, came over from Waterloo Monday and with a companion started to do the town. At the Depot restaurant he became unruly and was thrown out of the place after damaging some of the furniture and later was found preparing to go back to bombard the place. The excitement happened last evening and he was locked in jail over night, pending his hearing this morning when he entered a plea of guilty. Sommerlott is a ditcher by occupation. —Kendallville News, May 4.

IRRESISTIBLE INDUCEMENTS TO INVESTORS AND HOMESEEKERS

Irrigated land near Rocky Ford, Colorado, earns $50 to $200 per acre profit every year.

Rich soil, irrigation and Colorado sunshine insure wonderful crops, astonishing profits, health and happiness. Land in the Otero Irrigation District at La Junta, Colorado, will produce crops of greater value than any other land.

RESERVOIR AND CANALS

An enormous storage reservoir, holding four hundred and nine million cubic feet of water with perfect system of canals, has been completed to provide an abundant and absolutely certain supply of water for irrigation on these 10,000 acres of new and wonderfully fertile land at all seasons of the year.

LA JUNTA

The county seat of Otero county, a prosperous, growing city of 6,500 population, located at the junction of three divisions of the Santa Fe railroad. Good schools, churches all denominations, 1,200 men employed in Santa Fe shops, four sugar factories near our land, delightful summers and mild, sunny winters, and an ideal locality to make your home.

PROFITS

Forty acres will easily earn you $2,500 to $4,000 profit a year. Own 20 or 40 acres of this land and you are independent for life. You can raise a bumper crop the first year and frequently the first crop will pay your entire purchase price of the land, if bought at our present prices: Good tracts $50, $60, $70, $80 and $90 per acre.

GUARANTEED LAND

Here is a proposition that will make the banker or conservative investor take notice. It shows the confidence the present owners have in the soil, water right and future values of this land.

HERE IS THE GUARANTEE

1st. La Junta Land Co. agrees to buy back the land at the expiration of five years if purchaser wishes.

2nd. They agree to pay back full purchase price plus 30 per cent, which is five years interest at 8 per cent.

3rd. Purchaser of the land can take off five crops and then get the cost of his land back with 30 per cent interest.

We will prove to your entire satisfaction that this guarantee is as good as gold.

If we prove to you beyond question that the guarantee is good, our proposition ought to be attractive to the most conservative investor. It is five crops off the land—better than a 6 per cent first mortgage—and with more than an even chance of selling at a double or treble advance within the five year period.

INVESTORS

You can save the time and expense to go and select the land. It will be to our advantage to select the best land for you where we guarantee to buy it back at 30 per cent advance.

To those who are unable to go and inspect the land and wish to purchase under this guarantee, we submit the following agreement:

1st. We will submit a price list with the appraised value of every 40 acres marked in plain figures.

2nd. To those who will state to us in writing the price of land and number of acres desired, we will guarantee to select as good land as remains unsold at the price requested at the time the application reaches our office.

3rd. The citizens, officials, banks and heads of county institutions of La Junta, Otero county, have endorsed the land and Otero Irrigation System, and we shall deal with purchasers to merit these endorsements.

This is the best land and water right for sale in the entire west.

With this guarantee added from a company whose responsibility is beyond question, every acre of the entire tract ought to sell within 90 days.

Do you know of another proposition that offers such prospects of profit with every chance to lose eliminated?

Write for folder, map and price list.

NO TWO WAYS ABOUT IT

THE stores that do a credit business are sure to lose a lot of money on credits. The fellow who pays his bills must make up the loss which dead beats make. The family who lives within their means and follows the "pay as you go policy," never gets into financial trouble—and then it is profitable too—you can buy cheaper. Try the new one price cash store.

CASH BUYING AND SELLING IS THE SECRET OF LOW PRICE

THE money you can save in a year will make a nice "nest egg" in a bank if you trade at a cash store. Credit stores usually have their goods marked with secret letters or characters so as to get a long price whenever they can. Whether you buy of us or not it will pay you to look here. It will keep you from paying fancy prices.

Farnsworth's Store Bought at 75c on the Dollar

THIS IS A CHANCE IN A LIFE TIME FOR YOU TO BUY GOODS

6c Calico 4c

TWO thousand yards of Calico, full pieces in all colors. This is Americans and Simpsons. Also a big lot of standard apron Ginghams. This is one of the many examples of the power of cash buying and cash selling. Holden's cash price

4c

F. L. Farnsworth has sold his store to the W. R. Holden Co. at seventy-five cents on the dollar. Beginning Saturday morning, May 8, the new proprietors will start a sale to cut this big stock down one half. Every article in this store will be sold at cut price---Everything will be reduced. This is a chance in a life time to supply your needs at cut prices. $30,000.00 worth of goods to choose from. This business is to be run along lines that will be new to the people of Butler. We have bought this stock for spot cash, and will pay spot cash for all goods which we buy in the future. In this way we can get the very lowest prices and the best discount. We will sell all goods for cash and will not deviate in any case. This might appear to be a hardship to some people at first, but we are sure it will be better for all concerned. We will mark all goods in plain figures--there will be no secrets, no subterfuge. We will treat everyone alike---same treatment, same price and that price will be as low or lower than any competition. We invite comparison with any store or the Chicago mail order houses. We have set our stakes to double the splendid business which this store has been doing. We can only do this by buying and selling for cash. We won't have to charge you extra to make up for the loss on dead beats. The following prices will give you an idea of what the new store is doing. Watch our business grow.

$2 Oxfords $1.48

A GLIMPSE OF TURKEY ITS PAST AND PRESENT

(Written by Mrs. W. L. Blair, Butler, Ind.)

More than two centuries before the Ottoman empire was heard of a mighty race of men held sway over a great part of eastern Europe Their primitive home was supposed to be the steppes of the Asiatic continent. More than eight centuries ago they began to migrate from their barren plains, and tribe after tribe poured down upon the pleasant plains and rich valleys of the south.

These people were called Seljukan Turks from their traditionary patriarch, Sel-juk Kahan, who in the 9th century consolidated a mighty empire, making themselves masters of nearly all of Asi. - minor, Syria, Mesopotamia, Armenia and a part of Persia and western Turkestan. For two centuries the Seljuks held sway over all these vast domains and then were displaced by their own vassals.

The Ottoman Turks, unlike the invaders of Great Britain, were of the same race, but like them they first came as allies, from allies they became invaders and from invaders became conquerors.

The advent of the Ottoman Turks into the empire was like this: A little band of emigrants left their home in Khorissan about the beginning of the 13th century and settled in Armenia for awhile, becoming tired of this country they started to follow the course of the Euphrates towards Syria when their leader, Solomon Shak, was accidentally drowned. A great part of the tribe dispersed, but a remnant followed Etroghul, Solomon's son, who pressed forward to seek a home in As'a-minor.

One day he came suddenly upon a small portion of Aladdins army who were being attacked by a body of Tartars, the deadly enemies of the Turks. The Mongols were rapidly gaining the day when the horsemen of Ertoghrul darted suddenly upon them and victory was decided for the Seljuks. The sultan was not slow to reward his unexpected allies. He gave them the valley of Sangaria or Sultanoni, with the city of Sugut as their capital. This battle occurred near where the cities of Brusa and Nicaea now stand. With all this rich country at their command they became a wealthy and powerful tribe.

At Sugut in 1258, was born Ottman, the son of Ertoghrul, who became the founder of the Ottoman empire, a title they were so proud of that until recent years they never degraded themselves by giving themselves as Turks. After the death of Aladdin Ottman instituted a series of conquests which led to the founding of the Ottoman empire, which for more than three centuries stood with undiminished glory, and now after all these years it stands lord over many lands, although shorn of much of its glory.

From Ertoghrul to Abdul Hamid, the late deposed sultan of Turkey, thirty-five Princes of the male line have ruled the Ottoman empire without a break in the succession. There is no such example of continuous authority of a single family in the history of Europe. But this wonderful line of succession has not been maintained without great bloodshed, a cruel system of fratricide was practiced for centuries. It was brought about in this manner at the beginning of Ottman's reign.

In a great battle with the allied powers of Europe in 1389, the sultan, Orkan, was assassinated in his tent near Bosnia by a Serbian warrior who pretended he had important tidings for his private ear, and when brought into his tent he knelt before him and plunged a dagger into his heart and Bayeziel who is sometimes known as Yildirim or Thunderbolt from his courage and rapidity of motion was saluted as sultan by the army and in sight of the dead body of his father the new ruler immediately put a dagger into the heart of his brother, Yakieb, who had fought valiantly by his side all day, and from that time each successive ruler upon coming to the throne put to death every brother and male heir to the throne so there could not possibly be any strife for mastery among the heirs. It is stated in history that some of the Princes on coming to the throne went so far as to exterminate their fathers' Harem, so that no unborn heir in after years might lay claim to the throne This was the ancient policy of the Turkish rulers, but at the present time they are kept in close confinement, but not put to death, which was the case with the new incumbent of the Turkish throne, Mohammed, Reschad Effendi.

Supreme head of church and state, the Ottoman sultan was always an absolute and irresponsible sovereign, free to act as he pleased, so that he observes the commandment of the Karan. Once the Sublime Porte ruled not only the narrow territory now called Turkey in Europe, but Greece, Bulgaria, eastern Roumania, Serbia, Bosnia and Herz-govina with the Crimea, and a portion of southern Russia, Asia-minor to the borders of Persia, Egypt, Syria, Tripoli, Tunis, Algiers and numerous isles of the Mediterranean sea and the vast deserts of Arabia, but at the present time her total population cannot be over fifty millions and the square mile not more than two millions.

The Turkish national debt which came into existence during the Crimean war has been growing perilously large, and what is worse for the Parte only a small part of it was borrowed at home. The great mass had been raised by a loan from the Catholics of western Europe and chiefly from the London market Their promise to pay half the interest and give security for the remainder has proved worthless, and their declaration of insolvency on the part of Turkey has done much to create the belief that the government is nearing its end.

The only thing that prevents the allied powers of Europe today from falling upon and utterly annihilating her is natural jealousy, for who ever succeeds in taking Constantinople, that great natural gateway of commerce, will hold the balance of power over all other nations. Even at the present each nation stands with uplifted hands watching and waiting to fall upon and strike the decisive blow at any moment when the ripe fruit will be most likely to fall into their basket.

The Turks are a blot upon European civilization. They are aliens in religion, and have been more hostile to christianity than any other faith. They have waged war against the cross of Christ for a thousand years.

The magnificence which distinguished the reign of these oriental monarchs and their unexampled splendors which has been the theme of story and song is a thing of the past Sufficient to say that old Turkey with its laws, its gorgeous ceremonies, its pomp and splendor is gone forever, and as the enfeebled old ruler has passed out of his gilded palace into obscurity over forgetfulness, so must the nation itself with its corrupt forms of government pass out into obscurity before the all conquering faith of the christian world.

Too Much Sympathy.

Dr. Simon Flexner, discussing the anti-vivisectionists in New York, said that their sympathy for animals was as misplaced as the sympathy of Aurelien Scholl's Frenchman. This Frenchman, he exclaimed, unluckily bought an almanac that gave the dates of the world's chief events. From that day on he lived a life of mourning. Thus, on April 30, he had crape on his hat.

"Have you lost a relative?" a friend asked. "Not exactly," said he. "But to-day is a sad anniversary for the French people. On April 30, 1524, the Chevalier Bayard died." On May 2 he had the crape on again. "Still mourning Bayard?" said the friend. "No," said he; "but don't you remember that on May 2 a great and charming poet, Alfred de Musset, breathed his last?" On the sixth of the same month with the same crape on, he was asked: "Whom are you mourning for now?" For an honest man; Gen. Cavalgnac." On the 30th, crying terribly, he said: "Ah, Joan of Arc! On this date, in 1431, a handful of Englishmen and a miserable bishop put the gallant maid to death." On July 13 he took a bath in memory of the assassination of Marat. On the 16th Beranger's death gave him an awful shock. On the 18th, having read of Napoleon's departure to St. Helena, he felt better, but on the 23d the bombardment of Dieppe by the English, in 1694, confined him again to his bed. He was taken with a fever and died on the 22d, muttering: "In a month, the massacre of St. Bartholomew!"

The Noonday of Life

Married people should learn what to do for one another's little ills, and for the ills of children that may come They are sure sooner or later to have occasion to treat constipation or indigestion. SETTLING SIBERIA.

Vast Migrations of Russians Across the Ural Mountains.

A great new nation is forming in Siberia. One of the most gigantic migrations in history has been proceeding so quietly that the world generally has not noticed the movement.

During the past 12 months over 500,000 Russians have gone to Siberia, or equal to half the number of immigrants the United States received during that period from the whole earth.

Prince Vassiltchikoff, minister of agriculture, has furnished the Duma with the following figures of the migration acros the Ural mountains. For several years before 1906 it was 60,000 annually. In 1906 it was 180,000. In 1907 it was 400,000. In the first three months of this year it was 420,000, comprising 70,000 families. The accounts of Siberia brought home by the soldiers returning from the Russo-Japanese war impressed the poverty-stricken Moujiks with glowing ideas of Siberia's vast natural wealth. They also have little faith in the measures the grand council of the empire is taking to settle the burning agrarian question. The emigrants seldom go singly or even in families, but gather in colonies for the exodus.

Best Treatment for Colds

"Most ordinary colds will yield to the simplest treatment," says the Chicago Tribune, "moderate laxatives, hot foot baths, a free perspiration and an avoidance of exposure to cold and wet after treatment." While this treatment is simple, it requires considerable trouble, and the one adopting it must remain in doors for a day or two, or a fresh cold is almost sure to be contracted, and in many instances pneumonia follows. Is it not better to pin your faith to an old reliable preparation like Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, that is famous for its cures of colds and can always be depended upon? For sale by Geo. W. Geddes. 16 3

Confusion.

Lillian Braithwaite Hill, the noted writer of humorous advertisements, replied, at a banquet of haberdashers in St. Joseph, to an attack, by a business rival, on advertising humor.

"My friend," said Miss Hill, "says the public wants seriousness, not humor, in its 'ads.' But he contradicts himself horribly as he states his case. His facts seem to me as confused and absurd as the obituary of his wife's death that a Milwaukee man sent to a Milwaukee editor I know.

"This obituary said:

"'Mine wife Gretchen is dead. If she had lived till next Friday she'd been dead just two weeks yet. As a tree falls, so must it stand.'"

For Constipation

Mr. L. H. Farnham, a prominent druggist of Spirit Lake, Iowa, says: "Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets are certainly the best thing on the market for constipation." Give these tablets a trial. You are certain to find them agreeable and pleasant in effect. Price, 25 cents. Samples free. For sale by Geo. W. Geddes. 16-3

MAKES RAILROAD MEN TIRED.

Interesting Misinformation Which the Public Reads and Believes.

There is a whole lot of tommyrot talked about the railroad locomotive that is in modern fast passenger service. It is worse when some one who doesn't know begins to write about it. Some time ago an extremely interesting piece of misinformation went the rounds of the press.

According to the story, a writer was asking a locomotive engineer as the writer sat in the cab at a 60-mile clip talking, what would the engineer do if suddenly in front of them at a crossing a big automobile, filled with passengers, should run up fairly across the tracks and stick.

"You'd shut off steam and throw on the emergency air?" suggested the writer, presumably in conversational tones.

"Not on your life," was the unexpected response of the eagle-eyed man sitting at the right of the cab with his hand on the throttle.

"You wouldn't?" exclaimed the writer, probably a little louder than he had talked before.

"No," replied the engineer, "for if I did so I'd probably kill twice as many people in the train as I could possibly kill in the auto. We'd probably telescope half the cars in the train!"

Old locomotive engineers are disgusted with a story of this kind and from two absolutely unchallenged grounds. In the first place, with a 190-ton locomotive making 60 miles an hour a conversation of the kind could no more be carried on in the cab than conversation could be carried on between this earth and the planet Mars. And, in the second place, the higher the speed of the train, the more safely the throttle may be closed, the reverse lever thrown over and the emergency brakes applied.

Speaking of these cab "conversaziones" at 60 miles an hour, there is the story of a few months ago when Miss Ethel Roosevelt took her seat in the cab, holding the throttle lever, and at sixty-five miles an hour engaged in airy conversation with other visitors present. In summer weather, when the cab of a giant locomotive is thrown wide open to the air and a 60-mile clip is indulging, one might take a shot with a 38-caliber revolver point blank at the engineer on the other side of the cab, and unless the bullet passed close to his ear it's doubtful if he'd know it.

As to the reverse lever and the air brakes, the faster the train is running the less effect the action shows. At twenty-five miles an hour these emergency measures might unseat half the passengers, and at twelve miles some one likely would go through an end window somewhere. But under full speed every force that can be employed in stopping is simple and easy.

The ordinary man trying to speak of a giant locomotive in passenger service is almost certain to speak of her as a "mogul." Years ago the mogul type of machine stood for the largest and best in railroading. Some of them are in freight service still, but as the giant racer of the rails, the 194-ton Pacific type of locomotive is standard, looking as little like the old mogul as a sunbonnet looks like a Merry Widow hat.

Prolonging Life

While no way has yet been found to make life perpetual it is a fact that life can be prolonged. Many people die before their time because the organs become clogged and cannot do their work To keep the body open, active and free from impurities there must be no constipation, dyspepsia, flatulency, liver troubles, etc. If old or young people suffer from these complaints they can find a ready cure with Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It is absolutely guaranteed to do what is claimed, and if you want to try it before buying, send your address for a free sample bottle to Pepsin Syrup Co., 119 Caldwell Bldg., Monticello, Ill. It is sold by all druggists at 50c and $1 a bottle. 18-1m

The Home Portrait Gallery.

The two following stories are sufficient aptly to illustrate the homely frankness and primitive simplicity to be found in the negro mind:

On the library wall of a Southern home there hung two black silhouettes of revolutionary ancestors of the family. One day Cora, the maid, in dusting the pictures, turned to her mistress and asked:

"Miss Mary, who is dem folks in dot picture?"

"They are my great-grandfather and great-grandmother, Cora. He was one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence, and a great man in his day," proudly replied the woman.

"Lawd, Miss Mary!" responded Cora with wide open eyes and in an awe-struck whisper, "was dey black folks?"

Cora must have been a near neighbor of Susan, who was the author of an original opinion of Rosa Bonheur. Susan's mistress had among her photographs one of the famous animal painter, taken in her usual working costume of bloomers and blouse.

"Miss Jennie," asked Susan, "who is dat quare lookin' man?"

"That is not a man, Susan," replied the mistress; "it is Rosa Bonheur, the great painter."

"Well," replied Susan after a prolonged inspection, "she sho' do favor her pa."

DOES NOT CONCERN US.

That Much-talked-of Question of the Great City Which Never Fail.

The question of the exhaustion of the coal supply of the United States is not one which can affect the present generation or the next, says a writer in Harper's Weekly. Yet the American supply is likely to be exhausted before that of Europe, and particularly before that of Great Britain. Looking at the matter from the point of view of national providence or provision, covering generations and generations, America should beyond doubt be a little saving of its coal.

It has been estimated that Pennsylvania has about enough anthracite coal to last at the rate of production that prevailed last year, a little less than 200 years. Probably the supply will be exhausted much sooner than that, unless some profitable substitute is found for anthracite. As to bituminous coal in the United States, the supply is very great and widespread. It is estimated that it will last, at the rate of consumption which prevailed during the last decade, something less than 450 years.

If the coal supply of the world at large were likely to be exhausted in any such way as to make a considerable drain on American coals for foreign consumption, the situation might be regarded as alarming if we could put ourselves in the place of our great-grandchildren. But there is not likely to arrive a time when we shall have to "feed the world" with coal.

In 1880 Great Britain had "in sight," so to speak—although it was all below the ground—an available coal deposit estimated at nearly 885,000,000,000 tons. At the rate of production and consumption then prevailing, the supply would last about 900 years. The coal measures of Lancashire are 9,000 feet in thickness.

Moreover, there are many countries which possess coal deposits that have never been touched. Besides the great coal fields of Europe and America, as now worked, there are undoubtedly coal deposits in China, in the Philippines, in Australia, in South America, in British North America, in Alaska, in the Indian archipelago and elsewhere.

With one circumstance the American people, looking at the matter from the consumer's standpoint, may well be pleased. Europe does not want our anthracite coal—the best fuel, on the whole, that the earth has ever produced. Europe does not understand the use of anthracite, and is apparently not willing to learn it. It calls on us for bituminous coal, which we can spare more readily.

The asumption that the coal fields of Great Britain and America will be exhausted even at the end of several centuries is founded on the further assumption that heat will continue to be made and power generated in the future much as they are now. But our inventors and chemists hold out the assurance that great changes may be looked for in the methods of producing heat and mechanical energy.

Partnership Dissolved

The partnership existing between Davis A. Baker and J. B. Pessel, known as the Butler Ice Cream Co. and the Butler Elgin Creamery Co., has been dissolved, Mr. Baker taking over the entire interests of Mr. Pessell. The latter will work for Mr. Baker for a while, until a man conversant with the ice cream business can be secured.

A. C. Howard, of Concord, Mich., has been employed as butter maker, and will look after that department of the industry. The ice cream and butter business has grown to large proportions in Butler, and we hope to see Mr. Baker prosper to a much greater extent.

The Sultan's Name.

American and English newspapers have a way of mangling the name of the Sultan of Turkey. Often he is called simply "Abdul"—nothing more. Sometimes it is "Abdul the Artful," "Abdul the Wary." The proper way to write the name, according to the London Chronicle, is "Abd-ul-Hamid," or, as some would translate it, "Abd-'l-Hamid." This means "Servant (or slave) of the praised one," i. e., God, or Allah. The "ul" or "l" merely represents the Arabic definite article, which in writing is always joined to the following word. "Abd" is a common first name with Mohametans, as in Abd-ul-Kadir, Abd-ul-Latif, Abd-ul-Aziz "Abdul," with or without the Hamid, makes nonsense, but no one seems to notice it. On this principle George du Maurier might be called "Georgedu" for short, and T. P. O'Connor would lose his nationality under the Italian-looking disguise of "Thomaso."

Forced Into Exile

Wm Upchurch, of Glen Oak, Okla., was an exile from home. Mountain air, he thought, would cure a frightful lung-racking cough that had defied all remedies for two years After six months he returned, death dogging his steps "Then I began to use Dr. King's New Discovery," he writes, "and after taking six bottles I am as well as ever." It saves thousands yearly from desperate lung diseases Infallible for Coughs and Colds, it dispels Hoarseness and Sore Throat. Plain but Sufficient.

The late Josiah W. Leeds of Philadelphia was notable for his lifelong fight against immodesty. Mr. Leeds reformed the theatrical poster, he elevated painting, and in a number of cases he even succeeded in having nude statuary draped. He loved simplicity as he loved modesty. Ostentation he abhorred—especially the ostentation of funerals and cemeteries. He used often to quote an epitaph that he had once seen in a secluded graveyard. This epitaph, which was cut on the simplest, cheapest stone it is possible to imagine, said:

"The monument is very plain, no doubt, but all the money in the world would not have brought our poor dear father back to us again."

A Cleveland poet wants to sleep a thousand years. Poets always were dreamers.

NEW YORK'S THREE.

Prominent Characteristics of the Great City Which Never Fail.

"New York has three characteristics," said an old business man, "that it pays to bear in mind, for you can always bank on one of them pulling you through any kind of trouble. It is, in the first place, sympathetic. It also has a keen sense of htumor and every man in it is more or less of a gambler and will always take a chance.

"I have myself had occasion to test it all three ways and it never yet failed me. When I first came to town I had to appeal to its sympathies pretty strongly on one or two different occasions, but my appeal was always answered. Later on business transactions taught me how strongly the gambling spirit existed in every man in the city, or more than one of my deals had no more justification than that it was merely taking a chance, and a long one at that.

"It was only recently, however, that I personally tested the town's sense of humor. More than once my friends told me, if you ever get in a very tight place, don't be afraid to turn the situation into a joke, because it is more than likely to get you out. And the other day I tried it in a small way.

"The loss by accident or pickpocket down at Coney Island of my available supply of cash left me stranded some distance from home. Park Row, however, held out great allurement to me in the way of ready capital could I once get there. The last thing I had purchased before the loss of my money was a box of cigarettes, for which I had paid 20 cents. I had smoked only one and, at the rate of two cents each the cigarettes that remained were worth 18 cents. I boarded a car and gravely offered the box to the conductor. He looked at me a trifle hard for a moment or two and then took the box and rang up the fare. He seemed to appreciate the humor of the situation and saved me something of a walk."

Kills Her Foe of 20 Years

"The most merciless enemy I had for 20 years," declares Mrs. James Duncan, of Haynesville, Me., "was Dyspepsia. I suffered intensely after eating or drinking and could scarcely sleep. After many remedies had failed and several doctors gave me up, I tried Electric Bitters, which cured me completely. Now I can eat anything I am 70 years old and am overjoyed to get my health and strength back again." Rheumatism

More than nine out of every ten cases of rheumatism are simply rheumatism of the muscles, due to cold or damp, or chronic rheumatism. In such cases no internal treatment is required. The free application of Chamberlain's Liniment is all that is needed, and it is certain to give quick relief. Give it a trial and see for yourself how quickly it relieves the pain and soreness. The medicines usually given internally for rheumatism are poisonous or very strong medicines. They are worse than useless in case of chronic and muscular rheumatism. For sale by Geo. W. Geddes. 16 3

Were Modern Safeties.

"Once," related the tall tragedian with the Shakespearean hair, "I was stranded in the wilds of Georgia. Night came and still I had sighted no help. Suddenly I found myself surrounded by a drove of razorback hogs. Ah, gentlemen, when morning came——"

"Hold on," interrupted the fat comedian, "don't spring any such yarns as that on the innocent. Razorback hogs are known to be exceedingly vicious and if you had been surrounded by a drove of them you would have never seen morning. They would have eaten you up, even to the pawn ticket for your watch."

The tall tragedian scratched his chin in deep meditation.

"No, me lord, you are wrong," he said finally. "There are exceptions in all cases. You see, these happened to be safety razorback hogs."

Object to Strong Medicines

Many people object to taking the strong medicines usually prescribed by physicians for rheumatism. There is no need of internal treatment in any case of muscular or chronic rheumatism, and more than nine out of every ten cases of the disease are of one or the other of these varieties. When there is no fever and little (if any) swelling, you may know that it is only necessary to apply Chamberlain's Liniment freely to get quick relief. Try it. For sale by Geo. W. Geddes. 16-3

The Best Pride.

Lord Granard, one afternoon during the Newport tennis tournaments last month, talked most entertainingly to a group of ladies about ancestral pride.

"Ancestral pride is an excellent thing," he said, "but there are better things. We have long felt in Great Britain that there are better things. I heard the sentiment rather neatly expressed last season by a duchess Hers is a great family, but she was talking to a young marquis whose family is incomparably greater. He is a rather worthless, lazy, dissipated young marquis, and he boasted to the duchess about his people.

"'I am very proud of my ancestry, you know,' he ended.

"'Yes,' said the duchess, 'and you have cause to be, but I wonder how your ancestry would feel about you?'"

Manners Are Different.

Manners are different in different parts of the world, and even the short space of the English channel makes a difference. On the British side a lady bows first to a man whom she knows and on the French side she would never think of bowing until the man had first recognized her. In England a man rises to open the door for a lady and in France such a proceeding would be considered officious. In France the stranger makes the first call, and in England it is, of course, the older resident who makes the advance.

Millions In It

From Fort Wayne comes the information that Auburn is to have a new daily, a morning edition to be fathered by the merchants of Fort Wayne with Kist, of the Fort Wayne Journal-Gazette News bureau and O. H. Downey of various places as editors and publishers. It is said that the Fort Wayne Merchants' association is behind the scheme and will furnish the advertising to support the project the same as they are doing now for the Garrett Press.—Waterloo Dawn.

We don't believe the retail merchants of Fort Wayne are crazy enough to go into such a scheme. They are far too shrewd to put their money into such a "rat hole."

There are a number of residences in town that ought to be wired for electric lights. The convenience, cleanliness and safety of this manner of lighting once experienced would convince anyone that they are a good investment Besides it is consistent with a desire to advance the town's general welfare that we patronize the public utilities we now have and what is true of electric lighting is also true of the city water conveniences.

Several men whose business keeps them a part of the time in the rural districts state that fully one-third of the wheat crop in DeKalb county is ruined. The unusual number of windy days and the frequent freezing and thawing weather was very detrimental. In fruits the situation is different as the recent frosts had no ill effect. The thing that saved fruit was the late spring. The buds are not as well developed as they ordinarily would have been in an early spring and for that reason they did not suffer.

The Albion public school will close May 21. W. The graduates, twelve in number, have chosen the Rev. Harry Kleckner, of St. Mark's Lutheran church, to deliver the baccalaureate sermon at the Methodist Episcopal church, May 16. Prof Wirt Lowther, of Dwight, Ill., will deliver the lecture on the evening of the commencement, which will be held at the opera house, May 19.

Auditor Shook received a letter to hand to the county commissioners at their May session that is unique indeed. It comes from Bill Sherlock at the county infirmary and is a special request for a new set of false teeth with a plea for two gold crowns in "front as they show more when I laugh." The matter is now in the hands of the board and possibly the president of the board will appoint Auditor Shook as a committee to make some measurements. Perhaps Mr. Shook will find it wise to ask Cal VanAuken, civil engineer, to assist him so that a perfect fit may be secured.

We received a letter the other day which leads us to believe that the plague of the "prayer chain" has at last reached Butler. If we thought we were the only victim to receive this senseless piece of mail matter we should bear our provocation in silence. But knowing that these pests travel in "schools" and "herds" and are often the cause of worry and anxiety we wish to say that the whole thing is a fabrication and is no doubt the product of some misguided mind. Any person acquainted with the teachings of the scriptures hardly needs to be told that the whole tenor of the letter is out of harmony with the spirit of christianity and consequently should be treated with indifference. If the letter and the "calamity" is placed in the waste basket the time and money used on more noble efforts than working on other people's sympathies more lasting good can be accomplished.

Minister of Church of Christ.

FALSE STATEMENT BY AUBURN COURIER

Last Friday's issue of the Auburn Courier contains an article regarding the imprisonment of Jay Culbertson, which is not only a fabrication and prevarication, but an imposition upon one of our worthy citizens.

The facts are that week before last the defendant, Jay Culbertson, assaulted a young boy by the name of George Lysher who was working at the home of Christian Teutsch two miles west of Butler. The boy came to town and told his story to the deputy prosecuting attorney, Frank A. Brink, who drew an affidavit for warrant and filed the same with Justice Webster. The defendant was arrested and brought before the Squire. The boy testified to the assault and exhibited the bruises to the court. His evidence was corroborated by Christian Teutsch and practically admitted by the defendant.

The Justice imposed a fine of $1 00 and costs. In default of bond, a mittimus was issued and placed in the hands of the constable, but before the defendent was taken to Auburn, Chris Teutsch, who was employing the defendent in the construction of a building, came before the court and deposited the necessary money and the defendant was released.

On Monday of last week, Mr. Teutsch not feeling satisfied, surrendered the defendant into the custody of the constable and demanded his deposit which was of necessity paid back to him and the defendant recommitted. After nearly an hour of endeavor on the part of defendant to get a bond and failing to do so, he was placed in the city lockup and the sheriff notified.

As to defendant's story that Christian Teutsch offered to go his bond, we know this to be absolutely false, as Christian Teutsch surrendered him into court for the express purpose of being released as bondsman and utterly refused there after to go upon his bond or assist him in any way.

According to the article in the Courier, the defendant now claims that he tendered a bond, and we feel safe in saying that the defendant could not have procured a bond if he had been given a week's time to do it in.

The Oberlin Grocery Co. have announced that they will erect a two-story brick building on their lot on the west side of Broadway, recently purchased from Wilcox & Campbell. The upper floor will be used for office rooms and will rent very readily.

The old Gen. nagel house and the barber shop building have been moved from the lot, and Mr. Seltenright, who has the contract to build the new structure, commenced work this week, and operations will be rushed.

The Oberlin Grocery Co. has shown a very commendable and enterprising spirit in their new venture, and their store will certainly beautify the appearance of the street very much.

Mr. Seltenright is noted for his excellent work and the Oberlin people can rest assured that they will have as fine a home for their large and growing business as any firm in the state.

We hope to see other improvements made along Broadway this year.

What well directed advertising will do for a business has been fully demonstrated the past week in Butler. The W. R Holden Co. placed a full page ad in the HERALD and sent out six thousand bills. Their store has been crowded with buyers the past week, many people coming to this city from points ten to twenty miles distant. The Holden people are enterprising and will continue their energetic campaign. The purchasing public will do well to read their future announcements.

The second statement of the First National bank appears in this issue, and shows a nice gain in business over the first statement made in February. The First National is ably and conservatively managed. It is purely a home institution, having many of the wealthiest and most prominent citizens of the county as stockholders. The bank is bound to grow much faster in the future, as people who have money to deposit realize that it is a permanent institution and ready to do its whole share in promoting the city's interest.

Nearly every family in Butler reads the HERALD Those who are not subscribers manage to borrow the paper each week and thereby get as much benefit as those who pay their cash for it. One of our subscribers informs us that five people manage to borrow his HERALD every week. Any one of these could afford to subscribe instead of annoying their neighbors. We would like to send you the paper. If you want to read the news it will pay you to enroll your name on our list. We give you four times as much for your money as our competitor.

JUDGE W. L. PENFIELD DIES AT WASHINGTON

Judge William L. Penfield, died at his home in Washington, D. C., early Sunday morning after a long illness due to a complication of heart and stomach troubles. The funeral services were held Thursday morning, May 13, and the remains were interred in Rock Creek cemetery at Washington.

He was a brilliant lawyer. He was admitted to the bar in 1872, and the following year located at Auburn, Ind. He practiced successfully from the start, and attained a wide reputation as an able lawyer and a brilliant pleader. In 1894, he was nominated by the republicans for the office of judge of the Thirty-fifth judicial circuit and was elected by a majority of 1,678. He was rated as one of the leaders of the bench in northern Indiana.

In 1884, Judge Penfield was a member of the republican state committee, and in the campaign four years subsequently he was elected elector and was chosen by the Indiana college to convey the state's official vote to Washington. He was one of the district delegates to the national convention of 1892 at Minneapolis. In 1897, he was appointed solicitor to the state department, and in that position he won international fame. He had to deal with many questions of the gravest importance and represented this government several times on difficult missions to European governments. He was also the legal adviser of the American representatives to the peace conferences held at The Hague.

In 1904, Judge Penfield was a candidate for the republican nomination for governor and was defeated by J. Frank Hanly. Since then he had lived in Washington, where he practiced law.

Judge Penfield married, shortly after his graduation, Miss Luna Walters, of Ohio. Four children were born to them, of whom two are living, a daughter and a son, Walter, who is now also practicing law in Washington.

As solicitor from 1897 to 1905, he won the complete confidence of Secretary of State Hay and had a large influence in shaping the policies of the state department.

HELD MANY IMPORTANT POSTS

He was counsel for the United States in the famous "Pius fund case," in the Venezuelan arbitration before The Hague tribunal in 1903, and general counselor for the United States government in the Emery claim against the Nicaraguan government. He was counsel for this country in international arbitration between the United States and San Domingo, Hayti, Nicaragua, Guatemala, Salvador and Mexico, wherein awards amounting to $2,500,000 were given in favor of the United States. In 1905, he was special commissioner to Brazil.

Methodist Services

At the Methodist church next Sunday morning the minister will preach, his text being I. Tim. 4 8, "Godliness is profitable unto all things, having promise of the life that now is, and of that which is to come." The theme is "Why I am a Christian."

1. Because the Bible account of man's origin and destiny is the only intelligible explanation of cause and effect.
2. I can the more readily believe hat mind antedated matter than to hink that matter antedated mind.
3. As a christian I can have peace with my conscience.
4. As a christian I am assured of life in the world to come. Two worlds are mine. Immortality is my inheritance.
5. When I leave this happy world I can die in triumph, and say, O death where is thy sting; O grave where is thy victory?
6. As a christian I can do more good and be more helpful to those about me.

In the evening the sermon will be a confidential talk to young people. The choir will furnish excellent music. The public invited to all these meetings. Strangers and visitors will receive a kind greeting.

ADVERTISED LETTERS—Mr. Edwin L. Earling, Miss Laura C. Weinbrenner.

THOS. RUDD, Postmaster.

Thomas Leander Graves, one of Kendallville's most prominent citizens and one of the pioneer residents of Northern Indiana, died Monday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock at his residence No. 226 West William street, Kendallville, aged 78 years, death being due to old age.

County Clerk W. A. Austin received a telegram Tuesday morning announcing the death at Grand Rapids, Mich, of his brother-in-law, John Shirts, the manager of the Grand Rapids Brush company. Death came to Mr. Shirts very suddenly and unexpectedly. He had not been ill before. He dropped dead at his home without any warning. He was forty-three years of age and is survived by his widow. He was one of the prominent business men of Grand Rapids.

Gene Wareham, of Waterloo, who is in the employ of the Lake Shore railroad company, has begun suit in the circuit court asking for a divorce from Mabel A. Wareham, alleging cruelty, etc. They were married November 27, 1907, and separated in April. He says she makes him cook his own meals and on different occasions has thrown sticks of firewood at him. At one time she attacked him with a butcher knife and drove him out of the house. George W. Crooks is attorney for the plaintiff.

Although the weather was bad last Saturday the band made its appearance about 7:30, and rendered some fine music. There was a large crowd out on the streets to hear them.

Bert Donaldson came home from Toledo last Saturday and brought a bride with him.

B. Quackenbush and family spent over Sunday with his father-in-law, Mr. Webber, at Melburn.

William Schlagel and wife spent last Monday and Tuesday with relatives at Toledo.

Mrs. Isaac Skelton had a stroke of paralysis last Saturday morning and it was thought that she could live but a short time, but at this writing she is improving and there is some hopes of her recovery.

Mrs. Geo. Dietsch died last Saturday forenoon. Funeral at the M. E. church in Edgerton Monday afternoon at 2:30. Interment in Maple Grove cemetery.

Fred Rudd, of Butler, was in Edgerton last Monday trying to interest some of our people in the Gary lots.

Our wool buyers have been paying as high as 30 cents per pound for some wool.

There was considerable excitement on our streets last Saturday evening about 8 o'clock, when a runaway horse came up Main street. It ran against a surrey and smashed one wheel into kindling wood, broke a wheel on a single buggy and ran over Clarence Humbarger, but luckily did not hurt him except some bruises. The horse was finally caught and found to belong to the Smith livery stable. John Anspbaugh had driven the horse out into the country, and when he returned near the railroad the horse became frightened at the cars and ran away smashing the buggy and severely hurt Mr. Anspbaugh's leg. It was thought at first that it was broken, but on examination it was found to be badly sprained and bruised. Dr. Nihart cared for him, and at this writing he is getting along nicely.

One of the most impressive meetings ever held in Edgerton was held last Sunday evening at the Presbyterian church. A special program had been prepared in memory of our mothers. The pastor, Rev. Ewen, had his sermon divided into three parts, and at the close of each part an appropriate song was sung by a choir composed entirely of mothers. The songs were very touching and brought tears to many eyes. The sermon was listened to with close attention by all. The M. W. of A. order attended the services in a body, Head Counsel Talbot having issued a proclamation for all M. W. of A.'s to observe the day. There were one great grandmother and twelve grandmothers present. The pastor had arranged to present a white carnation to every mother present, and this part of the program was a surprise which was much enjoyed. We have had children's day, old people's day and young people's day, but all agree that the mothers day was the best of all.

It is an assured thing that the L. S & M. S. is going to put something at Mina (Edgerton) as they are going to connect the third track from Mina to the house track at Edgerton, and the men are grading for the fourth track from Mina to Stryker and are laying out plans for two miles of siding on the north side of main tracks, and we have been told that they are making test runs from Elkhart to Sandusky with their freight engines to see if they will stand the long runs, and we were told by a man from Elkhart that there were only six men working full time in the shops at that place and the agents of the company are buying more ground along the right-of-way, a mile each way from Mina, so it looks as though there is something doing down this way.

Obituary

Maria L. Hand, daughter of John and Sarah Freeby, was born in Whitley county, Indiana Feb. 21, 1839, departed this life at their late home on Canal street, Butler, Ind, May 9, 1909, at the age of 70 years, 2 months and 18 days.

She was twice married, the first to James Dirrim. To them were born one son and two daughters, one daughter dying in infancy. The two remaining children, Allen Dirrim, of Auburn, Ind, and Mrs. Anna Wells, of Eugene, Oregon.

The second marriage was to Alvin Hand, who survives her. To them were born three daughters, Mrs Rosa Fee and Mrs. Sada Fee, of Butler, Ind., and Mrs. May Aukeny, of Montpelier, Ohio.

She at one time embraced Christ as her Savior and joined the United Brethren church at Zion, afterward at Waterloo, Ind., and she said to friends during her late sickness that she was ready to go. She had been afflicted and suffered much for a number of years.

She leaves to mourn her departure, a husband, five children, thirteen grandchildren, two great grand children, one step-daughter, Mrs. Minnie Born, three brothers, three sisters and a large circle of relatives and friends.

The funeral was held at the United Brethren church, Tuesday forenoon, conducted by Rev O B Wells Interment in the Eddy cemetery.

It is announced that the Lake Shore will build their third track through Butler this summer. If this is true it will furnish lots of labor for idle men.

SIMONS' GRAND OPENING ATTENDED BY LARGE CROWD

Si Simons, the genial jokesmith and all-round salve spreader and general good fellow, proprietor of the City News stand, gave the people of Butler a treat Tuesday night, the occasion being the opening of his ice cream parlor.

The crowd was large and all were nicely entertained by Mrs. Stage's orchestra. A program of rare excellence was given by that splendid organization.

Mr Simons is conducting a first-class place, and his arrangement of the ice cream parlor is very unique and out of the ordinary. It is his own original idea, and can only be appreciated by being seen.

He has ordered a magnificent soda fountain and when that is installed his parlor will be complete—a delightful place to take your friends for a cool, refreshing drink (soft of course) and a dish of that splendid product of the Butler Ice Cream Co.

Cal Chambers and family have moved into the house recently occupied by Byron Ginder and family.

Township Trustee F. W. Nimmons took Mrs Lucky Myers to Sacred Heart hospital at Garrett on Tuesday, where she will be treated for a serious eye affliction.

Two important communications were received and will be given a prominent place in the HERALD next week. They discuss matters of great importance.

Nine Drowned When Boat Upset.

Six men, a woman and two children were drowned in the Susquehanna river near Wilkesbarre, Pa., by the capsizing of a row boat in which they had started for an outing. The nine persons had started out for a boat ride in the small craft. While they remained close to the shore all went well but as the boat drifted into the swift current it began to dip water. The occupants of the boat became panic stricken and called frantically for help. Some boys at play on the bank of the river heard the screams for help but before a boat could be obtained the row boat in mid-stream had filled with water and sank. None of the occupants could swim and they were swept down the river to their death by the rushing current. None of the bodies has been recovered.

Roosevelt Bags Big Rhinoceros.

A bulky rhinoceros is the latest prize wrested from the jungle by Colonel Roosevelt. From the ex-president's camp near Machakos, Africa, word was sent that the luck of the Roosevelt party continues and that fifteen varieties of game, including the big rhino, have been bagged in the last expedition. The big rhino was charging Mr. Roosevelt when the hunter fired. The distance was fourteen paces and the animal fell dead. The naturalists of the party are kept busy preparing the trophies which Mr. Roosevelt and his son Kermit are bringing in daily. Forty-five skins already have been prepared for the Smithsonian institution at Washington.

W. L. Penfield Is No More.

Judge William L. Penfield, formerly solicitor of the department of state and an authority on international law, after a long illness died at his apartment in the Ontario in Washington, D. C. His death was due to a complication of heart and stomach troubles which had confined him to his bed for several months. The end came in the presence of his wife, a son and daughter and a sister, Mrs. Duncan, of Greenfield, Ind. Judge Penfield was born in Lenawee county, Michigan, April 2, 1846, and was of English lineage.

Four Bodies Blown to Bits.

The mixing room of the Laflin-Rand powder mills at Turk tsation, near Columbus, Kas., blew up, instantly killing four men. Twenty workmen were injured, some seriously. The men were at work in the mixing room at the time of the explosion. Their bodies were blown into bits. Immediately after the explosion the factory took fire, but the blaze was finally extinguished. The loss will reach $75,000.

Dynamite Kills Two.

The explosion of a stick of dynamite carelessly or maliciously placed in a stove caused the death of two men and serious injury to three others at the Peterman coal mine near Fredericksburg, Ohio. There has been no trouble at the Peterman mine and the employes cannot account for the dynamite being placed in the stove.

Explosion Causes $50,000 Loss.

Fire started from explosion of gasoline in Jacob Gamer's tailor shop in Parsons, Kas., destroyed the Strasburg building and the First Methodist church. Loss, $50,000. The building destroyed was a two-story brick structure on Broadway. The building cost $30,000. Church valued at $20,000.

Same Train Killed Crockett Family.

PEACE CHAMPIONS IN SESSION AT CHICAGO

National Congress Is Urged to Begin a Campaign of Education to Banish Conflict.

PRESIDENT TAFT SENDS LETTER

Leaders from All the States and European Nations Voice Cry to the World.

The second national peace congress was opened formally in Chicago for a three days' session. Orchestra Hall was well filled with delegates. Robert Treat Paine, of Boston, president of the American Peace Society, was in the chair.

Addresses of welcome were made by Governor Charles S. Deneen and Mayor Fred A. Busse, of Chicago. The Rev. A. Eugene Bartlett, chairman of the reception committee, welcomed the delegates to the work of the congress, and told them of the arrangements that had been made for their comfort and convenience.

In his address of welcome Dr. Bartlett said: "This congress must be more than a spasmodic expression of protest against war, and a resolution that disarmament would be desirable. It should inaugurate a still more effective campaign of education of the people in the interests of permanent, world-wide peace. The burdens of war are borne by the common people, and in the end the verdict of war or peace must rest with the rank and file of the people."

President Taft in his letter applauded the purpose of the conference and said:

"The United States has contributed much to the cause of peace by assisting countries weak in respect to their internal government so as to strengthen in them the cause of law and order. This relationship of guardian and ward as between nations and countries, in my judgment, helps along the cause of international peace and indicates progress in civilization. The policy of the United States in avoiding war under all circumstances except those plainly inconsistent with honor or its highest welfare has been made so clear to the world as hardly to need statement at my hands. I can only say that so far as my legitimate influence extends while at the head of this government it will always be exerted to the full in favor of peace, not only as between this country and other countries, but as between our sister nations."

Exercises of many kinds were held in the city Sunday as a preliminary to the opening session. Special peace services were held in all of the churches in the morning. In the afternoon there was a labor demonstration and the Socialists held several meetings. In the evening a big mass meeting was held under the auspices of the Sunday Evening Club, at which Jacob Gould Schurman, president of Cornell, discussed taxation and war. President Schurman predicted that there would soon come from the property classes in all countries a demand that some way be found to reduce the cost of defense and preparations for war.

ALIMONY FIRM TO AID EX-WIVES

Omaha Agency Volunteers to Trail Neglectful Husbands.

A unique collection agency, with the sole purpose of collecting alimony for divorcees whose former husbands have failed to live up to the obligations imposed on them by the court, has been started in Omaha, and, according to the men in charge, has already an extensive clientele. It makes no difference whether the husband was neglectful in paying the sum in bulk or in monthly installments—the firm undertakes the collection of both. The agency will be run by men who have had experience in the collection of ordinary debts and they anticipate no trouble.

LOSES $110,000 PLAYING FARO.

Two Days at the Table Prove Expensive for New York Man.

Marshall Bell of Newburg, N. Y., lost $110,000 in two days' play at faro in New York City, according to an answer he filed in White Plains to a suit brought against him to recover $10,000 in a note, the signature to which he does not deny, but which he says had been given with no consideration and was in payment of a gambling debt. Joseph Mager, who gives his address only as Westchester County, is the plaintiff in the action, and asserts that he obtained the note from James Thompson on an assignment.

Woman Awarded Big Damages in Suit Against Ferry Company.

Although she only asked $15,000 for the loss of a foot, a jury in Philadelphia gave Mrs. Jennie Amos $20,000 damages in her suit against the Delaware River Ferry Company. The woman was a passenger on a ferry boat which docked at Kaighn's Point, Camden. There was no gang plank provided for the passengers and as she was about to step from the boat to the wharf the boat gave a jolt, throwing her forward. Her left foot was caught between the boat and the planking of the slip and crushed.

ENTIRE TRAIN JUMPS TRACK.

One Hundred Passengers on Wabash Have a Narrow Escape.

One hundred passengers on the Wabash Railway east-bound limited express, which left Chicago at 3 p. m. Sunday, had a miraculous estate from death when the entire train jumped the track about 7 p. m. at Eden, Ohio. All of the cars left the track and went into the ditch after running along the roadbed for about a thousand feet. Some of the cars were completely overturned, but only one passenger, N. Burgess of New York, was injured beyond slight bruises.

5 GUILTY IN BUCKET-SHOP CASE

Cincinnatians Convicted by Jury of Using the Mails to Defraud.

The jury in the case of Louis W. Foster and five others, who were charged with using the mails to defraud in conducting a so-called "bucket shop," returned a verdict of guilty in the United States Dsitrict Court in Cincinnati Friday. The men found guilty are Louis W. Foster, John Gorman, W. J. Campbell, A. C. Baldwin, John M. Scott and Edwin F. Hell. The penalty is a fine of from $1,000 to $5,000, eighteen months in the penitentiary, or both.

William J. O'Dell, who died in Cincinnati several years ago, left an estate estimated at $2,000,000. He amassed this fortune by running a bucket shop on a larger scale than ever before known in this country, having branches in all the principal cities and towns in the West and South. At his death the defendants found guilty Friday continued the O'Dell Brokerage Company. Gorman, Baldwin, Scott and Hell were formerly telegraph operators in the employ of O'Dell. William Dudley, telegraph operator, and Attorney Thomas Shay, both of whom are dead, were interested as partners at one time. All these men are credited with having cleaned up $1,000,000, most of which, however, Gorman and Dudley and Shay retained.

The verdict is a clean victory for the government, which contended the defendants did not even play the bucket shop game honestly, but by slow wires and fast wires to Chicago and New York took advantage of the market quotations and closed out trades with their customers to the best advantages to the defendants.

The Burlington Railway has decided to make a 2½-cent passenger rate, effective in Missouri, and this action is expected to end the proceeding to nullify the 2-cent law.

All the coal carrying roads are rushing large quantities of coal to the tidewater, and to Western points, and every railroad crew is busy, while miners are being worked full capacity.

Plans for the construction of the Great Northern Railroad line from Noyes, Minn., to Winnipeg, have been filed with the Manitoba government. The line is to be in operation by Sept. 1.

Since the completion of its line to the head of the lakes, the Wisconsin Central has advanced the rate on soft coal between Manitowoc, Wis., and the Twin Cities from 90 cents to $1.15 per ton.

The stockholders of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company have voted to issue $100,000,000 of new stock which will be offered at $100 per share in exchange for the company's bonds at $130.

About thirty iron ore carrying contracts between the Cuyuna Range Railway Company and fee owners and lease holders on the Cuyuna range have been filed for record at Brainerd. The rate is 65 to 66 cents a ton.

The Missouri representatives have passed a prohibitition law for passenger trains, making it unlawful to drink or expose intoxicating liquors on passenger trains in that State, or to ride on a passenger train in an intoxicated condition.

The Chicago and Northwestern Railway Company has completed its double track system between Chicago and the Missouri River. The last link in the double track system was completed when the second track of the new bridge across the Mississippi at Clinton was finished at a cost of $2,000,000.

The Iowa representatives passed the Senate bill prohibiting drinking intoxicants on trains. This puts an end to the sale of liquor in dining cars for consumption while on the trains. Members of the train crew are given the power to eject offenders and call upon local officers to arrest them, but may not make arrests.

TAFT RAPS PORTO RICO

Says Failure to Pass Money Bills Makes Serious Situation in the Island.

"GENEROSITY IS FORGOTTEN."

Special Message to Congress Urges Change in Foraker Act—Holds Politicians Irresponsible.

President Taft sent to Congress a special message recommending legislation at the present extra session to amend the Foraker act, under which Porto Rico is governed. The President directs attention to "a situation of unusual gravity," the result of the failure of the legislative assembly of Porto Rico to pass the usual appropriation bills, leaving the island without support after June 30.

Porto Ricans have forgotten the generosity of the United States, the President says, in the desire of certain of their political leaders for power, and he adds that the situation indicates that the United States has gone too fast in the extension of political rights to the Porto Ricans. Mr. Taft concludes that the absolute power of appropriation should be taken from "those who have shown themselves too irresponsible to enjoy it."

The President suggests to Congress the wisdom of submitting to the appropriation committees the question of qualifying some of the provisions of the fundamental act as to the respective jurisdictions of the executive council and the legislative assembly. But no action of this kind, he says, should be undertaken before the Foraker act is amended, so that when the legislative assembly shall adjourn without making appropriations necessary to carry on the government sums equal to the appropriations in the previous year shall be available from the current revenues and shall be drawn by the warrant of the auditor on the treasurer, countersigned by the governor. Such a provision applies to the legislatures of the Philippines, and of Hawaii, and "it has prevented in those two countries any misuse of the power of appropriation."

The message presents an exhaustive review of conditions on the island, its trade, its wealth and the improved educational facilities. It points out that "there never was a time in the history of the island when the average prosperity of the Porto Rican was higher, his opportunity greater, his liberty in thought and action more secure." For the first time in its history Porto Rico is living under laws enacted by its own legislature.

The President points out that if the Porto Ricans desire a change in the form of the Foraker act the subject is a matter of congressional consideration, dependent upon the effect on real political progress in the island. Such a change, he says, should be sought in an orderly way and not brought to the attention of Congress by "paralyzing the arm of the existing government." The President says that the Porto Ricans' forgetfulness of the generosity of this government "should not be an occasion for surprise, nor in dealing with a whole people can it be made the basis of a charge of ingratitude."

Prominent Elk Leaps to Death.

Delirious from illness, Capt. William Cook, a prominent Elk, a noted drillmaster, and captain of the Elks Cherry Pickers, a famous drill squad, leaped from a fourth-story window in Toledo, Ohio, and was instantly killed. A daughter tried to prevent her father jumping, but was unable to restrain him.

Planter Shot Dead by Employe.

Charles Lamb was shot and killed on his plantation near Shelby, Miss., by a negro. The trouble grew out of a quarrel over work. Lamb had been married only three weeks.

AMERICAN SCHOOL RAZED.

Property at Kessab Burned in the Anti-Christian Riots.

An investigator who has returned from a trip to Kessab, Asiatic Turkey, reports that all the American property at that place has been destroyed by the Moslem raiders. The property consisted of a girls' high school under the direction of Miss Effie N. Chambers, a missionary of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions. Three-fourths of the native houses also have been destroyed, but the Armenian church and the new Protestant school building are standing. Nearly all the people who fled from Kessab have returned to find their houses looted and they are destitute. Some food and clothing are being distributed, but there is no system in the work and the supplies are inadequate.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY.

On account of the decision upholding the section of the New York State insurance laws prohibiting a company from doing more than $150,000,000 of new business in one year, the New York Life Insurance Company will dismiss on May 31 about 1,000 of its agents. This step is likely to be followed by the withdrawal of some of the foreign agencies, but an effort will be made to have the law repealed.

Since the insurance department of the State of Iowa has been barring certain Minnesota insurance companies from doing business in that State, Senator M. L. Fosseen, Minneapolis, offered a retaliatory measure, under which the companies from Iowa will not be granted licenses in Minnesota under similar conditions. The bill applies to all States which make regulations that would exclude Minnesota companies.

By an order of the interior department, about 3,000,000 acres of land in the counties along the eastern border of Wyoming are to be thrown open at once to homesteaders, who will be allowed to take either 160 or 320 acres. The land cannot be irrigated and will be of use, therefore, for dry farming only. Those who take the full 320 acres entries must make an attempt to cultivate the land, while those who go in on the smaller holdings will not be compelled by the law to do so.

The business life of London was all agog over the opening of the new department store of the American merchant, Selfridge, formerly of Chicago, who boldly advertised his intention of showing the Britishers how the Yankee does things in that line. Immense throngs of people crowded the big store owing to attractions offered, but at the same time the leading London houses in dry goods accepted the challenge by inserting big advertisements in the papers and also drawing crowds. Hitherto they had not used the daily papers extensively.

The Security State Bank, of Brainerd, Minn., which was closed down about two months ago, because of holding about $20,000 of the paper indorsed by Banker Jones, of Rugby, N. D., who failed, has reopened for business, an assessment of $100 per share having been paid.

Senator F. E. Putnam's bill, which commits the Legislature to the policy of establishing and maintaining an agricultural department in one high school in each Minnesota county, was passed by the Senate with only two dissenting votes. The bill carries an appropriation of $50,000 to cover the first two years of the work.

ST. ELMO AUTHOR DIES.

Augusta Evans Wilson, Well Known for Her Novels, Passes Away.

Augusta Evans Wilson, author of "St. Elmo" and many other novels, popular a generation ago, and still widely read in the South, died at her home in Mobile, Ala., Sunday as the result of an attack of heart failure. She was born in 1835 in Columbus, Ga. She was the daughter of Matt Ryan and Sarah Howard Evans, one of the oldest families in the South.

While a child she removed with her parents to Texas, then a frontier State. Soon after the Mexican war, her people located in Mobile, Ala. It was there that, in 1868, she married Colonel L. M. Wilson. The marriage was a very happy one, and, although they had no children, they were known among their friends as the "lover couple" until Colonel Wilson's death in October, 1891.

It was in 1855 that her first novel, "Inez, a Tale of the Alamo," appeared. It met with only moderate success. Her second novel, "Beulah," published four years later, won instant appreciation and she soon became recognized as one of the leading writers of the romantic and intensely emotional school.

In 1864 she found time to complete "Macaria," which she sent to a Charleston, S. C., publisher, who copyrighted it under the laws of the "Confederate States of America." The book was published on coarse brown paper, all that the printer could obtain, and soon after it left the press the entire edition was confiscated by a federal officer. A blockade runner, however, smuggled one copy through to Havana, Cuba, whence it later was taken to New York City and published. The book met with heavy sales immediately.

"St. Elmo," the most popular, most criticised and most widely read of Mrs. Wilson's books, appeared in 1866, and it is still one of the "six best sellers" in the South. "Vashti" and "Infelice" followed quickly and in 1887, Mrs. Wilson published "At the Mercy of Tiberius," a strong argument against circumstantial evidence as a means of conviction. "A Speckled Bird" was published, and her last book, "Devota," appeared above a year ago.

REPORT SHIP LOST WITH 21.

Shores, Six Days Overdue, Believed Sunk in Lake Superior.

Advices received at Duluth are to the effect that the steamer Shores, six days' overdue at Duluth, went down off White Fish Point in Lake Superior with all on board. The crew and passengers numbered twenty-one.

News of the destruction of the Shores was brought to Duluth by the crew of the steamer Northland, who say that as the latter was passing that point on the way up they discovered wreckage strewn all over the lake, and, in their opinion, it belonged to the Shores. The fact that she was a week overdue at Duluth and no word of her has been received adds color to the theory.

The Adelia Shores belonged to the S. O. Neff Transportation Company of Milwaukee, and is said to have been up bound from Michigan with a load of salt. The ship was of 1,250 tons burden and under command of Captain S. Holmes. The engineer was R. S. Nott. The names of the crew and passengers are not obtainable.

TWENTY HURT IN TRAIN CRASH.

Engineer Dying and About Score of Others Injured in Collision.

Great Northern passenger train No 3, known as the Flyer, west bound, ran into a light engine at Delano, Minn. Two day coaches were burned and about twenty passengers more or less seriously injured. Engineer Andrew W. Watson of St. Paul, of the passenger train, was probably fatally hurt and is in St. Mary's hospital at Minneapolis.

SIXTY SEE CHICAGO BOY KILLED.

Joseph Cronin, Paulist Singer, Electrocuted on Niagara River.

Joseph Cronin, 14 years old, a member of the Paulist Chorister Society of Chicago, in charge of Father Finn, was killed instantly by electricity on the Canadian side of the river at Niagara Falls. With sixty of his companions, who were visiting Loretto convent, he started to climb the bank to the transformer station on the Ontario Power Company, when he came in contact with an 11,000-volt cable, which had been strung temporarily by the company.

LIFE TERM TO BOYLE; WIFE GETS 25 YEARS

Woman Also Is Fined $5,000 and Costs in the "Billy" Whitla Kidnaping Case.

BOTH PRISONERS COLLAPSE.

Husband and Spouse Are Carried Most of Way Back to Cells—She Weeps Violently in Jail.

In Mercer, Pa., Judge Williams on Monday sentenced James H. Boyle, convicted of kidnaping "Billy" Whitla, to imprisonment for life in the western penitentiary at Pittsburg. Mrs. Boyle, indicted as Mary Doe, was sentenced to twenty-five years in the penitentiary and to pay a fine of $5,000 and costs of the prosecution. Boyle did not cause the scene in court which he had threatened and did not utter a word before being sentenced. His counsel, however, pleaded for leniency for both Boyle and his wife. The lawyer said that until a recent period the extreme penalty for kidnaping in this State was ten years and in view of the fact that the boy had been treated with every consideration and that all care had been taken not to inflict unnecessary mental anguish upon the parents he felt leniency might be asked with propriety. After Attorney Miller of counsel for the Boyles had completed his plea for leniency in behalf of his clients Judge Williams told Boyle to stand up and asked him if he had anything to say as to why sentence should not be pronounced upon him. Boyle merely said, "I have not," and shook his head. Judge Williams then addressed the prisoner and told him of the seriousness of the crime of which he had been convicted. Both Boyle and his wife collapsed on hearing their sentences pronounced. Mrs. Boyle wept violently when returned to her cell.

SEVEN DEAD, BATTLE TOLL.

Harold Sanborn, Chicago, Who Killed Girl, Was Badly Wounded.

Additional reports received at El Paso, Texas, of the recent riot on the Sanborn ranch, near Vera Cruz, Mexico, are to the effect that seven persons were killed during the riot and that Harold Sanborn of Chicago, son of the president of the La Juanta plantation, was dangerously wounded. Young Sanborn is held in jail, the charge against him being the killing of a 19-year-old girl, who, it is alleged, stabbed Sanborn's ranch partner, Vicente Espinoso, in the back. The killing of the girl took place in the general fight that followed.

THE CONVICTED HIDNAPERS OF WILLIE WHITLA.

Missing Boy Found Drowned.

The search which has been conducted by hundreds of persons for several days for the two missing children of Michael Proch of Latrobe, Pa., resulted in the discovery of the body of Alvin, the 5-year-old son, in a creek. The search is being conducted for the girl, who is also thought to have been drowned.

Spectators Hurled to Floor.

Thirty persons were injured, many seriously, when a section of a balcony railing at the new State armory in Seattle gave way during the indoor track meet of the Seattle Athletic Club. Many spectators were thrown head foremost to the floor fifteen feet below.

Two Babies Burned to Death.

Ben and Joe Berren, aged 2½ and 3½ years respectively, sons of Antone Berren of San Bernard, Neb., were burned to death in a barn.

Work of Congress

Notable speeches provoking debate of intense interest characterized the session of the Senate Tuesday. Senator Dolliver of Iowa made an attack upon the methods under which protective tariff bills are formed and engaged in a constant exchange of words with Senator Aldrich, who was a careful listener to the address of the Iowa Senator. On the Democratic side Senators remained mute, no member of the minority interposing a word in the controversy over the tariff, which occupied Republican Senators alone. At times the debate threatened to be acrimonious, but the Iowa Senator was ever ready with a humorous retort, which called forth laughter at times when angry words seemed unavoidable. Senator Borah concluded his speech on the income tax, delivering an extended legal argument to show that there is ample reason for believing that the Supreme Court of the United States might reverse itself if the constitutionality of that tax should again be presented to it. A strong plea for the extension of the protective tariff system to jute was made by Senator Bradley of Kentucky, who declared that with the protective policy covering products of his State, Kentucky would be as safely Republican in the future as Massachusetts has been in the past.

The tariff bill was again taken up by the Senate Wednesday for the consideration of committee amendments that were passed over upon the first reading of the bill, after it had been practically laid aside for ten days while Senators have been making speeches on the measure as a whole. Small progress was made in the consideration of the measure, only eight pages being considered before adjournment. There was much debate on the various amendments that were acted upon. Senator Dolliver concluded his speech begun the previous day. The House was not in session.

Little progress was made in the consideration of the tariff bill in the Senate Thursday, the lead schedule being under discussion. Senator Bristow made a strong fight against increases in the rates of the schedules over the duties provided in the House on the ground that such increases would unnecessarily increase the cost of paint, which the farmers use extensively. During the discussion Senators Beveridge and Gallinger engaged in a sharp colloquy during which Mr. Gallinger accused the Indiana Senator of "advertising his own wares." Earlier in the day Senator Cummins addressed the Senate in favor of lower duties, especially in the iron and steel schedules. He declared that the people would take matters in their own hands if the law did not check monopolies, and said that in that event convenient lamp posts would be found. Representative Murphy of Missouri held the attention of the House with a repetition of the charges against Judges Phillips and Mcpherson of the western division of his State, which he had made in his original resolution. His colleague, Mr. Rucker, corroborated all that he said in denunciation of the action of the two judges, and added that Judge Phillips ought to have been impeached twenty years ago. The House adjourned until Monday.

Just before adjournment Friday the Senate voted to fix the duty on lead contained in lead ore at 1½ cents a pound, which is the rate of the Dingley law, and of the pending bill as it was passed by the House of Representatives. Fifty-three Senators, including all Republicans present, and Senators Hughes of Colorado and McEnery of Louisiana, voted in favor of the duty, and nineteen Democratic Senators voted against it. This particular paragraph has not been opposed by the low tariff Republicans and the vote was not significant. During the day Senator Clapp of Minnesota spoke at length in favor of lowering tariff duties and Senator Owen of Oklahoma upheld the constitutionality of an income tax. The House was not in session.

The entire session of the Senate Saturday was consumed with a debate on the schedule of duties on pig lead and its products. The stout opposition presented to the adoption of the amendments recommended by the committee on finance making the rates similar to those of the Dingley bill prevented a vote being reached before adjournment. The House was not in session.

A TALE OF A CARAVAN

By

Robert Buchanan

CHAPTER XIV.

The young man of the Caravan was now thoroughly convinced that one of two things must be true; either that William Jones had been instructed to keep a watch upon him, or that he, William Jones, had a secret of some sort which he was anxious not to have revealed. After both suppositions had been duly weighed, the second was accepted as the most likely; and it forthwith received the young man's consideration.

If there was a secret, he argued, it was in some way connected—firstly, with William Jones' worldly prosperity; secondly, with the reports of treasure hidden in times past among the sand hills or the dangerous caverns of the sea. Was it possible, after all, that those reports were true, and that in some mysterious manner Jones had become acquainted with the hiding place? It seemed very improbable for many reasons, one of the chief being the man's extreme poverty, which appeared to touch the very edge of sheer starvation.

A little inquiry in the neighborhood, however, elicited the information that Jones, despite his abject penury, was certainly well-to-do, and had money in the bank of the neighboring market town; that the ruined village of Aberglyn belonged almost entirely to him; and that, in short, he was by nature and habit a miserly person, who would prefer hoarding up whatever he possessed to purchasing with it the commonest necessaries of life.

An old coast guard, whom Brinkley found next day on the station, was his chief informant.

"Don't you believe him, sir," said this old salt, "if he tells you he's poor. He's a shark, William Jones is, and couldn't own up even to his own father. It's my belief he's got gold hidden somewhere among them sand-hills, let alone what he's got in the savings bank. Ah, he's a artful one, is William Jones."

Brinkley had said nothing of his own private suspicions, but had merely introduced in a general way the subject of Jones' worldly position. Further conversation with Tim, who had made a few straggling acquaintances in the district, corroborated the other testimony. The young man became more and more convinced that William Jones was worth studying.

Matt had not turned up that morning. Instead of looking after her, Brinkley took another stroll toward the vicinity of the Devil's Caldron. He had not gone far before he discovered that he was watched again. The figure of William Jones followed in the distance, but keeping him well in view.

It was certainly curious.

He walked over to the cliffs and looked down at the scene of yesterday's bathing adventure. A strong wind was blowing, and the waves were surging up the rocks with deafening roar and foamy spume. The place looked very ugly, particularly near the Caldron. All the passage was churned to milky white, and the sound from beneath was, to quote an old simile, like the roar of innumerable chariots.

He glanced over his shoulder and saw the head of William Jones eagerly watching, the body being hidden behind an intervening rock.

"Strange!" he reflected. "My predatory friend can't keep his treasure, if he possesses any, down in that watery gulf. Yet whenever I come near it his manner tells me that I am 'warm,' as they say in the game of hide-and-seek."

To test the matter a little further, he set off on a brisk walk along the cliffs, leaving the Caldron behind. He found, as he had suspected, that he was no longer followed. Returning as he came, and resuming his old position, he saw William Jones immediately reappear.

That day he discovered no clew to the mystery, nor the next, nor the next again, though on each day he went through a similar performance. Strange to say, Matt had not put in an appearance, and for reasons of his own he had thought it better not to seek her.

On the morning of the third day—a dark, chilly morning, after a night of rain—Tim put his head into the Caravan, where his master was seated at his easel, and grinned delightedly.

"Mr. Charles! She's come, sir!"

"Who has come?" cried Brinkley.

"The lady, your honor, to have her picture taken. Will I show her into the parlor?"

But as he spoke Matt pushed him aside and entered. She wore her best clothes, but looked a little pale and anxious, Brinkley thought, greeting her with a familiar nod.

"So you've come at last? Tim, get out, you rascal. I thought you had given me up."

He assumed a coldness, though he felt it not, for he had made up his mind not to "encourage" the young person.

"I couldn't come before; they wouldn't let me. But last night William Jones he didn't come home, and I broke open the box and took out my clothes, and ran straight off here."

Her face fell as she proceeded, for she could not fail to notice the coolness of the young man's greeting.

"Well, since you have come we'll get to work," said Brinkley. "It's chilly and damp outside, so we'll remain here in shelter."

Matt took off her hat, and then proceeded to divest herself of her coarse jacket, revealing for the first time the low-necked silk dress beneath. Meantime the young man placed the sketch in position. Turning presently, he beheld Matt's transformation.

Old and shabby as the dress was, torn here and there, and revealing beneath glimpses of coarse stockings and clumsy boots, it became her wonderfully. As a result of much polishing with soap and water her face shone again, and her arms and neck were white as snow. Thus attired, Matt looked no longer a long, shambling girl, but a tall, bright, resplendent young lady.

It was no use. Brinkley could not conceal his admiration. Matt's arms alone were enough to make a painter wild with delight.

"Why, Matt, you look positively magnificent. I had no idea you were so pretty."

The girl blushed with pleasure.

* * * * * * *

The young man worked away for a good hour and a half, at the end of which time he put the finishing touch to the sketch.

"Look, Matt!" he cried.

Matt examined the picture with unconcealed delight. It was herself, a little idealized, but quite characteristic, and altogether charming.

"May I take it home?" she asked, eagerly.

"I'll get you to leave it a few days longer. I must get a frame for it, Matt, and then you shall have it all complete. Now, let me look at you again," he said, taking her by both hands and looking up at her sunny face. "Are you pleased? Will you take care of the picture for the painter's sake?"

Matt's answer was embarrassing. She quietly sat down on his knee, and gave him a smacking kiss.

"Matt! Matt!" he cried. "You mustn't!"

But she put her warm arm round his neck, and rested her cheek against his shoulder.

"I should like to have pretty dresses and gold bracelets and things, and to go away from William Jones and to stay with you."

"My dear," said Brinkley, laughing, "you couldn't. It wouldn't be proper."

"Why not?" asked Matt, simply.

"The world is censorious, little one. I am a young man; you are a young lady. We shall have to shake hands soon and say good-by. There, there," he continued, seeing her eyes fill with tears, "I'm not gone yet. I shall stay as long as I can, only—really—you must look upon me as quite an old fellow. I am awfully old, you know, compared to you."

He gently disengaged himself, and Matt sat down on a camp stool close by. Her face had grown very wistful and sad.

"Matt," he said, anxious to change the subject, "tell me something more about William Jones."

"I hate William Jones. I hate everybody—but you."

"Really?"

"Yes, I do."

"Well, I feel greatly flattered. But about the gentle Jones? You say he was out all last night."

Matt nodded.

"He goes out nigh every night," she said, "and often don't come home till morning. Sometimes he finds things and brings them. He finds bits of gold, and old ropes."

"Very odd. Where?"

"He don't tell; I know."

"I wish you'd tell me, Matt. Do. I have a particular reason for wanting the information."

Matt hesitated.

"You won't say I told? William Jones would be downright wild, he would."

"I'll keep the secret faithfully. Now?"

Thus urged, Matt informed her friend that on two occasions, out of curiosity, she had followed her guardian on his nightly pilgrimages, and watched him go in the direction of the Devil's Caldron. On both occasions the night was very dark. On getting clear of the coast guard station, and among the sand hills, Jones had lighted a lantern which he carried. Trembling and afraid, she had followed the light and its bearer had disappeared into the solid earth, leaving her to find her way home in terror.

The explanation of all this was, in Matt's opinion, very simple. William Jones was a bad man, and went to "visit the fairies."

"Yes," she cried, "and every time he goes, the fairies give him something, and he brings it home."

"Each time you followed him," asked Brinkley, thoughtfully, "he disappeared at about the same place?"

"Yes," said Matt; "and the light and him sunk right down and never come up again."

* * * * * * *

The result of the information thus communicated was to leave the young man of the Caravan far more curious than ever. He determined to turn the tables on William Jones, and to watch his movements, not in the day time, but during the summer night, waiting for his appearance in the immediate neighborhood of the Devil's Caldron.

The first night he saw nothing—it was stormy, with wild gusts of rain. The second night was equally uneventful. Nothing daunted, he went for a third and last time, and lay in the moonlight on the cliffs, looking toward the village.

The night was dark and cloudy, but from time to time the moon came out with sudden brilliance on the sea, which was gently stirred by a breeze from the land.

He waited for several hours. About midnight he rose to go home.

As he did so, he wa startled by the sound of oars, and, lying down, perceived a small boat approaching on a silver patch of moonlit sea.

The moon came out, and he saw that the occupant of the boat was a solitary man.

It approached rapidly, making direct for the Devil's Caldron. Lying down on his face and peeping over, Brinkley saw it stop short just outside the foaming passage, while the man stood up, stopped, lifted something heavy from the bottom, and threw it overboard. Then, after watching for a moment a dark object which drifted shoreward, right into the caldron, he rowed away until he reached a sheltered creek close to the scene of the swimming adventure. Here he ran the boat ashore and leaped out.

The next minute Brinkley heard him coming up the cliffs.

Trembling with excitement he lay down flat on his face and waited. Presently the man emerged on the top of the cliffs, within a few yards of Brinkley's hiding place. Just then the moon flashed brightly out, and Brinkley recognized him!

It was William Jones, carrying on his shoulders something like a loaded sack, and, on dangling from his left wrist, a horn lantern.

He looked round once or twice and then hurried toward the sand hills. Brinkley followed stealthily. The moon now went in, and it became pitch dark. Presently Jones paused, set down his load, and lit the lantern; then he hurried on.

For fifty or sixty yards a coarse carpet of greensward covered the cliffs; then the sand hills began. Passing over the first sand hill, Jones disappeared. Quick as thought the young man followed, and, peering over, saw the light in the hollow beneath; it rose higher and higher till it reached the top of the next sand hill, where it paused. Crawling on hands and knees, Brinkley slipped down into the hollow, and then crept upward half-way up the mound; he found a huge rock, behind which he crouched and peeped.

As he did so, William Jones, light in hand, seemed to dive down into the solid earth and disappear.

CHAPTER XV.

For a minute after the disappearance Charles Brinkley lay as if petrified and, indeed, he was altogether lost in wonder. What had happened? Had an earthquake swallowed the mysterious one, or had he tumbled down in a fit? Brinkley waited and watched; five minutes had passed, ten minutes, and still the light did not reemerge. At last, overcome by curiosity, Brinkley rose, and, stooping close to the ground, crept from the rock behind which he had lain concealed, and crawled across the summit of the sand hill. Suddenly he stopped short and went down on hands and knees, for he now clearly discerned, coming out of the solid earth or sand, the glimmer of the light.

It glimmered, then disappeared again. Just then the moon slipped out of her cloud, illuminating the hillocks with vitreous rays and he perceived, close by him, a dark hole, opening into the very heart of the hillock.

He crept closer and looked down, but could see nothing. He held his head over the hole and listened; all he heard was a dull, hollow moaning, like the sound of the sea. The light of the moon, however, enabled him to perceive that the hole had been covered with a loose piece of wood, or lid, about four feet square, and with an iron ring-bolt in the center; which lid was now lying by the side of the opening, ready to be replaced. A number of large pieces of stone, such as were strewn everywhere about the sand hills, lay piled close by.

He lay for some time waiting and listening. All at once, far beneath him, the light glimmered again. Quick as thought he rose and crept away, only just in time; for he had no sooner regained the shelter of the rock, and crouched there watching, than he saw the light re-emerge, accompanied by a human head; a human body followed, and then he clearly discerned William Jones standing in the moonlight without the burden he had previously carried, and holding in his hand a lantern.

Setting the lantern down, William busied himself for several minutes, and finally, having concealed the work on which he was engaged, extinguished the light. Then, after glancing suspiciously round him on every side, he walked rapidly down the sand hill and disappeared in the direction of the sea.

(To be continued.)

PIE FOR BREAKFAST.

Not the Worst Thing in the World, Says a Man Who Has Tried It.

"Pie for breakfast" is the one unfailing reproach that is hurled at New England when the lowest of outsiders wishes to chuck odium. Take the word of a man who has tried it—there are worse things for breakfast than pie.

"I'm free to admit," said he, according to the Boston Herald, "that I never but once really experienced pie for breakfast. By that I mean perpetual pie—pie for every breakfast, not pie at a railroad station eating house breakfast, but pie on the breakfast table just the same as butter or sugar or bread.

"That was some years ago. I spent a winter on a job pretty far back in northern New England and I boarded at a comfortable little cottage in a four or five house settlement for some months. 'Twasn't really a farmhouse, though it had a little patch of ground. It was the home of an old lady and her grown-up daughter. An older son who supported the family worked in a factory in a town some miles away, coming home only over Sunday.

"The old lady who took me in, literally, not figuratively, was the cook and she was some pie cook, not with a varied repertoire, so to speak, but excellent and prolific with what she did. It was winter then and the pies for the most part were mince or apple, but there were any number of those. How she produced so many I can't tell, for I'm sure I ate a pie a day and she and her daughter ate some, while the son could get away with two or three from Saturday night to Sunday morning.

"You see, she knew what a piece of pie was. A piece was a quarter, and two pieces for dinner or even for breakfast were no disgrace.

"I never sat down at the table in that house, breakfast or any other meal, but that there was at least one or oftener two pies on the table, not always whole ones, but enough and with a large reserve to drawn on. Furthermore, most of the weekdays I spent way back there I was at work so far from the house that I carried a dinner pail, and did I ever fail to find a piece of pie in it? I did not.

"And pie for breakfast is not the only form of rural food that has been unjustly abused. I've known folks sneer at steak that was first pounded tender and then fried. But I know lots worse things than a round steak hammered awhile and then fried in butter, real country butter, of course, and served piping hot. At this little house, of course, they didn't do their own slaughtering, as many of the farmers did, but they bought outright a quarter of beef and a half pig and kept it down cellar, where it was cold enough to keep anything.

"To this day I am amazed at the versatility of that pig. It's an old joke about the Chicago stockyards using everything but the squeal, but I still believe that in some of the dishes I had—the head cheese or the souse, maybe—that squeal was concealed. But I learned that winter that 'sweet pig pork'—sweet as opposed to salt—is good to eat in many variations.

"In fact, of all the real country things I had that winter none was wasted on me. The one thing I dreaded was the weekly treat that the son of the house brought home for Saturday night—oysters, canned or barreled oysters, from which later a stew was made."

The Similarity.

Mrs. Gunner—Henry, you would persist in calling that last cook a vision. There was nothing pretty about her.

Mr. Gunner—Not at all.

Mrs. Gunner—Then why did you call her a vision?

Mr. Gunner—Because visions fade away. She remained only two days.

No Discount Expected.

"I am willing to make any sacrifice to win you," sighed the impecunious count.

"Oh, that isn't necessary," replied the heiress. "In case I make up my mind that I want you, papa can afford to pay the regular price."

How He Judged

Winks—Toucher must be a champion bowler.

Dinks—What makes you think so?

Winks—The number of "ten" strikes he makes.

To construct an egg, a hen gathers and combines approximately 650 grains of water, 120 of fat, 108 of lime, 80 of albumen, 26 of sugar and 10 of ash.

FOR AND ABOUT WOMEN

A Disagreeable Habit.

The habit of snubbing is a most disagreeable one. Those who are snubbed are generally taken off their guard, and given a sudden blow when they are careful and at ease in the security of social intercourse, and thus they are placed at a great disadvantage. A snub, says one, is a check, a blank; it is a curtain suddenly drawn down; it is pulling up against a dead wall; it is cold obstruction and recoil. We have seen parents snub children, first allowing them liberties, then stopping them with a harsh check in mid-career of spirits and in the presence of strangers. Perhaps we have given way to enthusiasm and are met by ridicule. Or we have made a confidence which we think tender, and it is received with indifference. Or we tell a story, and are asked for the point of it. Or we are given to understand that we are mistaken where we have assumed ourselves well informed. Or our taste is coolly set at naught; or we talk, and are reminded we are prosy; or we are brought face to face with our ignorance in a way to make us feel it most keenly. The strength of a snub lies in the sudden apprehension that we have committed ourselves, and a consequent painful sense of insignificance, that there is somebody quite close to us, regardless of our feelings, looking down on us, and ostentatiously unsympathizing. Beware of snubbing any one. It makes a most painful and permanent impression. It may be done in a moment, and yet is not likely to be forgotten for years, if not for an entire lifetime.

How charming is the disposition which instead of repelling, invites the confidence of others. The person who snubs may be unconscious of the harm he or she inflicts on others, and how oftentimes friends are lost by a habit which jealousy only too often has created. A snub oftentimes causes a heart pang that never is forgotten.

Women Must Stand Well.

Good carriage not only means good looks, but good health. The importance of standing, sitting and walking correctly can not be overestimated and is entirely one of personal responsibility.

Children should be trained into proper postures, but if early training has been neglected, then it behooves the slouchy and stoop-shouldered to get busy.

It is not as hard as one would think to have a graceful carriage, though to read many of the requirements of the beauty doctors a fully-equipped gymnasium and unlimited time would seem requisite. A few simple rules faithfully followed will quickly improve the most awkward bearing.

To stand well remember to keep the chest high, knees straight, abdomen in, and hips back, and the feet inclined at an angle of about 90 degrees. With chest, knees and hips in their proper places, the feet will generally look after themselves.

To walk well and easily maintain the same position of chest, abdomen and knees, and let the swing come from the hips.

The Art of Being Happy.

"Cheerfulness," says Ruskin, "is as natural to the heart of man in strong health as glow to his cheek, and wherever there is habitual gloom there must be either bad air, unwholesome food, improperly severe labor or erring habits of life." If children were taught that one of the great life duties is to unfold the fun-loving side of their nature, the humorous side, there would not be so many suicides, so many unhappy, discordant, miserable people, so many failures in the world, says Success. Why shouldn't we develop the humor faculty, the fun-loving faculty, just as much as the bread-earning or any other faculty? Why shou'd we think it is so very necessary to spend years in going to schools and colleges to develop other mental faculties, and yet take practically no pains whatever to develop the humorous, the fun-loving side of our nature?

Beauty Tip.

The carriage of the body is even more important than the lines of the figure itself. A beautiful figure poorly carried shows none of its beauty, while a poor figure well carried with grace and dignity gives a distinction which is in itself beautiful. To acquire a good carriage it is necessary to study the required pose carefully in the mirror, then remember to take that pose whenever rising from a chair, and to hold it steadfastly. It requires a constant watchfulness which makes one self-conscious at first, but in time becomes a habit—shoulders back and down, abdomen in, head up and chin in.

Fads and Fancies in Dress

Almost every gown has a different colored shoulder scarf.

It is now quite the fad to have lingerie embroidered in pink and blue, according to fancy.

A waist that closes in the back is always pretty with tucks extending to yolk depth in front.

Passsementerie drop trimmings are now to be found in all the modish colors, and in pearl, jet, crystal and metallic effects.

There is no more satisfactory arrangement for a yoke than the separate guimpe tied down with ribbons at the waist line.

A long chain, intended to be twisted around the neck a second and third time, is ornamented with rose coral oblongs effectively matched.

Net girdles of wide soft mesh are embroidered in ribbousine (a lustrous fabric), and fringed with it. They come in all of the fashionable colors.

New cloak gowns, which may be worn as an outdoor garment, or as a princess robe, come in broadcloth, in black, navy blue, violet and smoke color.

A new fabric that looks like directoire satin, but is more warm and supple, is satin-finished cashmere, and it is to be had in the popular shades.

Most of the sleeves of elaborate gowns are of the same lace or net as the yoke, though there has been an effort to establish the sleeve like the gown.

Polish folk fashions are having a strong effect upon coiffures and millinery in Paris, and hair ornaments as well as hat trimmings show traces of barbaric beauty.

Shaded plumes are in high popularity and the old-fashioned navy blue feather, flecked with red, yellow and a variety of other tints, also has special claim to consideration.

Among the more striking of the new things are black satin skirts worn with long directoire coats trimmed with a touch of color. This color touch appears in the embroidery or pessementerie.

To Whiten Skin.

A lotion that is a substitute for cream, and more quickly whitening, is made from two ounces of pure strained honey, half an ounce each of glycerin and rectified spirits, a dram and a half of pure citric acid and three drops of essence of musk. The acid is dissolved in the alcohol. The glycerin is put into a cup and set into boiling water for an instant before adding the honey, the cup remaining in the water just long enough to mingle the two ingredients. As soon as it is cool the alcohol is put in, the essence going last. This is massaged in as cold cream would be applied.

Old Maid's Insurance.

A company has been organized in Copenhagen, Denmark, to insure and reassure young women who dread becoming old maids. A girl who takes out a policy pays a fixed sum every year. If she finds a husband before she reaches 40 she is presumed to have received her money's worth and the policy lapses, the sums she has paid in going to a general fund for the benefit of her less fortunate sisters. If she is unmarried when she is 40 she begins to receive an annual pension, which continues through the rest of her life, or until she marries.

More Domestics.

Statisticians are not always right, so far as the causes of insanity are concerned, according to Dr. Britton D. Evans, head of the New Jersey Hospital for the Insane, at Morris Plains. In his annual report this year he says: "The occupation of insane patients previous to admission is thought by many to play an important part in the causation of their mental aberration. Of the 495 admitted during the last year 150 were housemaids and domestics, which is 30 per cent of the total admissions. This is interesting, but not in harmony with the contention of numerous statisticians."

Fire Hints.

In escaping from a fire creep along the floor of the room, with face as near the floor as possible. Smoke ascends and there is always a fresh current of air in which one can breathe with greater ease near the floor. If a lamp gets overturned water will be of no use in extinguishing the flames. Earth, sand or flour thrown on it will have the desired effect.

The Over-Sensitive Woman.

The oversensitive woman is of all women the most likely to bring unhappiness upon herself. The chief obstacle to helping people of sensitive temperament, whether such people are young or old, is the idea which dominates most of them that their sensitiveness is not accounted a defect to be controlled by the laws of common sense.

They go through much real misery, hugging their sensitive feelings to their hearts, their pride and their unhappiness mutually encouraging each other.

Sensitive people, above all others, have most need of that grand, spiritual virtue, common sense. And over sensitive girls should be carefully instructed as to the dangers of their peculiar temperament. They should be taught to govern not only their actions but their thoughts and feelings by reason and judgment.

They should be shown how to argue out their misery and reduce it to its lowest terms before allowing themselves to be made miserable by imaginary sorrows. And such girls should be made to believe firmly that no virtue lies in unhappiness.

A Flower Chapeau.

Most of the prettiest spring hats are veritable flower gardens or fruit orchards, so to speak, and in either case are wonderfully attractive. A charming example of the garden type is depicted in above illustration—a chapeau of pale violet satin straw smartly trimmed with a large bunch of La France roses and white violets and foliage. Tie strings of satin ribbon matching the straw start from each side and join in a bow under brim at back.

Erectness of Carriage.

To hold herself well has now become indispensable to the woman or girl who wishes to make a creditable figure in the world of smartness. Lounging is completely out of date. The directoire style put it entirely out of court. The adoption of the low bodice line for ordinary day wear, with filling in of transparent chiffon, net or lace, imperatively demands that the shoulders be held well back.

SOME LAST YEAR'S HATS REMODELED.

Snap Shots at Women

The most extensive trousseau on record is that of the late Empress of China. The trousseau cost over $1,000,000.

In several Dutch towns a birth is announced by exposing a silk pincushion covered and edged with lace at the door—red for a boy and white for a girl.

Queen Wilhelmina, who has recently become a convert to perfumes, prefers the soft, uncertain French odors, and she uses them in a French way. She scents each article of clothing strongly, but with a different odor.

Mrs. Mary Nevins Bull, widow of Dr. William T. Bull, has presented to the New York Academy of Medicine a bronze bust of her husband, which was Dr. Bull's last gift to her before he died. She gives it to the academy in his son's name.

New Type of Womanhood.

Australian womanhood is established on a high plane, and from her own country she takes certain qualities that in time will so develop a new and original and altogether fascinating type. For here is the choicest and the brightest that the world knows—an English mind and heart stimulated into fullest play by the genial warmth of Australia. —Exchange.

Family and the Meals.

Meals should be something more than the consumption of food. All work stops at those times and people meet together. Nothing that can be done should be omitted to make it an occasion of agreeable interchange of thought and conversation, and when this is done not only the body but the mind and nerves are refreshed.

Bachelors' Money for Spinsters.

Maine's "old maids" are to be pensioned at the expense of the bachelors and widowers, if an act which has been introduced in the Legislature becomes a law.

His Ideal.

"What's the ideal wife?"

"The one a man hasn't got."

REVIEW OF INDIANA

Scarlet fever is again raging in Delphi. It is reported that fifteen new cases have developed within the last few days.

Joseph Douglas, a civil war veteran over eighty years old of Madison, is dying from blood poisoning, caused by the removal of an ingrowing great toe nail.

The Laidlaw-Dunn-Company, of Cincinnati, has been awarded the contract to install an airlifting system at the municipal waterworks in Goshen, the contract price being $6,010.

Former State Senator Richard M. Milburn, of Jasper, will go to Bloomington, June 30, to accept a position as instructor in the Law Department of the Indiana State University.

The First Presbyterian church of South Bend will celebrate its diamond jubilee June 20. That date will also mark the twentieth anniversary of the pastorate of the Rev. H. W. Johnson.

A horse and buggy belonging to Samuel B. Miller, a Lawrence county farmer, which was stolen last Saturday from the public square at Bedford, was recovered in New Albany and former Sheriff Raymond Morris will claim the reward of $50 offered for its recovery.

The farm residence and barn of David McBride, four miles northeast of Salem, was burned to the ground a few days ago. Mr. McBride is positive it was the work of incendiaries, as he says he tracked them for a mile by scattered straw. The loss was $3,000, with no insurance.

Jacob Camp, aged 50 years, a farmer, died of fright at Columbus, when driving to his home. His team ran away, and when he was standing in an effort to control the horses he was seen to fall. When the team was stopped he was dead, but with no marks of injury on him.

Andrew Mattern, the oldest male resident of Huntington county, died last week. He was born in Huntington county, Pennsylvania, March 17, 1812, and had been a resident of Huntington county, Ind., since 1868. Mrs. Mattern, whom he married sixty-nine years ago, survives at the age of ninety-four.

J. E. Milburn, slayer of Vincent Hermann, was indicted on the charge of involuntary manslaughter by the grand jury at Logansport. Last week he was tried on the charge of voluntary manslaughter, and the jury, after being out twenty-six hours, failed to agree and was discharged. Milburn stabbed Hermann to death during a boyish quarrel.

The police found Nelson Dixon, of Columbus, lying unconscious in the old Cerealine mill, an establishment which has been vacant for several years. The man was unconscious and was bleeding from the mouth. The physician said the man was suffering from an attack of apoplexy. He is still unconscious and physicians say he has little chance for recovery.

Incorporation papers have been filed and approved for a big land company, whose principal offices will be in Crawfordsville, the object of the new company being the buying, selling and colonizing of Texas lands. The company is incorporated for $60,000. The incorporators are John M. Glover and Charles W. Hymer, of Crawfordsville, and Claude B. Harris, of Houston, Texas.

The county commissioners at Salem recently allowed a claim presented by former Treasurer John H. Etzler for $2430. This claim represents the money that Etzler lost while treasurer of Washington county in the failure of the People's State Bank of Brownstown. The claim was finally allowed over the vigorous protest of a large number of taxpayers, who were represented at the meeting by Zach M. Scifres.

To save her two small children from starvation, Mrs. John Kekich, a Polish woman of Gary, took an expensive Panama hat to the police station to be raffled or sold to purchase milk for her babies. An exciting raffle took place later at the station, and $15 was raised for the needy woman. Mrs. Kekich is a widow, her husband before he died being the owner of a saloon. In her prosperous days she purchased the hat for her son, who is attending college in Spokane, Wash.

Dale Andrew, a fourteen-year-old boy near East Mt. Carmel, was killed. An older brother was running the corn crusher at their home, it being worked with a big circular sweep turned by a team of horses. The older brother went into the house a few minutes. Hearing a scream he rushed out, only to find his little brother lying dead near the crushing box. The sweep had struck the child, and he had been knocked so that he head fell in between the grist stone and the crushing box. At the first scream the team stopped, but death had already resulted.

The United States cement plant in Bedford announces that the plant will close indefinitely, owing to the slow sale of cement. About three hundred men will be thrown out of employment.

Elisha Pegg, who in early days was driver of the stage line between Warsaw and Goshen, is said to have been victimized out of $10,800 as the result of misplaced confidence in a supposed friend at Denver. Crippled and 75 years of age, Pegg is now penniless.

Firemen at Evansville stopped fighting the flames at the plant of the Indiana Stove works long enough to rescue thousands of English sparrows that had built their nests in the building. They then secured hay for the birds to use in rebuilding their nests.

Jerry E. Drudge, one of the wealthiest farmers of Fulton county, who lives at Akron, has a serious attack of gangrene in his right foot. Amputation may be necessary. He is president of the National bank of Akron, and owns one of the largest cattle and agricultural farms in the state.

Thomas Kenton, a mail carrier, of Shelbyville, has a chicken with three legs and four feet. The chicken was given Mr. Kenton by Mr. Kennedy, one of his patrons.

On Wednesday, June 2, Kokomo will give an automobile day. The event will celebrate the sixteenth anniversary of the completion of the first automobile built in Kokomo. There will be races, a parade and contests of skill in driving. Invitations will be sent to all automobile clubs in Indiana to attend in a body. The aim will be to make it the greatest automobile meet ever held in the state.

Louis Mottaz, of Jeffersonville, has a Maltese cat which has adopted as her own three fluffy young chicks, which came into the world four days ago. Their mother is missing and it is surmised that pussy may have removed her before entering upon her novel realtionship to the little ones. Mottaz intends to see that these at least shall not be added to her larder when they get bigger.

In a recent case a negro was called to testify in the Clark Circuit court at Jeffersonville. "What is your name?" asked the attorney. "Thomas Mudd," was the reply. "And what is your occupation?" "I am a mud carrier," said Mudd, and when asked where he lived he stated that it was at Claysburg, that being the northern suburb of Jeffersonville. His evidence, however, was clear enough.

The official school census figures show 16,355 persons of school age in Fort Wayne, a gain of 268 over the count of last year. There were about 300 more than this in the 1907 count and Superintendent Study believes the full loss in 1908 will be recovered next year. The gain this year was general with no districts showing any amazing increases. Mr. Study is assured of retaining his place on the State board.

Eight well known grocers, butchers and milk dealers of South Bend and Mishawaka were notified that they are under charges of violating the pure food laws. The affidavits were sworn to by Frank W. Tucker, state food inspector, of Indianapolis, who has been in South Bend for the last three weeks making investigations. The affidavits were made out by Prosecuting Attorney Pattee on information given by Tucker.

Mice getting into a box of matches set the store of Charles Pugh on fire, and his meat market and stock of groceries at Elwood, valued at $1800 were destroyed. It was discovered after the fire that the rats had gnawed a hole in a case containing matches and mice had crawled through this hole, building a nest in the box. A mother and four little mice were cremated in the match pile, showing how the fire originated. Stock insured for $1000.

Col. Henry Friday, of Shelbyville, has a male cat that is very desirous of "mothering" several chickens. For the last two weeks the cat has selected two or three different nests in the yard of Mrs. Deprez, a neighbor, and when a hen, after laying an egg, steps from the nest, the cat will chase her away and crawl into the nest, where he will remain for some time. When he finally leaves the eggs remain in the nests uninjured. Mr. Friday intends trying the cat as a "hatching cat" when hatching time comes.

A distinctive type of the early settler days has passed away in the death of Peter Wells, of Elwood, who was the first undertaker in the central part of Indiana, and who made, by actual count 3374 coffins by hand from measurements furnished to him by families of the district. Wells often recalled an order from a farmer, long since dead, who came into his shop with a bean pole 6 feet and 9 inches in length and said it represented the height of his wife, who had just died. Mr. Wells was one of Elwood's wealthiest citizens. He was 83 years old and had been an Odd Fellow 62 years.

The proverbial cat with nine lives has been forced to take a back seat. A black bulldog belonging to the Home Storage company at Elwood, was shot through the head a few days ago by a policeman and three other balls were lodged in its body. It still showed signs of life, and the officer beat it over the head with his mace until it appeared that its skull was crushed to a jelly. Despite this treatment it got up and staggered off down the street while the patrolman was reloading his revolver. When pursued it took refuge under a large building and could not be dislodged. Two days later it appeared at the Home storage barns and was cared for by the hostlers, and was later sent to a farm in the country, where it will be allowed to live out its remaining days unmolested. The strange part of the affair is that the animal shows no ill results from the bullet that must have passed through its brain, or the fracture of its skull.

The Indianapolis News says that it has received reports from its correspondents throughout the state on the cold wave of last week, and that they declare that the fruit crop was not injured, as the wind kept the frost away.

The clothing of Lawrence Eaton, a 14-year-old boy at Bluffton, caught fire from the gasoline apparatus of a pop corn wagon. His life was saved when a passing pedestrian chucked him into the water in a drinking fountain for horses which was near the spot.

Ernest Sanders, fourteen years old, was accidentally shot and fatally injured at Vincennes by his older brother, Ambers Sanders, while preparing to go hunting. His left ear and the left side of his face were torn away.

The Nappanee Advance rates Ephraim Seider, of near Foraker, as a model farmer. He owns between 300 and 400 acres of land. All of his fence posts are concrete and he uses wire fencing. He uses a steam traction engine in plowing. In the corners of each field he has large cisterns with which to feed his engine.

The Conduct of a Campaign

By Gov. Thomas R. Marshall.

THE conduct of a campaign has not only been the source of sleeplessness to the great generals of the world, but also to the great politicians, ever since questions of public policy have been submitted to the suffrages of a free people. How to win is always the problem and sometimes I am inclined to think that more attention is paid to the question of winning than to the real question—as to how a campaign should be won.

Too much thought and consideration is given to the putting of planks in party platforms, upon the theory that they will appeal to this, that or the other class of voters. It may not be true, but it seems reasonably probable that in the past many party platforms have broken down from their own sheer weight. A great many people are inclined to think that manhood suffrage is a failure; that there is so much ignorance, cupidity and dishonesty in the world, that you do not after all get a fair expression of the right or the wrong by submitting the same to the determination of voters who have no other qualifications for the discharge of their duties than the bare fact that they are American citizens. And so many persons are dispirited; many think that principles have been destroyed; many believe that politics is a game and that it is won by the most skillful player.

For myself, I am not inclined as yet to believe that the American people are willing to over-ride, break down and utterly destroy the principles upon which our government was formulated.

I have seen tried all sorts of lawsuits. I have seen a skillful lawyer win a bad cause. So long as lawsuits are tried, the parties on each side seeking to avail themselves of every technicality to win a verdict regardless of the justice of the cause, that long will you hear complaint with reference to the jury system, because the determination is not a settlement upon the right or the wrong of the questions involved, but it is simply a reward of merit given to the most skillful advocate. This distrust of the jury system by the man who has a good cause and the lawyer who wants to prosecute it in the right way, is wholly unjustifiable. The business of a lawsuit is to settle the right and the wrong of a controversy and the lawyer who finds out what the right is and hammers at it all the while and hammers at the individual juror in the right way, is more than reasonably certain to win his case.

The mind of a juror approaches the truth in a different way. Therefore, the successful lawyer must ascertain the correct avenue in which to approach with the truth the mind of the individual juror. To that extent the lawyer is entitled to use all of his arts, because he is using them to reach a right conclusion. I think most lawyers will agree that you rarely have more than one truth in a lawsuit and that that truth is frequently lost sight of by being covered up with wholly immaterial matters.

Now an election in America seems to me to be much like the truth of a lawsuit. There ought to be in each campaign, one salient feature to be presented for the judgment of the voters of America. The average man wants to settle one thing at a time. You give him too many problems to solve at one and the same time, and he is liable to solve them all erroneously. But give to the individual man one single, important question to settle and if it be true and right, then I believe that you can present the matter in such a way that the individual will reach a correct solution.

In the realm of politics, however, you cannot solve problems as you do in the domain of mathematics. Each man solves his problem for himself in his own way. It is legitimate, therefore, in the conduct of a campaign, after you have settled the question upon which you want to make your fight, to present that question to different minds in different ways.

An old democrat—educated in the science of political economy before the protection theory was ever advanced as one that should be seriously considered by this government—it would shake the foundations of my belief if I should ever have a moment's doubt upon the proposition that no tariff taxes can legitimately be levied by this government of ours, except for the purposes of raising revenue.

This question seems to me to yet remain the vital and important question. It is not difficult as a matter of pure logic to convince thinking men that it is correct. I have heretofore had occasion to appeal to the patriotism of the people of this country and to ask them whether this theory, if put into practice, would either add to or take from their present store of wealth. That high plane will reach some people. I am convinced, however, that there are other persons who, in the hour of peace, will be unwilling to make a large financial sacrifice in order to restore to supremacy the principles of our government. I refer to that class of people who are ordinarily called business men. The phrase is a misnomer, for every man in America, except the tramp, is a business man. I presume, however, that the phrase means—not the manufacturer, but the man who buys and sells either at wholesale or retail, I can well see how tinkering with tariff schedules might affect the value of a stock of merchandise; how it might enhance the saleable value of it in the market and how upon the other hand it might depreciate that saleable value in the market. How then is this man to be convinced that not only principal, but interest, requires him to support a tariff for revenue theory. For many years we have been in a turmoil over the schedules in our tariff legislation. The various interests have expended large sums of money to elect representatives in congress favorable to themselves. They maintain expensive lobbies, all for the purpose of keeping the schedule where it is or still further increasing it. Some work together intelligently, but when it comes to a question of saving himself or saving his neighbor, every man saves himself. The constant tinkering with schedules produces a spirit of unrest in the business world. No man knows what may be the next move in congress; he does not know whether his particular business will be benefitted or endangered. I maintain, therefore, that the elimination of this question from politics—and by that I mean putting it upon such a basis that there will be no necessity to maintain lobbies nor corrupt nor intimidate electors—would not only be a good thing for the great body of the people, but would also be of great value to the large majority of the business men of America. I would not have any schedule go into immediate effect so as to paralyze the business and bankrupt the owner, but I would have—if I had the power—the schedules revised so as to make them revenue producers and nothing else and I would have them go into effect at such reasonable time in the future as would enable the business man, without loss, to adjust his ventures. I want the business man of America to seriously consider this one question—Do you not believe that if the law was once so fixed that you need never have fear of the congress of the United States interfering in your business, so as to either add to or take therefrom a dollar, it would be a good thing for you? Do you not believe that you are big enough and brainy enough to take care of yourself if you are given a fair field and an open fight?

FRUIT CONDITIONS APPLES SHORT CROP

The Indiana Horticultural Society gives out the following report of present fruit conditions in the state as gathered from the society's correspondents:

The fruit buds have been unusually late to open this spring, occasioned by the cold weather. This is a favorable condition and lessens the probability of damage by late frosts. But little damage can so far be traced to frosts, but the drought of last year weakened the trees and thereby lessened the setting of fruit buds, especially of apples, so that the bloom is very light all over the state for that fruit—estimated at 35 per cent. Peaches, pears, plums and cherries are more promising, and will average a normal crop. Small fruits promise light yield, with strawberries very light crop.

Mrs. Elizabeth McCune, of Auburn, has deeded her house and lot of four acres on Indiana avenue to the Old Folks' home at Warren, Ind. There is one condition in the deed, and that is the home is to pay her the sum of $200 per year for three years, after which time the home is to care for her. The property is worth $3,500.

U. B. General Conference

The general conference of the U. B. church will hold its twenty-fifth quadrennial session at Canton, Ohio, May 13-24. This body is composed of about four hundred representatives, coming from nearly every state in the union, from Africa, China, Japan, Porto Rico and the Philippine Islands; these being bishops, generals, church officers and delegates elected by the church from the ranks of the laylty and ministery in equal representation from each conference. This is the highest authoritative body of the church and meets every four years. Rev. W. F. Parker left Tuesday for Canton, he being a member of the general church erection board. Chas. Arford, (a lay delegate elect) accompanied by his wife and daughter and Rev. O. B. Wells left Thursday to attend the conference.

We have just received a box of goods from the Swanson Rheumatic Cure Co., of Chicago, that we fully appreciate. The box contains toilet articles of all descriptions. Their goods are of the finest quality and excel most articles of a similar nature now on the market. The Swanson people have an ad in the HERALD which should be read by everyone.

Outdoor Poor Relief in 1908

Why was the total expenditure for official outdoor poor relief in Indiana over $65,000 greater last year than in 1907? The Board of State Charities has received detailed reports of poor relief for last year from every one of the 1,016 township overseers of the poor. These have been compiled and show the total expenditures for the year amounted to $292,496.19—greater by $65,191.48 than in 1907, and $48,594.82 more than the average annual expenditure of the eight years immediately preceding.

The conditions during the winter of 1907-8 were extremely hard on the poor and it is known the demand for aid was very heavy particularly in certain parts of the State. It was expected that there would be a considerable increase in the amount of relief given by the township trustees. In all but fourteen of the ninety-two counties in the State more relief was given last year than in 1907. This varied from $13.30 in Lagrange county to $7,608.87 in Lake county. Center township, Marion county, containing the city of Indianapolis, gave aid to the amount of $9,577.79, and North township, Lake county, containing the city of Hammond, gave $9,724.26, the highest amount of any county in the State. Fifty nine townships gave no aid, 395 gave less than $100, 449 between $100 and $500, 64 between $500 and $1,000, and 49 $1,000 and over.

Col. Strathmore 2:12¼

Col. Strathmore 2:12¼, owned and in the stud of L. J. Diehl, Butler, Ind., the sire of Clatemore, with a four-year-old record of 2:21¼, winner of five straight races his first year out, and Marion Strathmore, with a two-year-old record of 2:27 in a three-year-old class, is a representative of the greatest family of early producers in the world. He is an exceptionally fast horse himself and also a sire of early speed. His sire, Strathmore, is the sire of Abbie Strathmore 2:07¾, Terrell S. 2:08¼, Strathmeath 2:10¼, Strathdennis 2:10¾, and eighty-five other standard performers. He is one of the greatest of the trotting horse family builders. His dam, Crescent, is herself a race mare with a record of 2:24¼, and is the dam of Col. Strathmore 2:12¼, Crescendo 5:15¼, and George Crescens 2:17¼ as a three-year-old, she by Ira Wilkes, sire of eighteen standard performers; his second dam, Rigolette, took a race record of 2:22 and is also the dam of Exmore 2:18¼, Crescent 2:24¼. Many of his colts now in training show extreme speed, one in particular, a yearling, owned at Logansport, Ind., that has stepped an eighth in 17¼ seconds hitched to a cart. They are uniformally good individuals, good headed and have plenty of speed. Col. Strathmore is a coming young sire, worthy the consideration of breeders. Terms $20.00 to insure. $25.00 for living foal.

L. J. DIEHL.

Judge O'Rourke, of Fort Wayne, gave Edgar Coddington a fine of $50 and thirty days in jail for running a blind tiger in the town of Woodburn, and also ordered the sheriff to destroy $200 worth of liquor Coddington had in his possession. There was quite an argument over the disposition of the liquor, but the judge finally decided that the only thing to do was to "pour it out in the street." It is claimed that this is the first time in the state that a judge has ordered the supply of liquors on hand destroyed in a blind tiger case. The Coddington place was being conducted in wet territory without a license.

The announcement is made from Indianapolis that there will not be a county option election called in Allen county this year; also that the fight in four or five other counties with large cities will be postponed until the battles in the counties of smaller populations are all fought out. It is claimed that a large sum of money will be required to carry on a campaign in a large county and that it will take some time to raise it. Just why it is necessary to spend large sums of money to carry on a dry campaign is not apparent. A couple thousand dollars ought to come pretty near covering all expenses in any county, but the Indianapolis correspondent intimates that it will take $50,000 to carry on a dry campaign in Marion county. Of the big, uncertain counties it is intimated that St. Joseph will be the next one in which the battle will be fought. Vigo, Vanderburg and Marion as well as Allen will be deferred indefinitely.

We Stand or Fall by These Clothes—$10 to $25

You cannot find, at any price, better style or better fit than that in CLOTHCRAFT CLOTHES. You simply can't find it. It doesn't exist.

This you can prove for yourself. You know style when you see it. You can tell when a garment fits.

But we want you to know that CLOTHCRAFT CLOTHES are good—real, down-right good—in other ways than fit and style. We do wish we could make you know how good they really are.

Clothcraft Clothes

We Stake Our Name on these clothes. Do you realize what that means? It means that we know that, if these clothes are not as good as we promise, you and hundreds of others will be driven away from our store.

But we are not afraid. We know the honest men who make CLOTHCRAFT. We know that they use nothing but wool, pure wool.

We know the factory—the wonderful factory, full of sunlight, full of fresh air. We know how the clothes are made.

We know the wonderful system that reduces the cost of making. For these clothes

Save You Nearly a Third—a third in actual cash—cash that you can use for hats or shoes.

This is the only line of all wool clothes in America that sells at $10 to $25.

This wool and these clothes are guaranteed—the maker's guarantee as good as gold in each suit. And knowing the clothes and their makers, we add our guarantee to theirs.

These clothes will go fast—we know it. We're real proud of our allotment and we want you to see it before it's broken up. Come today.

Remarkable Situation

No more remarkable situation ever existed in the national legislature of a great nation than that which confronts all inquiries for information regarding the tariff bill. It is no exaggeration to say that there is just one man out of the nearly five hundred members of congress who really understands the innumerable schedules of the tariff bill, the effect of their proposed modifications, and the reasons therefore. There are many, of course, who think they understand one or more specific schedules, but ask any member for clear cut, definite explanations of this or that schedule, the reasons for and effects of proposed increases or decreases and insist on comprehensive answers, and sooner or later you will get the same reply, "ask Aldrich." The powerful influence which this baneful situation confers on the senator from Rhode Island, popularly known as the Hight Priest of Protection, can easily be appreciated. When the tariff bill is finally enacted it will be the work of Nelson W. Aldrich and it is hardly necessary to say that those special interests for which Mr. Aldrich cherishes particular regard will be well protected. Even the president himself when consulted as to his views regarding particular schedules is compelled to confess that he is a tyro in the matter, and while he does not say so, it is perfectly obvious that he too, is depending very largely on the advice and judgment of the senator from Rhode Island.

Harry Weaver, five-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Weaver, residing southwest of Avilla, was badly scalded Tuesday afternoon with boiling water, about the face, neck and arms.

Posey county, with Mount Vernon as the county seat, Friday voted wet in the county local option election, giving the wets a majority of 1449, which is the largest majority so far registered in favor of the wets in this state. Posey county is the sixth county in the state to line up in favor of saloons. In the city of Mount Vernon the wet majority was 703. There was a heavy vote, among the farmers and the large wet majority was a surprise to the drys.

The Merchant's Dream

Last evening I was talking
With a merchant aged and gray.
When he told me of a dream he had,
I think 'twas Christmas Day.

While snoozing in his office
This vision came to view;
For he saw an angel enter,
Dressed in garments white and new.

Said the angel, "I'm from heaven:
The Lord just sent me down
To bring you up to glory
And put on your golden crown.

You've been a friend to every one.
And worked hard, night and day;
You've supported many thousands
And from few received your pay.

So we want you up in glory,
For you have labored hard.
And the good Lord is preparing
Your eternal, just reward."

Then the angel and the merchant
Started up towards glory's gate,
But when passing close to hades
The angel murmured "Wait—

I've a place I wish to show you;
It's the hottest place in Hell,
Where the ones who never paid you
In earth forever dwell."

And behold the merchant saw there
His old patrons by the score,
And grabbing up a chair fan,
He wished for nothing more.

He desired to sit and watch them
As they'd sizzle, singe and burn;
And his eyes would rest on debtor
Whichever way they'd turn.

Said the angel, "Come on merchant
There are pearly gates to see."
But the merchant only muttered,
"This is Heaven enough for me."

Mrs. Connors, an aged Garrett lady, was run down and instantly killed Thursday evening by a freight train at Garrett, where she was visiting. She was the mother of Yardmaster John Connors, of Garrett.

"BRUSH out well" is the Devoe Lead-and-Zinc rule for painting; two thin coats, brushed out as thin as can be made to cover the surface, are better than anything else--except three. Few people paint three coats.

Devoe Lead-and-Zinc brushes out well and covers well, because of the fine grinding it gets in making. No hand-mixed lead and oil compares with it for economy and wear.

Dealers sell it; get Devoe paint things for all sorts of fixing up. Geo. W. Geddes, Agent.

Fine Compliment

A daily paper of Bowling Green, Kentucky, contained the following notice of J. E. Sturgis, who is singing in evangelistic meetings at that place: "Those who heard Prof. Sturgis in his rendition of the Victor's Crown" last night count themselves favored. "He sings as unto the Lord and not to men." A splendid physique, all its powers are put forward in glorifying God in song. His manners are reverent, his voice treated as a gift and not as a phonograph; every note has its distinct and peculiar tone with that especial richness of timbre that characterizes a highly developed tenor. He is considered to be the best talent that has ever assisted in evangelistic work in Bowling Green."

So light running that your "youngest" can now mow the lawn without help.

KEEN KUTTER Mowers are fast cutting and easy running because of the triple gear and the fine ball bearings. A KEEN KUTTER will last longer than any mower on the market and is easily kept keen and sharp. To sharpen, merely reverse the blades and they sharpen themselves. A cheap mower will cost more in the end on account of repairs, will not do the work properly and will require twice as much labor.

The KEEN KUTTER is a money saver, a time saver, a temper-saver—and will keep your lawn looking like velvet.

MASURY'S HOUSE PAINT
THE PAINT WITH THE LONGEST LIFE

There is no question about it.

Masury's House Paints have been submitted to every possible test during the past sixty-five years. They have withstood the attacks of extreme heat, extreme cold, moisture and time. When properly applied on the proper surface they invariably give good accounts of themselves. Painters praise them because of their endurance and preservative qualities. Consumers endorse them because, by their use, they are spared the expense of repainting for the longest possible period. The wonderful success of the house of John W. Masury & Son for more than half a century is due to the care with which they select the ingredients used in the manufacture of their paints. Many substances could be used to lessen cost, but they are unhesitatingly rejected.

PURE LINSEED OIL

is used on account of its superior preservative qualities. The pigments ground with it are selected because experience has proved them to be best. In deciding upon paints for original painting or repainting you must remember it costs just as much to spread poor paints as it does to spread the best paints, and that in the interests of economy you should choose Masury's House Paints for the reason that they live the longest and retain their brilliancy of finish long after inferior paints have completely vanished. They are manufactured only by

The streets of the city are badly torn up and some of them are shut off from traffic. The work being done now in the way of putting in taps should have been executed last fall, and the present annoyance just when it is very undesirable, would have been eliminated. We hope the council will allow no further delays, as the past winter has been a very expensive experiment to the city, and one we can ill afford.

At LaGrange the grand jury in the case of Joneh Barcellona, the Italian who killed Alva Tritch, brought in a verdict of second degree murder. Punishment was fixed a life imprisonment. The other Italians who were mixed up in the affair are still in jail. The murder occurred at a dance at Elmira, LaGrange county, in February. Tritch, who helped to eject the Italians from the hall, was waylaid and stabbed to death.

Florence Dawson, by her attorney, P. V. Hoffman, has begun suit in the circuit court asking that Romaine Campbell and James D. The person who takes a newspaper for a year or more without paying for it and then has the postmaster mark it refused is just as bad as the low down thug or cut throat. The honorable way is to first pay up and then order the paper discontinued like a man. It is really astounding how many people there are in the world who think it is proper to rob the printer. There is a very warm spot reserved for them in purgatory. But to give them their just deserts, a term in the penitentiary at hard labor would be proper punishment for such onery cusses. This notice fits the case of three fellows in Wilmington township who pose as men.

Kendallville has a cash balance in the city banks of $25,000 against an $18,000 bonded indebtedness. This is a splendid showing. Kendallville is the best town in this part of the state, considering size, and her large manufacturing establishments are pushing her rapidly to the front.

The impression has got abroad that Dr. C. W. Beechler intends to locate in the west and will not return to Butler. This is not true. Dr. Beechler will be in the west only about six weeks and will then return to Butler where he will resume his practice and hopes to see his old patrons and many new ones in his office.

The Knisely Dry Goods Co. will add a lot of floor space to their already large store. The two office rooms now used by Mayor Webster will be converted into a part of the store, thus giving them much needed space for their big stock. We are pleased to see this enterprising firm growing so rapidly. It is a splendid place at which to trade.

If certain alleys in Butler are not cleaned up within a reasonable time there will be something doing in the old town. The same rotten conditions that have existed for several years will not be allowed this summer. There is a way to compel people to clean up the filth from their alleys, and all the power of the law will be invoked unless immediate action is taken.

The first annual meeting of the DeKalb County Bankers' association was held in Auburn Wednesday. This is a new association and was organized in 1908. W. H. Coffinberry, of Garrett, is the secretary; J. D. Litchy, of St. Joe, president; John Schloss, of Auburn, vice president and L. M. Hines, of Auburn, treasurer. Bankers from all parts of the county were present.

The May term of the DeKalb circuit court, which will begin on Monday, May 17, will be a long one, lasting for sixteen weeks, until the 4th of September. It is the longest court term in the year. The other terms are only six or seven weeks in length. The grand jury will be in session and there will be some business for them. The eyes of the law are open wide just now for law breakers.

Rev. Braden took a brave stand last Sunday night. Before commencing his baccalaureate sermon he asked the ladies to remove their hats, and nearly every woman in the church complied. It was a relief to the male portion of the audience, and, by the way, some very charming heads were seen. The ladies of Butler need not be ashamed of their heads, as the stylish manner in which they dress hair is very becoming and presents a much prettier sight than those awfully awful large hats.

Dealers in strawberries had better be on their guard from now on, for the state board of health proposes to enforce the rule it made some time ago that all fruits exposed for sale must be covered and kept from the air and the outside dust and dirt.

The political leaders and party hustlers, both democrats and republicans in Posey county fought for the wet side of it in the option election They cut out politics and resolved it was time for all boozefighters to stand together and they still have 52 saloons to show for their pains and political disinterestedness.—Columbia City Mail.

The Butler public schools closed Wednesday. The school work has been very successful this year and the teachers are deserving of much praise. The eighth grade commencement held in the Christian church on Thursday evening, and the commencement of the high school graduating class to be held in the opera house, Friday night, will be written up in our next issue. Order extra copies of the HERALD at once if you desire them.

Sunday evening at the U. B. church Rev. Braden preached the baccalaureate sermon to the graduating class of the Butler high school and the 8th grade graduating class. The sermon was a masterpiece of eloquence and logic. Rev. Braden, always an artist at word picturing, transcended all former efforts in his address of Sunday evening. His advice was of that highly elevating nature that cannot help but inspire one to better and nobler action. Mrs. Stage's orchestra rendered several selections which added greatly to the splendid program of the evening.

Really, it is hard to admit that there is any legitimate excuse for the existence of a saloon. We never did have any patience with the fatuous theory that some way or another saloons are necessary to good towns from a business standpoint. Yet, it is not a one-sided question. If the open drinking places are destroyed, and the drinking is all driven to secret nooks, to private clubs and to the homes of the people, what condition will that eventually bring about? In the United States the drinking of intoxicants has been confined largely to the men. The American saloon has been a man's drinking place. Is it not possible that the destruction of the saloon will mean more of an invasion of the fireside by the drinking practice? These are questions for serious consideration. The destruction of the open saloon does not mean the suppression of the drinking practice. It seems to us that an open and regulated saloon is to be preferred to a hidden and illicit drinking place. Nevertheless, we believe the tenure of existence of the American saloon is of brief duration. Only time can disclose what will take its place.—Washington Herald.

FINDING TREASURE on the FARM

IOWA'S HOGS ALONE WOULD PAY THE SALARIES OF ALL THE MONARCHS OF EUROPE

IF THE YEAR'S OUTPUT OF THE FARM WERE TURNED INTO SILVER DOLLARS LAID EDGE to EDGE THEY WOULD REACH AROUND THE WORLD 6 1/3 TIMES.

IF THE AMERICAN FARMER WANTED TO SELL OUT, the WHOLE UNITED STATES WOULD NOT HAVE MONEY ENOUGH TO BUY.

THE American farmer every year finds on his broad acres a treasure greater by two billions of dollars than all the gold in circulation and in the vaults of the nations of the earth. That is, indeed, a treasure worth delving for. Beside it the fabled hoard of Capt. Kidd, the buried wealth of Pecos island, fade into insignificance. In one year one class of people in one country produce more than the world could find ready money to buy. If the treasure taken from these farms could be had in silver dollars and these dollars were laid edge to edge, the line would reach around the earth six and one-third times. There would be 152,706 miles of dollars. It would have taken a considerable sized cavern to have held this much booty, and one pirate would have kept himself busy several years in burying it. If the silver in these dollars could be molded into one sheet of the thickness of a coin, that sheet would cover twelve and one-sixth square miles. And this mammoth treasure was taken from American farms in the year 1908. If all the pirates who sailed the Spanish main for a century had formed a trust and pooled their booty, enough to satisfy anybody's dream of wealth, it would have paled beside the yearly earnings of the American farmer. So vast is the sum represented by our farm products that the mind cannot realize what it means. No trust or combine or railway or collection of railways ever dreamed of making so much money in a year. No mine or combination of mines give up so much of their hidden wealth. The American farmer is the biggest thing in the world, says the Detroit News-Tribune.

The high water mark was reached by this colossal agriculturist in 1908. Never before did he produce so much or get such prices for what he produced. In round numbers he added $7,778,000,000 to the wealth of the world. Those figures are not the result of a careless calculation or a wild guess. They represent a fact, and this fact is vouched for by the Secretary of Agriculture. This is four times the products of the mines of the country, including mineral oils and precious metals.

Since 1880 the gain in the value of farm products is marvelous. Many things have contributed to this, but the perfection of farming machinery has had more to do with it than anything else. In 1880 the total value of the farmers' crops and stock reached the total of $2,212,540,927. In 1900 this sum had increased to the gigantic proportions of $3,764,177,706. But the growth of the next eight years surpassed the growth of the preceding twenty years by so much that it strikes the reasoning mind as impossible. Yet it is not only possible, but an accomplished fact, for the products for 1908 amounted to $7,778,000,000, more than doubling in ninety-six months. What enterprise or group of enterprises can boast of having produced sixty billions of dollars' worth of anything in the past ten years? Yet the American farmer has done this, and nobody seems to be very much excited over it, either.

Would Buy Steel Trust.

Few nations of the world are able to grow more of anything than they want. The greater part of them have to send away for what they lack. This is where the American farmer comes out strong. He produces so much more than he wants that his exports alone could buy the steel trust at its face value every year and he would have $15,000,000 left over to amuse himself with. To give an idea of how great the farmer is, it is well to tell how great is this industry which he supports. This one company makes 56,000,000 castings every year. In 1908 it used 235 miles of leather belting, 940 miles of cotton duck, 2,000 grindstones, 3,000 shovels, 10,000 brooms, 1,670,000 buckles, 1,185,000 pounds of paint, 4,000,000 pounds of wire and 15,000,000 pounds of nails. To use this quantity of stuff means a business of some size, and it means that the market for such business supplies must be a market with a considerable amount of money to spend. Cotton exports reached the tidy sum of $438,000,000; grain and grain products brought from foreign countries the sum of $215,000,000, and packing house products brought $196,000,000.

If any business is going to succeed it must sell more than it buys. If a groceryman buys $5,000 worth of goods in a year and sells $3,000 he is very likely to find himself in the hands of his creditors. That the American farmer is on a pretty sound financial basis is attested by the pleasing fact that he sold to other countries in the year 1890 $488,000,000 worth more than he was obliged to buy from the agriculturists of lands across the seas.

But let us see what the individual farmer makes on an average. There are something in the neighborhood of 6,887,588 farmers in the country—quite a considerable army. Take Secretary Wilson's final total and deduct from it the interest on the investment—that is, the interest on the value of the farming lands, which amounts to $1,800,000,000—and there remains a total which, divided, gives every man in that army $868. What calling or profession can earn nearly two billions of dollars on its investment and then pay every man interested nearly $800 a year? In what trade will every man average annual earnings of this amount? But does this represent all the farmer makes? Of course, we must add his share of that $1,800,000,000 interest, which is a trifle over $261, and we have $1,129. And do not forget that in addition to this the farmer has no rent to pay and that he gets the greater part of his living off his place. Think these things over and then find, if you can, any trade, profession or calling which pays its devotees so generously as does that of tilling the soil.

Wealth Might Be Doubled.

This same great farmer might come pretty close to doubling his beautiful production if he went at it scientifically and conscientiously and without waste. It is declared on high authority that the corn crop alone might have been increased from 2,643,000,000 bushels to 4,000,000,000 of bushels if the farmer had used more science and brought more knowledge to bear on his labors. The hen alone produces eggs to the value of the total cotton crop. But if the farmer really understood how to care for his chickens the yield would be so great that the price of eggs would descend to 20 cents a dozen. The Secretary of Agriculture says our farmers' dairies produce results to the value of $800,000,000. In present conditions there are tens of thousands of cows that give less than 100 pounds of butter a year. If the farmer would pay more attention to intelligent breeding this amount could be raised to 300 or 400 pounds a year, and the animals receive the same food and care as before.

Could Sell for Thirty Billions.

If the farmer wanted to quit business to-day, he could sell out for something over $30,000,000,000, but he would have to wait for his pay, for there is nowhere money enough in the world to pay him in cash. It is estimated that the average daily production of the American farmer is worth $42,000,000, and that every time one's pulse beats four times this same big fellow has produced enough of something or other to bring $1,000. The agricultural exports since 1892 would buy all the railroads in the country and leave a considerable margin to start in on a trust-busting campaign. Now the farmer can cut fifty cords of wood in a day or milk sixty cows in two hours by machinery. This time-saving by machinery is the thing that makes possible the production of such enormous crops and the cultivation of such far-reaching farms.

There is a fine race among the States for agricultural supremacy. Minnesota is first with wheat, but Kansas runs a close second. Illinois and Ohio race neck and neck for honors in corn and oats; California takes the prize for barley; Texas and Louisiana are fighting for supremacy in the rice field; Kentucky is supreme in the tobacco world and New York takes the honors for hay and potatoes.

Let us look at just one State for a while. It is easier to understand smaller figures—and these are not so tiny after all. Iowa has $60,000,000 invested in farm machinery. In that State are 300,000 men and 20,000 women farmers. These produce $500,000,000 every year—an average of $1,600 apiece. The money received for Iowa's hogs every year would pay the salaries of all the monarchs in Europe. The government paid exactly $2,877,547.87 for Iowa when it bought it from the Indians. Last year's corn more than paid for this, and it is only one-fourth of the egg money. The hen produces the purchase price of the State every three months.

To-day in this country there are 15,000 farmers who have graduated from agricultural colleges. This number will increase every year, until the farm is run on as scientific a basis as the laboratory, and with as much special knowledge as the profession of law or medicine.

Uncle Sam Aids the Farmer.

What is the United States government doing for this farmer? Under this head meat inspection comes first. The government is doing all in its power to see that the farmer keeps his stock as it should be kept and that his meat is good meat to eat. To this end 2,500 men were employed as inspectors, and a huge drove of 51,000,000 animals were inspected before and after slaughter. Of these, 150,000 carcasses and 500,000 parts were condemned for disease or other causes. Over 500,000 head were inspected for export in 1908. Every year the government spends $12,000,000 and has 10,000 employes working for the benefit of the farmer. It issued 1,415 publications, comprising 52,000 printed pages and aggregating 16,000,000 copies. Such is the treasure that is found on the farm, something about the way it is found and the factors that contribute to its finding. The American farmer is a great institution, he is a treasure-seeker without peer and his treasure trove is without equal in the history of the world.

CHICAGO WOMAN 112 YEARS OF AGE.

MRS. MARY BONDZINSKI.

Four women with an aggregate of ages exceeding the period that has elapsed since the American continent was discovered by Columbus reside in Chicago. Collectively, they are 432 years old. All are in good health and able to be about. The oldest of the quartet is Mrs. Mary Bondzinski, who lives with her son, Anton Bondzinski, at 4456 Honore street. She says she is 112 years old and that she is the oldest woman in America. The three others are Mrs. Amelia Mocklee, aged 110 years; Mrs. Katherine Dombrolski, 107 years old, and Mrs. Katherine Hassey, aged 103 years. The memories of these women go back to the eighteenth century.

Mrs. Bondzinski was born in a village near Moscow, Russia. She came to America when 90 years of age, and is said to be the oldest immigrant ever passed through Ellis Island. "I remember well when Napoleon's army invaded Russia and Moscow was burned," she said. "Our people were filled with a great terror at the announcement of his advance. It seems like a dream now. When the years wore on and my folks in the old country were all dead, I came to America to join my children, who had preceded me. When I gave my age as 90 years at Ellis Island they detained me for a time, but finally passed me through. It had to be made evident to them, though, that I was not to become a dependent."

BATTLE WITH WILD SWAN.

Great Fowl Struck Ship's Cabin and Gave Two Sailors Hard Fight.

While coming up the bay to Baltimore Friday night the steamer Avalon ran into a flock of wild swans off Thomas Point and a swan was captured by the lookout, W. T. Whitely, who was on the forward deck, after a thrilling experience.

The steamer was running at a lively clip when Whitely heard a fluttering and a few minutes later saw a flock of swans directly in front of the boat, the Baltimore Sun says. They circled around a few times, then lit in the water on the port side. He notified First Officer Corkran, who turned on the searchlight. That seemed to frighten them and they all arose from the water. There appeared to be about 100 and all flew over the pilot house except one, which struck the port side of the steamer with a crash. A passenger in state room 45, which was damaged, thought there had been a collision and got out of his bed.

"When I saw the swan strike the boat I rushed up to it, expecting to pick it up with ease," said Whitely, speaking of his experience. "To my surprise the thing turned on me and gave me several blows with its wings which nearly knocked me down. Then I grabbed at it again, only to be pecked with its big bill, making my hands bleed.

"At first I did not know what kind of bird it was, but I was determined to capture it. The wings beat me back, but I kept up the battle until Mr. Corkran arrived and we tied the bird. Even after pinioning its wings it was hard to hold it, as its strength was great. We finally got a piece of rope and tied the legs together. Later a coop was made and we placed the bird in it."

Shortly after the steamer docked at Light street the swan was sent to the office of Assistant General Manager A. H. Seth of the company. The office force was attracted by the big bird, and when it was measured it was found to be eighty-nine inches from tip to tip of its wings and it stood fifty-five inches high. Mr. Seth presented the bird to the zoo at Druid Hill park.

SOME MARRIED MEDITATIONS.

By Clarence L. Cullen.

The Woman Problem—How to keep her nose from looking shiney.

She becomes mighty solicitous as to what you're going to have by way of an outfit of spring togs—after she has bought all her own.

Another woman who only imagines that she's a sure-fire hit is the one who makes it a sort of a boast that she "can't sew a stitch."

When a young woman gets to be known as a "good fellow," did you ever notice what a strangely long time it take her to snag a husband?

If you don't believe that the world moves, hark back only a dozen years or so and reflect upon what then was thought of the woman who kept her money in her stocking.

When a young woman of acidulous personality finds, after experimenting, that she can't trap any male victims, she proclaims that she has become a "bachelor girl."

Once there was a man who, five years after marriage, was just as eager to tie his wife's shoelaces as he had been during the courtship. He lived in a novel written by a woman.

The woman who brags that, after ten years of matrimony, her husband still makes love to her, sometimes forgets to wonder as to how he contrives to keep in such good practice.

The woman who "humorously" describes to the next man who comes along how the last fellow made love to her may make a comedy hit, but she's usually a long time getting married.

The guileless chap who says that his wife won't let him do this or that may be a knockout with the tabbies who look upon men as mice, but he's a dismal sort of a jellyfish all the same.

Why is it that, whereas the man with a flirtatious wife is the last human being on earth to discover it, the woman with a cut-up husband usually becomes wise to his curves almost immediately?

The "temperamental" woman who gives you the sad-and-sweet antelope gaze while she tries to make you believe that she "feeds upon memories alone," generally can do all sorts of things to a nice thick steak when you take her out and lead her to one.

The Old-Fashioned Bonnet.

How dear to my heart is the old-fashioned bonnet,
The old-fashioned bonnet that Nell used to wear;
Without any plums and red cherries stuck on it,
The bonnet that didn't require phony hair.
The dishpan effect may be stylish and stunning,
The waste-paper basket that's lately come in
May be quite the rage and recherche and cunning,
But give me the hat that she tied under her chin.
—Detroit Free Press.

Glove Cutting.

Glove cutting is purely a hand trade. No machine could cut out a glove properly, for the simple reason that it could not distinguish between good and bad, thick and thin, pieces of leather. Each piece of leather requires special treatment in shaping, and therefore the cutting can never be mechanical.

Fashion Note.

By wearing a sheath gown instead of a skirt
A woman not only doth court
Attention from all, but provideth withal
A visible means of support.
—Cornell Widow.

It's awfully hard for a woman to manage her house to the satisfaction of the hired girl.

A mean man seems to think the end justifies the means.

ATCHISON GLOBE SIGHTS.

Treat spring just as you would treat a friend you have not learned to trust.

If you are bound to put off something until to-morrow, put off being foolish.

If a man is big and fat, and keeps his mouth shut, he can bluff nearly anybody.

A man enjoys petting for a time, but after awhile, he hates it as he hates the devil.

If it is nicer to be a man than it is to be a woman, it must be tough to be a woman.

An automobile owner said to-day: "I could give my machine away, and make money."

You needn't love your enemy; if you refrain from telling lies about him, you will do well.

"When did you learn to chew tobacco?" a young man was asked today. "As soon as my father said I mustn't do it," he replied.

WITH THE SAGES.

If thou wouldst conquer thy weakness, thou must never gratify it.—William Penn.

Solid success must be based on solid qualities and the honest culture of them.—Carlyle.

No entertainment is so cheap as reading, nor any pleasure so lasting.—Lady M. W. Montague.

Find something to do. The power to find or make an object is a great part of genius.—Mallock.

Reasonable thought of to-morrow advances the work of to-day, but anxiety for what is still before us defeats its own end.—Parsons.

I do not like to talk much with people who always agree with me. It is amusing to coquette with an echo a little while, but one soon tires of it.—O. W. Holmes.

Not until you make men self-reliant, intelligent, and fond of struggles—fonder of struggle than of help—not till then have you relieved poverty.—Phillips Brooks.

SPLINTERS.

Steerage—The pilot house.

A man also makes discordant music when he sings about himself.

An engagement is like to-morrow, but marriage is like to-day.

It is the wise man who looks over the ground before he pitches his tent.

Boyce—Do you really believe that marriages are made in heaven? Joyce—No; the park seems to be the most popular spooning place.

Boyce—What did she do when he assured her that kisses weren't poisonous? Joyce — Turned around and kissed her pet poodle.

Adele—Did you say that Harry tried to kiss you when he called last evening? Estelle—Yes, he started toward me; but when he saw me kiss Fido he flunked.

Pastor—I suppose you keep in mind the Biblical injunction relative to loving your neighbors. Parishioner—Oh, yes; there are three pretty young widows in our square.

ANOTHER WOMAN CURED

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Gardiner, Maine.—"I have been a great sufferer from organic troubles and a severe female weakness. The doctor said I would have to go to the hospital for an operation, but I could not bear to think of it. I decided to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Sanative Wash—and was entirely cured after three months' use of them."—Mrs. S. A. Williams, R. F. D. No. 14, Box 39, Gardiner, Me.

No woman should submit to a surgical operation, which may mean death, until she has given Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made exclusively from roots and herbs, a fair trial.

This famous medicine for women has for thirty years proved to be the most valuable tonic and renewer of the female organism. Women residing in almost every city and town in the United States bear willing testimony to the wonderful virtue of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It cures female ills, and creates radiant, buoyant female health. If you are ill, for your own sake as well as those you love, give it a trial.

Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., invites all sick women to write her for advice. Her advice is free, and always helpful.

WESTERN CANADA THE PENNANT WINNER

FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE

"The Last Best West."

The Government of Canada now gives to every Actual Settler 160 acres of wheat-growing land free and an additional 160 acres at $3.00 an acre.

The 300,000 contented American Settlers making their homes in Western Canada is the best evidence of the superiority of that country. They are becoming rich, growing from 25 to 50 bushels wheat to the acre; 60 to 110 bushels oats and 45 to 60 bushels barley, besides having splendid herds of cattle raised on the prairie grass. Dairying is an important industry.

The crop of 1908 still keeps Western Canada in the lead. The world will soon look to it as its food-producer.

"The thing which most impressed us was the magnitude of the country that is available for agricultural purposes."—National Editorial Correspondence, 1908.

ECZEMA COVERED HIM.

Itching Torture Was Beyond Words—Slept Only from Sheer Exhaustion—Relieved in 24 Hours and Cured in a Month by Cuticura.

"I am seventy-seven years old, and some years ago I was taken with eczema from head to foot. I was sick for six months and what I suffered tongue could not tell. I could not sleep day or night because of that dreadful itching; when I did sleep it was from sheer exhaustion. I was one mass of irritation; it was even in my scalp. The doctor's medicine seemed to make me worse and I was almost out of my mind. I got a set of the Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Resolvent. I used them persistently for twenty-four hours. That night I slept like an infant, the first solid night's sleep I had had for six months. In a month I was cured. W. Harrison Smith, Mt. Kisco, N. Y., Feb. 3, 1908."

The Grip of Spring.

During the last twenty years many of our citizens have been attacked in the spring months by grip. Some have had serious or slight attacks every year or two. All know it to be a dangerous disease. If Lane's Pleasant Tablets (which are sold at 25 cents a box by druggists and dealers) are taken when the first symptoms are felt, there is hardly a chance of the malady getting a foothold. If you cannot get them near home, send 25 cents to Orator F. Woodward, Le Roy, N. Y. Sample free.

Pedigree of the Shirt.

Why does the being we call a gentleman wear around his neck a band of spotless whiteness and unbearable stiffness, at his wrists similar instruments of torture, and before his chest a rigidly starched linen plate? asks the Atlantic Monthly. No one outside of a madhouse would call these articles of apparel agreeable. There is for the custom no reason at all known from comfort, hygiene, or usefulness. There is, however, the ghost of a dead reason. Once upon a time a "gentleman" was presumed to do no work, and he dressed to show this, by putting on these visible signs that he never soiled his hands, sweated his neck, or bent his noble back. It matters not that we no longer believe in this definition of a gentleman; we did believe it once; its ghost rules on. No man is bold enough to appear in society without this impossible harness. Only a professional humorist, like Mark Twain, or some one who wishes to pose as a mild lunatic, dares rebel. Addison said that the man who would clothe himself according to common sense would find himself in jail within a week.

NOT DRUGS

Food Did It.

After using laxative and cathartic medicines from childhood a case of chronic and apparently incurable constipation yielded to the scientific food, Grape-Nuts, in a few days.

"From early childhood I suffered with such terrible constipation that I had to use laxatives continuously going from one drug to another and suffering more or less all the time.

"A prominent physician whom I consulted told me the muscles of the digestive organs were partially paralyzed and could not perform their work without help of some kind, so I have tried at different times about every laxative and cathartic known, but found no help that was at all permanent. I had finally become discouraged and had given my case up as hopeless when I began to use the pre-digested food, Grape-Nuts.

"Although I had not expected this food to help my trouble, to my great surprise Grape-Nuts digested immediately from the first and in a few days I was convinced that this was just what my system needed.

"The bowels performed their functions regularly and I am now completely and permanently cured of this awful trouble.

"Truly the power of scientific food must be unlimited." "There's a Reason."

FARMS AND FARMERS

Plans for Farm Barn.

The many very marked changes in farm life would lead one to believe that the large farm is, or soon will be, a thing of the past. The high price of farm help, the necessity for better cultivation and farming, fewer and better bred stock, better care of stock, better buildings for housing the hay, grain and stock, has or soon will bring the small farm, and, so planned and arranged that a greater variety of products are raised.

Many instances are known where the man who had struggled for years with 300 to 500 acres, barely made a living, and of doubling their income by simply renting out all of the land except fifty to eighty acres. That several cows must be kept on such a farm goes without saying, not only for the monthly income and profit, but for the manure that is necessary to keep the soil alive.

HANDY SMALL BARN.

Present sanitary requirements call for many devices and appliances that cannot be installed on the small farm, but cleanliness and kindness is within the possibilities of any of us, and while it is true that to house the cows in the same building with the horses has some disadvantages, it also has its advantages, and to build separate buildings for both, is not only expensive, but calls for extra help in caring for and feeding them.

A careful study of the barn shown in the illustration herewith will show what we will call a condensed arrangement, and, while the cows are in the same barn with the horses, a good, tight partition separates them from the horse barn, to keep out the dust and odors. For the same reason the silo is located where shown, for silage, no matter how well cared for, has an offensive odor, that is readily absorbed by milk.

The floor plan is self-explaining, the silo is an ordinary stave structure, with wire cables for hoops, as the cable is not so easily affected by contraction and expansion as the solid iron hoops.

The crib has the foundation left out as shown, and the floor is of 2x6 inch studding, with one-half-inch spaces between. The siding is drop siding, the same as the balance of the barn, but the top and lower edges are beveled, ad a one-half-inch space is left between each board. This construction allows a free circulation of air, and keeps out the rain, snow and wind. The small amount of corn that drops through the floor is eaten by the poultry and hogs. The studding are 12 feet, and the lower story is 8 feet; the cow stalls are of cement, with gutter, and all stalls have pounded clay floors. It will pay to plaster the walls and ceiling of the cow barn with cement. After the silo has been used for several years, it is intended to lath and plaster it with cement.

It will pay to use good material throughout, provide a good foundation and roof, and to keep all exposed wood work well painted.

As the various climates demand slightly different construction, and the lumber used is not the same in all sections, it would be simply a waste of valuable space to describe them here.—J. E. Bridgman, in St. Paul Dispatch.

Cultivation That Damages Corn.

The corn is often damaged by the roots being broken in deep cultivation. This is not the case to a serious extent early in the season, when the corn is small, but the check to the crop may be quite marked if cultivated deep late in the season, when the corn has reached a height of 2 to 3 feet or more, particularly if the previous cultivation has been shallow or neglected. If dry weather happens to follow such treatment the damage to the crop is much increased. When not followed by some form of cultivation that will level down the ridges left by the large shovel cultivator, the ground will dry out quite deeply and in the furrows between the ridges this drying readily reaches the roots of the corn. To obviate this as much as possible, when the old-fashioned large shovels are used, the work should be followed as soon as possible with something to level down the surface. Unless there is something to be gained by it, deep cultivation should not be followed.—Oklahoma Station.

Destroying Stumps.

Here are two ways of destroying stumps by means of acids: In the fall bore with an inch auger 10 inches deep into the stump. Into this put one-half pound of vitriol and cork up very tight. The stump will probably be rotten in about eight months. Another way: Bore with inch auger 18 inches deep into stump and put in one ounce of saltpeter and then fill the hole with water and cork. In about six months take out the plug and pour in about a gill of coal oil and set fire to it. This should burn the stump nearly up.—Valley Farmer.

Co-Operation Among Farmers.

Men in all other lines of business organize and work together. Farmers are beginning to see the need of concerted action, but as a rule we still work single-handed. At Lombard, Ill., about twenty miles west of Chicago, the farmers who produce milk for sale in the big city have tried several times to organize in order to force the milk trust to pay them a price in accordance with what the customer pays, but the trust is always able to hire some farmer to break the rules of the local association or to talk against the project to such an extent as to defeat its ends. That is one great difficulty in forming protective measures among farmers. There are always a few men in the community who are willing to sacrifice future advantages to gain a few cents in present price.—Agricultural Epitomist.

All in Management.

Folks say that if you want any class of stock that can always be sold at a profit, from weaning time until tottering old age, you want a mule. We do not raise mules, so can not speak from experience. This much we do know, however, several good friends of ours have been dickering in mules for years without making any money. Perhaps these are the exceptional cases that prove the rule. Others have raised and bought mules and made good money. We surmise it's more the man and his management than it is the mule, that reaps the profit. The same man dealing in razorbacks might make some money.—Farmers' Mail and Breeze.

Easily Regulated Gate.

The gate hanger illustrated in the drawing is very handy for use where it is desired to let hogs pass from one pasture to another while cows are confined to one. As shown, the hanger is a piece of strap iron bent around the post and supported by pegs. These pegs may be inserted in holes at varying heights. This is also a good device for raising the gate above the snow in winter.—Sam Avery, in Farm and Home.

ADJUSTABLE HANGER.

Fertilizing the Garden.

Don't be afraid of getting the soil too rich for any of the vegetables whose leaf or stem is edible. If you cannot have plenty of well rotted manure, a top dressing of nitrate of soda just before planting will furnish the plant food needed of nitrogen, but other elements may be needed for a proper balance. Wood ashes, if available, are a good source for potash, but sulphate or muriate of potash may be used instead and frequently a dressing of hyperphosphate is beneficial.

If one is growing only a small garden for home use, the droppings from the poultry house will furnish enough fertilizer to keep the soil in a good state of fertility; but if growing truck on a large scale, it would be well to inquire of your experiment station what commercial fertilizers would be of most help in securing maximum crops of the vegetables you wish to grow.

Fertilizer for Potatoes.

For potatoes the past year we used 1,200 pounds of fertilizer to the acre, one-third applied broadcast and the rest scattered in the furrow, brushing the fertilizer into the soil of the furrow before planting the seed. After planting, the surface was kept well stirred to prevent weeds starting and the cultivator was run often enough to keep down the weeds. A little hand hoeing was done. The yield was 250 bushels per acre. The crop followed corn and the land was very thoroughly harrowed before potatoes were planted. Plenty of harrowing and liberal use of fertilizers may be depended on to give a good crop.

Fertilizing the Lawn.

No top dressing nor fertilizer will do more to revive grass than nitrate of soda, and it should be used in combination with materials containing phosphoric acid and potash. A mixture of 150 pounds of nitrate of soda, 150 pounds of acid phosphate and 75 pounds of muriate of potash is recommended. Grass, even in old meadows, will respond very quickly to this treatment.

Breeding Corn.

Prof. R. A. Moore says that painstaking in breeding corn has raised the average corn production in Wisconsin from 25 bushels per acre in 1901 to 41.2 bushels per acre in 1907. This increase is worth striving for in every State and on every farm.

Notes of the Pig Pen.

Give growing pigs food to produce bone and muscle rather than fat.

No domestic animal responds so quickly to good treatment as the hog.

The pig should have a warm, dry bed kept clean and free from dust.

Thrifty hogs turn grains into money quicker than any other domestic animal.

The thrift and condition of the mother determine to a great extent what the pig will be.

When a hog has to be driven to his feed usually a mistake has been made in his feeding.

When fed dry shelled corn is more economical than cornmeal to feed to fattening hogs.

Beauty in form and appearance is not a safe indication of the value of a sow as a breeder.

THE HOUSEHOLD

Roasted Venison.

Rub the meat well with salt and pepper and lay in a double baking pan and add one quart of water. Let it cook until it is tender, about two and one-half or three hours. Make a dressing of bread crumbs, salt and pepper, and put around the meat. Sprinkle bread crumbs thickly over the top with lumps of butter and a little pepper. Baste often and cook until it is a nice brown. Thicken the gravy with flour and serve in a gravy boat. Serve with currant jelly.

Ham Cutlets.

One pound of boiled ham, one large onion, one large potato, boiled, one sweet green pepper, two well-beaten eggs, salt and pepper to taste. Mince all together fine, then add eggs. Mold with hands to fold small hams. Insert small piece uncooked macaroni in small end to form ham bone. Flour well and fry golden brown. Serve with cream sauce, sprinkled with minced parsley.

Tapioca Pudding.

One-half cup of pearl tapioca, 1 cup of granulated sugar and 2 quarts of milk (skimmed milk will do), add grated nutmeg or vanilla to taste. Put all together in a baking pan in the oven. Cook slowly three or four hours, stirring frequently. Let it brown nicely before taking from the oven. This is even more delicious than the rice pudding made the same way.

Cleaning Tea Kettle.

Fill the kettle with vinegar and bring slowly to the boil. Leave on the fire for an hour. Then, while it is still hot, break away the incrustation with a flat stick or paddle. To guard against a reformation of the lime, keep an oyster shell in the kettle, changing from time to time for a fresh. The lime will gather on the shell.

Don't Guess.

Most culinary failures come from the habit of guessing. Weigh everything that is to be weighed and measure carefully all other ingredients. Do this even if you have made the article repeatedly and you will be spared unpleasant surprises in spoiled dishes at important moments.

To Clean Globes.

When the globes from a chandelier have become dirty with smoke, they should be soaked in warm soda water about twenty minutes. Then add a few drops of ammonia and wash the globes well with a soaped flannel, rinse in clean cold water, dry with a soft linen cloth.

Tara's Nectar.

One pint of unfermented juice of white grapes, diluted and slightly sweetened; juice of two oranges, half a cup of pale green malagas, seeded and halved; mix and chill. Serve in tall glasses with green ribbon tied in dainty bows around the stems.

Cool Box for Pantry.

My pantry window is 16 inches wide. I got a box the size of the lower sash and a foot deep; put two shelves in it and nailed to the outside of the window. Now by raising the window I have a cool place to put my butter, eggs and milk.

Tender Round Steak.

To fry round steak and make it tender cut each piece the desired size, pound it a little, then dip each piece in a beaten egg, then in rolled cracker crumbs. Fry until brown on both sides; season after removing from frying pan.

Cabbage Salad.

One small head of cabbage, one stalk of celery, four apples. Cut all up fine and over them pour a cream mayonnaise dressing. Serve on a lettuce leaf and on the top of each lay a choice piece of celery and two radishes.

Boiling Eggs.

Eggs covered with boiling water and allowed to stand for five minutes are more nourishing and easier digested than eggs placed in boiling water and allowed to boil furiously for three and a half minutes.

Short Suggestions.

Apples cored for baking are delicious filled with orange marmalade and a little butter and sugar.

When beating eggs observe that there is no grease on the whisk, as it will prevent the eggs from frothing.

One or two tablespoonfuls of ammonia to a pail of water will clean windows better than anything else.

A few drops of ammonia in a cupful of warm water, applied carefully, will remove spots from paintings and chromos.

Try a little lemon and salt mixed the next time a price mark sticks to the bottom of china dishes or bric-a-brac.

Parmesan cheese sprinkled thickly over stewed tomatoes that are later browned in a baking dish gives them an added zest.

Baked apples with cream are served in many households for a breakfast fruit. They may be baked the day before and heated for morning use.

Chestnuts have considerable food value. The boiled and mashed pulp may be used as one would use meat or vegetables, even croquettes being made of it.

When making a flour paste to apply to wall paper always add some dissolved alum. The alum not only makes the starch hold better, but it will kill any insects in the walls.

To skim grease from soup in a hurry, use square sheets of clean tissue paper on the surface of the soup. Lay them on one at a time, lift off lightly and every bit of fat comes off.

When making apple pie the flavor is much improved and the apples will keep a good color if a few drops of lemon juice are squeezed over the apples just before the paste is put on.

Had Never Seen White Men.

In the Mornington Island, one of the Wellesley group in the Gulf of Carpentaria, R. B. Howard, chief protector of aborigines in Queensland, has found a tribe which it is believed has never before come in contact with white men.

After searching vainly for two days, Mr. Howard came upon a few natives, and afterward a considerable number were seen. The blacks, he says, were in their primitive state. They did not know the use of tobacco, and would not eat bread, meat or even sugar, although they readily tasted anything given to them. There was no sign wnatever of any disease, and, although emaciated in appearance, they were strong and agile.

Glorious Victory.

"You had a political debate in your district school building last Saturday night, Uncle Sime, I understand. How did it go off?"

"We win. Whenever the other fellers tried to talk we turned loose two dozen cowbells, a lot o' fishhorns, a bugle, a bass drum, an' a horse fiddle, an' they guv it up an' quit. By George, they didn't git to say a blamed word!"

Rev. F. C. Pettypool Speaks for the Benefit of the Sick.

Any person suffering with backache, urinary disorders or other signs of kidney complaint may feel the utmost confidence in the following statement made by Rev. F. C. Pettypool, Baptist clergyman, of Herrin, Ill.:

"A weak back and disordered condition of the kidneys annoyed me for some years up to last fall. I often had to stop work and press my hands to my back. My limbs ached constantly and at night I could not sleep. The kidney secretions also passed too frequently. I got a box of Doan's Kidney Pills and they helped me quickly and permanently. Further use brought a perfect cure."

The Difficulty.

Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish is an anti-suffragette. She has joined the anti-suffragette organization, the National League for the Civic Education of Women. At a luncheon the other day she said:

"It isn't possible for a woman to do the same work as men, day in and day out, in good weather and in foul. For instance, what woman could be a postman, out in all kinds of weather and at all hours, walking miles daily?"

She smiled.

"A woman postman would compare with a male one as the beggar compared with the millionaire.

"'You've got no grounds to envy me,' said the millionaire to the beggar. 'I've got just as many troubles as you have.'

"'No doubt yer right, boss,' said the beggar, humbly. 'But the difficulty with me is, I ain't got nothin' else.'"

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address: F. J. The Embarrassing Truth.

"The vindication of Dr. Harvey W. Wiley is a great triumph," said a Washington diplomat, "for pure food. Dr. Wiley tells the truth, and the truth is painful to certain types of food producers."

The diplomat laughed.

"Dr. Wiley was talking the other day about the painfulness of the truth," he resumed. "He said it reminded him of a morning call that he once made on a young lady in his youth. In answer to his ring a tiny tot of a girl opened the door, and Dr. Wiley said to her, as he walked into the hall:

"'Where is your auntie, Mabel?'

"'Upstairs in her nightie,' chirped the tot, 'a-lookin' over the balustrade.'"

Not the Doctor's Fault.

Dr. Fell at last explained why the post did not like him.

"He knew well enough why he didn't," said the doctor, "and he could have told the reason if he had felt like it. It was because I had sued him for a doctor bill. That was the only way I could collect it. By ginger, I made him pay it, too, with the interest!"

It is with no other purpose than to do justice to the memory of a much maligned man, even at this late date, that the explanation herein set forth is given to the public.

Eat What

You want of the food you need Kodol will digest it.

You need a sufficient amount of good wholesome food and more than this you need to fully digest it.

Else you can't gain strength, nor can you strengthen your stomach if it is weak.

You must eat in order to live and maintain strength.

You must not diet, because the body requires that you eat a sufficient amount of food regularly.

But this food must be digested, and it must be digested thoroughly.

When the stomach can't do it, you must take something that will help the stomach.

The proper way to do is to eat what you want, and let Kodol digest the food.

Nothing else can do this. When the stomach is weak it needs help; you must help it by giving it rest, and Kodol will do that.

Our Guarantee

Go to your druggist today, and purchase a dollar bottle, and if you can honestly say, that you did not receive any benefits from it, after using the entire bottle, the druggist will refund your money to you without question or delay.

We will pay the druggist the price of the bottle purchased by you.

This offer applies to the large bottle only and to but one in a family.

We could not afford to make such an offer, unless we positively knew what Kodol will do for you.

It would bankrupt us.

The dollar bottle contains 2½ times as much as the fifty cent bottle.

Kodol is made at the laboratories of E. C. DeWitt & Co., Chicago.

Prolonging Life

While no way has yet been found to make life perpetual it is a fact that life can be prolonged. Many people die before their time because the organs become clogged and cannot do their work. To keep the body open, active and free from impurities there must be no constipation, dyspepsia, flatulency, liver troubles, etc. If old or young people suffer from these complaints they can find a ready cure with Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It is absolutely guaranteed to do what is claimed, and if you want to try it before buying, send your address for a free sample bottle to Pepsin Syrup Co., 119 Caldwell Bldg., Monticello, Ill. WELL DRESSED MEN appreciate the efforts of the tailor to give them good style and well wearing clothes at a cost that is not prohibitive. It is only the FIRST cost that make custom made clothes seem expensive.

THE LENGTH OF TIME

that they wear and keep their appearance is far longer than the ordinary store clothing, and proper care in pressing and hanging makes them last much longer. Try our tailor shop for your next suit or overcoat.

Mayor Webster Receives Badge

I have received by mail "a badge" of which I am very proud, and in this public manner wish to thank, and do hereby thank the donor. It is gotten up in a very unique design, made from the skin of a cow, with iron chain attachments. The inscription is "Grand Prize for Bad Streets in the States of Ohio, Indiana and Illinois." The design and workmanship are fine, and were not gotten up by a novice, but by a skilled artist, and I regret he did not enclose his card so we could express to him personally our pleasure and everlasting obligations we feel we are under for this beautiful and highly prized token. Of course the people of Butler have known for a long time that we are not only a noted people, but a noted city as well, and it seems at least one person in Auburn has at last conceived this fact, and it may also be that he is feeling just a little jealous over our notoriety. We have noticed for some time that the owners of automobiles who live in surrounding towns and cities come here to try the speed of their machines on our streets, and we assure you that you are perfectly welcome, and we give you the full and undisputed right of way so long as you do not run down more than five or six of our people in any one week, for we can conceive what a pleasure it must be for you to get into a good live city occasionally. Again thanking the unknown person, I am, very truly yours,

WALLACE C. WEBSTER, Mayor.

The members of Gold Leaf Hive No. 49, Ladies of the Maccabees Thursday evening had an important meeting when they entertained delegations from the Maccabee hives of Butler and Goshen. Thirty-two members of Harmony Hive, No. 26, of Butler, and two representatives from Goshen Hive, No. 37, were present. A splendid supper was served in the lodge rooms, at 6 o'clock, after which the ladies of Harmony Hive initiated two candidates. The Harmony Guards gave a fine rose drill, which proved a feature. Refreshments were served after the work was concluded and a fine social time was had. Several ladies of the Butler delegation made appropriate speeches. The Butler ladies returned home at one o'clock.—Kendallville News.

Obituary

Anton Hablawetz was born in Rotzen, Austria, October 21, 1827. Was united in marriage to Anna Lippert in 1849. To this union was born twelve children. He came to America in the year 1859 and settled in Richland county, Ohio, and in the year 1869 came to DeKalb county, Indiana, and settled on the farm where he resided until his death, which occurred May 16, 1909. His age was 81 years, 6 months and 26 days.

The wife of his choice departed this life October 16, 1903. Of this family two daughters, two sons, nine grandchildren and one great-grandchild yet remain.

I was permitted to form the acquaintance of the deceased twenty-six years ago. At that time Mr Hablawetz was running a hack line from Fort Wayne to Butler. I then had charge of the Maysville pastorate and lived in Cedarville, Ind. He was very courteous to strangers, easy to become acquainted with, always made friends wherever he went and was able to retain them. He was a good citizen, neighbor and father. About ten or twelve years ago he asked me if I would preach his funeral and as we frequently met I used to talk to him about the future life. He had great expectation for this life, was looking forth to it with calmness and not dread His virtues which were many, remember them to practice them and if there were vices in this life let the mantle of charity hide.

Funeral services were held at the Mt. Pleasant U. B. church Tuesday at 10:30 a. m., conducted by Rev. J. H. Crouse. Interment in the Ginder cemetery. J. H. C.

VERY SENSATIONAL RUNAWAY WEDNESDAY

Wednesday forenoon Dr. A. A. Kramer participated in a very sensational runaway, and only by the exercise of splendid courage and coolness did he escape without injuries to himself.

He was driving a very high spirited horse across the Wabash railroad track at the south Broadway crossing when the animal became frightened and started to run. Dr. Kramer pulled up stoutly on the lines, the bit broke, and he was left at the mercy of the horse which was running down the rough road at a furious pace.

With a nerve that would do credit to a professional broncho buster, the doctor crawled over the dashboard onto the animal's back and gradually worked his way until he caught him by the nose, and by a strong effort forced him to stop.

Very little damage was done to the rig or harness, and those who saw the accident say it was a very daring piece of business.

Will Limit Saloons

Almost without argument a bill passed the house in the Michigan legislature last Friday revising the general liquor laws of the state. So well satisfied were the members with the results attained that the rules were suspended and the measure placed on immediate passage. It passed 83 to 2, the two nays being Representatives Beeman and Jensen. The most important features of the bill are as follows:

Limits saloons to one to each 500 population with a home rule provision that if any city, village or township desires a smaller number of saloons it can be accomplished by passing the desired ordinance. Present saloons are not wiped out, but no new ones are permitted until the number falls below the legal ratio.

Prohibits druggists from selling malt or brewed liquors, confining them to malt extracts and to spiritous liquors to be sold only on prescription which must be recorded.

Fixes the open hours for saloons from six a. m. to 9 p. m. with the proviso that the common council of any city or village may extend the hour for closing to 12 o'clock midnight.

Revokes the license of any person who is twice convicted of violating the liquor laws.

Double Murder Over Line Fence.

In a dispute over a line fence between the farms of Alexander Meek and Frank Railsback, three miles west of Richmond, Ind., Alexander Meek and his son Raymond were shot and instantly killed. Frank Railsback was badly wounded and Frank Railsback, sr., slightly wounded. The difference between the two families relative to the fance had existed for some weeks, but had not reached a serious stage until the Railsback men proceeded to the line and with axes began chopping away the posts. The Meeks, father and son, left the house, going to the point of the fence where the Railsbacks were at work. The father had a revolver and the son a shotgun. Both fired on the Railsback men, and Frank Railsback, jr., fell with a wound in his knee, probably from the revolver of the elder Meek. The elder Railsback was wounded in the abdomen by a shot from one barrel of the younger Meeek's gun. The Railsbacks retreated, and Joel Railsback, another son, went to the house and returning with a double barreled shotgun fired point-blank at the Meeks killing both, shooting each of them in the head, and the fact that their faces and clothing were powderburned indicates that he must have been very close when he fired. After commmitting the murders Joel Railsback got on an interurban car and went at once to Richmond, where he gave himself up to Sheriff Meredith, giving the latter the first intimation of the tragedy.

An Explosion Follows Fire.

Fire of unknown origin, accompanied by an explosion, destroyed the warehouse of the Sea Board Air Line railway at the railroad terminals in Portsmouth, Va., entailing a loss of from $100,000 to $150,000 and resulting in the injury of four men, one being seriously hurt. Between fifty and sixty freight cars, many of them loaded, also were burned. Soon after the Portsmouth fire department arrived on the scene a teremendous explosion within the storehouse, a brick structure, followed by several smaller ones sent bricks and burning timbers flying in every direction. The officials of the company attribute the explosions to a quantity of torpedoes.

"Friend of Boyles" Threatens Judge.

The police of Cleveland, Ohio, have learned that a threat has been made to dynamite the home of Judge A. W. Williams in Mercer, Pa., unless he lends his efforts to obtaining a new trial for James Boyle and wife, recently convicted before him on a charge of kidnaping Willie Whitla. The treats were sent in any anoymous letter postmarked Cleveland. The letter postmarked Cleveland. The letter was signed "A Friend of the Boyles," and warned Judge Williams that unless he did as the writer ordered his home would be blown up and himself and family killed.

Barnndenburg a Prisoner in New York.

Broughton Brandenburg, the magazine writer, whose troubles quickly followed the publication of a letter in the New York Times last fall purporting to have been written by the late Grover Cleveland, is a prisoner in New York. He was locked up at police headquarters after being brought from San Francisco by two detectives who were sent to the coast after Brandenburg's arrest there some weeks ago following his disappearance from New York when he was wanted for trial.

8 TO 16 YEARS IS SENTENCE FOR HAINS

Captain Convicted of Killing W. E. Annis Gets Indeterminate Term in Prison.

JUDGE DENIES A NEW TRIAL

Defendant Seems Overcome by Court's Words and Father and Brother Deeply Affected.

Capt. Peter C. Hains, Jr., U. S. A., convicted of manslaughter in the first degree for killing William E. Annis at the Bayside Yacht Club last August, was sentenced Monday by Justice Garretson in the Supreme Court in Flushing, L. I., to an indeterminate sentence of not less than eight years, nor more than sixteen years, a hard labor in State's prison.

John F. McIntyre, counsel for the defendant, made the usual motion for a new trial on the ground that the verdict was against the weight of evidence and also contrary to law. Justice Garretson denied these motions. Mr. McIntyre then raised the point of jurisdiction of the Supreme Court over the defendant, contending that he had never been released from jurisdiction of the federal government and therefore the case was not properly before the court. Mr. McIntyre also stated that Dr. Brash, who had been an expert witness for the defense, had examined Capt. Hains since he was convicted and found him insane. Justice Garretson said there was no evidence to that effect before the court and he declined to consider the motion in regard to jurisdiction.

The court clerk then instructed Capt. Hains to come to the bar and proceeded to ask him the formal questions put to a man about to be sentenced. The prisoner seemed dazed and seemed to have some difficulty in understanding the questions. Lawyers McIntyre and Young of the defense stood on either side of Capt. Hains and assisted him in answering the questions of the court clerk.

Referring to the nature of the case the court said that Capt. Hains had been indicted for murder in the first degree, the severest crime against society, and, although there had been a great deal of sympathy injected into the case, the law did not allow a man to punish another for wrong he had suffered or to wreak vengeance on the man who had wronged him.

After Justice Garretson had imposed the sentence Capt. Hains sat down and dropped his head on the table before him. He seemed overcome with emotion for a few moments, but soon recovered himself and sat upright, staring at the court. Gen. Hains, the defendant's father, and Maj. John Powers Hains, who were in court, displayed much emotion. Immediately after sentence the prisoner's lawyers asked for a stay of sentence for a few days to take an appeal. Justice Garretson said the case would take the usual course, and gave the defense twenty-four hours in which to file an appeal.

"Lucky" Baldwin Heirs Effect Compromise and Save Estate.

Mrs. E. J. Baldwin is to get $1,000,000 from the estate of the late E. J. (Lucky) Baldwin. His daughter, who at the time of her father's death was not known to be his child, Mrs. Rosella Robinson Selby, of Oakland, is to get $225,000. The lawyers who arranged the compromise divide a fee of $400,000. According to the terms of the will Mrs. Baldwin was left a one-third interest in property in San Francisco found to be worth only $30,000. Mrs. Selby was left a parcel of land which was said to be worth about $25,000.

ABRUZZI TRIES TO END LIFE?

Report Concerning Duke Greatly Agitates Italian Court Circles.

Court circles in Rome are agitated over sensational reports which have reached the government about the duke of the Abruzzi. It is related on good authority that in one of the fits of depression to which the duke has become subject of late he attempted to kill himself with a revolver on the way out to India, but was saved by a member of his suite, whose suspicion had been aroused and who had kept a vigilant watch on him. Letters from members of the expedition represent that the duke is utterly reckless.

WARSHIPS REACH TURKEY.

Will Stop Massacres and Give Protection to American Schools.

The armored cruiser North Carolina and the armed revenue cutter Tahoma have arrived at Alexandretta and put the United States in position of dealing directly with the Turkish government. Several cases involving the payment of indemnity and the giving assurances of peace were discussed at the Cabinet meeting. All that is definitely known is that this government proposes to show a strong hand in the instances of the death of American citizens and the recurring danger from Turkish outbreaks to American colleges and schools in Asia Minor.

TORNADOES IN THREE STATES.

Town Devastated and a Train Wrecked by Kansas Cyclone.

A series of tornadoes in Kansas, Missouri and Oklahoma late Friday killed at least five persons, injured fifty-five, devastated one town, wrecked a train, and did great damage to property. The storm spread over a wide area and laid to waste many farmhouses. On account of a great portion of the damage being done on farms, its full extent could not be learned at once. Many conflicting reports have been received. One said ten were killed. A blinding rain and hail storm accompanied the wind in all three States. Many washouts demoralized railroad traffic.

Twenty-five were injured by a storm that swept over Mount Washington and Fairmount Park, suburbs of Kansas City. At least two of these are thought to be fatally injured and others seriously. The town of Hollis, near Concordia, was swept away. Three were killed there and ten seriously injured. The Eckstrom family, consisting of five persons, is missing. Their house is in ruins and it is thought they are dead.

Near Great Bend a tornado killed two and injured twenty. All wires are down in that vicinity and it is feared that the death list may be greater. William Ackerly, a Santa Fe engineer, was killed while working with a bridge gang between Great Bend and Kinsley. Frank Nicholson, a conductor, was killed. The tornado wrecked the work train of which Ackerly was engineer and blew it into a ditch. Several members of the crew were blown 100 feet. The pile driver toppled over, crushing Ackerly to death in his cab, where he had remained, with his hand upon the throttle.

At Holsington, Kan., a tornado injured a number and greatly damaged farm property. It was not so severe, however, as that passing over other portions of the State. At Pond Creek, Okla., a severe wind storm injured four and unroofed several houses.

RUSSIAN "ROBIN HOOD" SLAIN.

Robber Chief Who Long Joked with Police Finally Is Killed.

The noted robber chieftain, Savitzky, the "Robin Hood" of the Russian revolution, has been killed by members of the rural guard. With three members of his band Savitzky was surrounded by the guard in a village near Mohlev, and after a fight that lasted for four hours all four were killed. One member of the guard lost his life in the encounter. Savitzky, who was a high schol student when he took to brigandage, had been the terror of the police of the provinces of Tchernigov and Mohiley for several years, but he was a source of amusement to the rest of Russia on account of his dare-devil exploits. He delighted in playing fantastic tricks on the police. Once, on a wager, disguised as a priest, he visited the governor of this province and various other officials. It was his custom to rob only the rich, and he distributed his spoils among the peasantry with a lavish hand. He finally was betrayed by a member of his band.

The directors of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad have decided to refund all its underlying bonds, except those of the Illinois division or a total near to $65,000,000 at 4 per cent. Holders of the old bonds will have the option of an exchange for the new.

During the last season the Pennsylvania Railroad Company set out 303,000 trees, including pines, larches, spruce and hardwoods. In its nursery it set out 313,000 forest seedlings for future transplanting, and planted 222 bushels of red oak acorns, from which 1,500,000 seedlings are now growing. It also planted a large quantity of black walnut, chestnut and hickory, practically all of which have given complete germination.

Slason Thomson, manager of the Bureau of Railway News and Statistics at Chicago has issued the fourth annual report of that bureau covering the business year ending November 30, 1908. It shows that the loss of the railroads of the country on account of the panic and ensuing depression fas far greater than estimated by the Interstate Commerce Commission. The railroads complain that the commission experts made the mistake of basing their estimates on a period which included some of the prosperous months of 1907. Thomson finds the total loss in gross earnings amounted to $330,000,000 as compared with the commission's estimate of $164,000,000, and that the loss in net earnings was $129,340,460 as compared with the commission's estimate of $111,051,000. The bureau also finds that the effect of the 2-cent passenger laws was a loss of $25,000,000 in gross earnings. The heavy loss in net earnings is accounted for partly by the expenditure of $32,000,000 in meeting the new requirements as to methods of accounting and as to the hours and conditions of labor. The net capitalization of the railroads has increased 76.5 per cent, but this is only 9 per cent a mile more. The railroads carried 189.5 more passengers a mile and 260 per cent more tons of freight a mile than in 1888.

Work on the two extensions of the Northern Pacific road, one going eighty miles northwest of Mandan, N. D., and the other eighty miles south of the same city, will begin at once.

At Little Rock, Ark., 5,000 bales of cotton, estimated to have been worth $250,000, were burned in a fire which for several hours threatened to destroy the plant of the St. Louis Compress Company, valued, with its contents, at $1,000,000.

Satisfied with the foot and mouth disease in cattle, sheep, other ruminants and swine has been completely eradicated in the United States, Secretary Wilson has issued an order releasing the entire country from the federal quarantine on account of that disease.

JURIST WHO SENTENCED BOYLES.

TWENTY BLOWN TO ATOMS.

Victims Hurled High in Air by Blast in Quarry.

At least twenty men were killed Wednesday by a premature blast of dynamite in a stone quarry operated by the Callanan Road Improvement Company near South Bethlehem, eleven miles southwest of Albany, N. Y. Twelve Italian workmen are among the victims. One thousand pounds of dynamite exploded, and the bodies of the victims were hurled hundreds of feet by the concussion and so badly mutilated as to be almost beyond recognition. As darkness was falling a wagon drew up to the engine house loaded with bodies that had been picked up back on the quarry hill. A crowd of grief-stricken relatives gathered around eager to identify the dead, only to turn away at the sickening sight. Italians with shovels found here and there portions of bodies and brought their grewsome loads in boxes to the engine house, which served as a temporary morgue.

FARMERS PLAN GRAIN TRUST.

Assemble to Control Prices, but Want "Corners" Suppressed.

Grain growers from many States assembled in Springfield, Mo., in mass meeting at the call of C. S. Barrett, president of the National Farmers' union, to take action to protect their interests. The farmers' union has a membership of 3,000,000, and that part of the organization that convened in Springfield is known as the grain growers' branch. President Barrett, in his call, issued at Atlanta, Ga., said: "It is the intention to build such a system as will enable the growers to sell their wheat for the highest possible figures." It is intended to organize the grain growers the same as the cotton planters of the South are organized, the chief aim being to aid members in storing wheat until prices advance. Congress also will be petitioned to enact a law that will prevent corners in grain.

Given Poison in Banana.

Detectives claim to have discovered a clew showing that Salvator Rizzo, Cincinnati fruit dealer, who died suddenly Tuesday morning after having received threatening letters from the Black Hand, was given poison. Last Saturday, according to the detectives, Rizzo was approached by a man claiming to be a fruit salesman, who gave him a new variety of banana, after eating which Rizzo became violently ill.

Makes Million; Aids Church.

Joseph N. Shenstone, a millionaire of Toronto, Canada, at a meeting of the laymen's missionary movement in connection with the southern Baptist convention in Louisville, declared that he had made enough money during his lifetime and that he was now going to devote his fortune and the remainder of his days to the service of God and man.

Carry Powder from Fire.

The Beamer Handle Company's factory at Manor, Pa., was destroyed by fire, which caused a loss of $100,000. Not far away is a powder magazine, which contained 300 kegs of powder. During the progress of the fire the roof of the magazine was found to be on fire. Heedless of the danger, the firemen rushed in and carried out the explosives.

Texas Prairie Fire Sweeps County.

A disastrous prairie fire swept Castro County in the Panhandle of Texas, Saturday and Sunday, and Col. T. K. Herring of the firm of Herring & Lacid, Amarillo, was the heaviest loser, the flames sweeping thirty sections on his ranch.

WRECK TRAIN: SECURE $20,000.

Daring Robbers Board Engine and Cause Serious Collision.

Posses are scouring the country between Colbert and Meade, Wash., seeking trace of the bandits who held up passenger train No. 3 and secured more than $20,000 worth of booty late Saturday night. The robbers escaped without leaving a clew to their identity. To aid in the pursuit the Great Northern, on whose road the robbery occurred, has offered a reward of $10,000 for each bandit captured. Twelve persons were injured during the affair. The disaster happened when the engine and mail car, running wild down the track after being rifled of the mails, collided with the remaining cars of the train. The bandits detached the engine and mail car from the train, ran them down the track a considerable distance, and then after the registered mail had been opened they sent the engine back to collide with the cars standing on the track. The bandits, of which there were at least six in the party, made their attack just after the train left Colbert.

BALLOON EXPLODES IN FLIGHT.

Army Craft Destroyed and Two Officers Bruised at Jackson, Neb.

Army balloon No. 12 exploded in landing at Jackson, Neb., Monday night after a 120-mile trip and was destroyed. Captain Chandler and Lieutenant Ware, the aeronauts in charge, being knocked down and bruised, but escaping serious injury. Captain Chandler believes that while at a high altitude the gas bag became charged with static electricity, and that on reaching the ground contact with the earth caused an arc to form, thus producing an electric spark, which set fire to the big bag. The ascension was made from Fort Omaha. The balloon started north as soon as it was well into the air and soon crossed the Missouri River. It followed the general course of the river for nearly 100 miles, the flight following a northwesterly direction. The 120-mile flight was made in about six hours, deducting the hour and a half the balloon was becalmed.

TWO KILLED IN PANAMA RIOT.

Police of Republic Clash with Americans of Canal Zone.

In a conflict between Panama police and employes of the canal zone near the dividing line C. M. Abbott, an American electrician in the power house at Christobal, and a colored man, also an American, were killed. The police crossed the zone at Christobal in an effort to arrest an escaped prisoner. They were mobbed and pelted by West Indians and finally were arrested by the zone police for disturbance. At night a number of Panama police armed with rifles proceeded toward the zone in an attempt, it is alleged, to find those who had maltreated their comrades earlier in the day. They came into collision with the canal workers and many revolver and rifle shots were fired. The riot became so threatening that all places of business were quickly closed, but eventually the invaders were driven off.

Use Dynamite House as Target.

Steve Page is dying from injuries received when a magazine near Washington, Pa., containing forty quarts of nitroglycerin and 150 pounds of dynamite blew up. Page and Tony Merrette, Italians, not knowing what was in it, pinned a target on the magazine and began shooting at it with revolvers.

Boy Ends Life to Avoid Arrest.

Peter Paschalt, 13 years old, living with his uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Paschalt, in Nashville, shot and killed himself as a policeman, called by his aunt, entered the house. The boy had been whipped, Mrs. Paschalt says, and, with rocks in his hands, threatened to kill her.

Work of Congress

After several hours spent in the Senate Wednesday in discussing the window glass schedule of the tariff bill Senator Aldrich asked that that paragraph be passed over. Some other sections relating to glass manufactured articles that previously had been passed over were agreed to. The Senate proceeded to the consideration of passed over sections until the iron ore paragraph was reached, when Senator Crawford spoke at length upon the lack of wisdom of any tariff that encouraged the exhaustion of natural resources, which could not readily be reproduced. He insisted that there should be no tariff on iron ore, oil, lumber and coal. Early in the session Senator Paynter spoke in favor of the removal of the duty of 6 cents a pound upon leaf tobacco, as a means for freeing the tobacco growers from the control of the tobacco trust. The House was not in session.

-:—:-

After a day devoted to discussing the duty on iron ore, the Senate just before adjournment Thursday adopted by a vote of 61 to 24 the recommendation of the committee on finance for a duty of 25 cents per ton. The House had placed it on the free list, while the present law levies a duty of 40 cents per ton. In taking this vote party lines were annihilated, as seventeen Democrats voted "Aye" with the Republicans and twelve Republicans voted "No" with the Democrats. Senator Bailey, announcing that he proposed to vote for the duty on iron ore as a revenue measure, declared that such action did not affect the prosperity of the United States Steel Corporation, and added that even if it did there was a better way to deal with that organization, which was by an enforcement of the anti-trust law against it. For the first time there was a suggestion looking to the fixing of a day for a vote on the tariff bill, but it came to naught because of objection from Senator Beveridge. The House was again in the throes of a tariff discussion, the entire day being spent in the consideration of the Philippine tariff bill. After the reading of the bill had been concluded further action was deferred until Monday. Mr. Clark (Mo.) objected to immediate consideration of a bill amending the organic act of Porto Rico in accordance with the President's suggestions in his recent message, and the bill went over. Speaker Cannon's policy of not appointing committees was upheld by a substantial majority after Mr. Garrett (Tenn.) had sought to have him directed to name the committee on insular affairs. The House adjourned until Monday.

-:—:-

Again the committee on finance was upheld when the Senate Friday voted down an amendment by Senator Cummins to lower the duty on round iron, etc., by a vote of 35 to 42, and upheld the House rate, which was recommended by the Senate committe. Almost the entire session was given up to a debate on the profits of the United States Steel Corporation, and toward the end of the day personalities were freely indulged in by Senators. This occurred when Senator Root had spoken in defense of the finance committee and in criticism of Senators who had complained of the failure of that committee to provide more ample information concerning various schedules. Mr. Money, addressing himself directly to the Senator from New York, resented what he characterized as a lecture to the Senate, and said that if the Senator from New York desired less speaking in the body "he should do less of it himself." Senator Beveridge proposed an amendment to the tariff bill increasing the tax on tobacco and its products, and charged that by continuing the shortweight packages of the Spanish war period the tobacco trust was reaping a harvest of $21,000,000 a year. The House was not in session.

-:—:-

The lowering of duties in the case of eight or ten classes of wire goods contained in the steel schedule, upon motion of Senator Aldrich, in charge of the tariff bill, gave great encouragement Saturday to Senators who are advocating a revision downward. With evident gratification Senator Beveridge greeted these proposed amendments by the chairman of the finance committee by declaring: "Good, that's making progress." The entire session of the Senate was devoted to the steel schedule, the section relating to penknives being under consideration when, at 4:44 p. m., the Senate adjourned to meet at 10 o'clock Monday morning, one hour earlier than the Senate has been beginning business. The House was not in session.

COMMERCIAL AND FINANCIAL

CHICAGO.

Actual improvement and the general trend of business affairs now confirm the hopeful return of better times. Some increase in trading defaults is due to a special cause and lacks significance in view of the sustained high aggregate of solvent payments through the banks. Weather conditions favor enterprise in both industrial and agricultural operations, and the promise improves for larger crops and increasing outputs of the manufactures.

Notable demands appear in the iron-working branches, large tonnage being closed for pig iron, rails, structural steel and wire, while there is gratifying revival in the bookings of railway equipment, power, machinery and minor metals.

Idle capacity is seen to be undergoing further reduction in various branches, and more hands find steady work at the car shops and factories. The mills and forges in the Calumet district appear almost as busy as ever, new structures and production make rapid gains at Gary and large additions to the Pullman works are planned.

New enterprise is noted in the plans for additions to factories and mercantile structures, which again occupy attention, and estimating departments figure more actively upon track extension, elevation and bridges. Contemplated local betterments involve the use of enormous quantities of steel shapes, quarry products and timber, while the building trades are now settled into a remarkably prosperous season.

Movements of general merchandise, breadstuffs and live stock show the moderate decline incident to this period, but offerings of other freight rise in factory faterials, raw supplies and needs of the farms.

Bank clearings, $264,742,653 exceed those of corresponding week in 1908 by 18.1 per cent and compare with $267,754,845 in 1907. Failures reported in the Chicago district number 36, against 30 last week, 24 in 1908 and 26 in 1907. Those with liabilities over $5,000 number 4, against 7 last week, 7 in 1908 and 4 in 1907.—Dun's Review of Chicago Trade.

NEW YORK.

Irregularity still characterizes the trade, crop and industrial situation. In industrial lines the consensus of reports is that further improvement has been registered, especially in the iron and steel, coal, coke, woolen manufacturing and leather trades. Building is active and lines of trade catering to this industry are feeling beneficial effects.

It is a between-season period in wholesale and jobbing distributive trade; orders from retailers are merely of a filling-in character and hardly equal to expectations. The tone of opinion as to the outlook for fall trade is as a whole rather more optimistic, but the evidences of repression in trade, whether due to tariff and crop uncertainty, reduced purchasing power of the public or high prices for foodstuffs, are too evident to be ignored.

Manufacturers of woolen goods are buying freely of raw material at Boston, and sales of new domestic clip wool to arrive have aggregated 10,000 pounds. London sale prices are reported to have been advanced, and this is reflected in large dealings in foreign wool.

Business failures in the United States for the week ending with May 13 were 224, against 214 last week, 281 in the like week of 1908, 184 in 1907, 161 in 1906 and 191 in 1905. Canadian failures for the week number 31, against 29 last week and 22 in the like week of 1908.—Bradstreet's.

A TALE OF A CARAVAN

By Robert Buchanan

CHAPTER XV.—(Continued.)

Not until he distinctly heard the plash of oars, and saw the black silhouette of the boat pass out from the shadow of the rock on to the moonlit sea, did Brinkley again begin to stir; and even then he did so very cautiously, lest his figure should be perceived against the moonlight by the lynx-eyed rower. Creeping on hands and knees, he again crawled to the mysterious spot, and found, as he had indeed anticipated, that the hole was covered up, and the wooden lid or trap door so carefully covered with stones and loose sand as to be completely hidden.

His first impulse was to displace the debris, and at once to explore the mysterious place; but reflecting that he was unprovided with lights of any kind, and that the cavity below would most certainly be in total darkness, he determined to postpone his visit of inspection until daylight. By this time there was no sight or sound of the boat. Rising to his feet, he mused. It was all very well to talk of returning another time, but how was he to find the spot? The sea of sandy hillocks stretched on every side, and he knew by experience how difficult it was to distinguish one hillock from another. As to the cairns of loose stones, such cairns were nearly as numerous as the hillocks themselves.

At last he thought of the rock where he had first concealed himself. Such rocks were numerous too; but pulling out his case of crayons, he marked the base of the rock with a small streak of color. Finally, remembering that the drift sand might cover this mark so made, he drew out his penknife, and made a large cross in the hard sand. Having taken these precautions, he made the best of his way down the cliffs and, following the open greensward which fringed the crags, wandered back to the Caravan.

At daybreak the next day he strolled back along the crags, first taking a bird's eye view of the village; and perceiving no sight of William Jones, who had doubtless no suspicion that he would rise so early, he soon found the spot where he had stood overnight, watching the approach of the boat; and first reconnoitering the neighborhood, struck off among the sand hills. At first he was guided by footprints, but as the sand grew harder, these disappeared. At length, after a somewhat bewildering search, he found the sand hill he sought, the rock with his mark upon it, the cross marked in the ground, and finally, the well-concealed mouth of the hole.

He looked keenly to right and left. No one was visible. Stooping down he displaced the stones and loose sand, and disclosed the trap door with its iron ring. A long pull, a strong pull, and up came the trap. Open Sesame! Beneath him was a dark cavity, with a slanting path descending into the bowels of the earth.

Anxious to lose no time, he squeezed himself through the aperture, and began descending. While he did so he heard the hollow roaring he had heard the night before. As he proceeded he drew out a box of matches and a candle, which he lit. Proceeding cautiously on his back, and restraining himself with his elbows from too rapid descent, he found himself surrounded not by sand, but by solid rock, and, peering downward, saw that he was looking down into a large subterranean cave.

Just beneath him was a flight of steps cut in the solid rock. Descending these carefully, for they were slippery as ice, he reached the bottom, and found it made of sea gravel and loose shells, forming, indeed, a decline like the sea shore itself, to the edge of which, filling about half the cavern, the waters of the sea crept with a long, monotonous moan. Approaching the water's edge he saw facing him the solid back of the cliff, but just at the base there was an opening, a sort of slit, almost touching the waves at all times, quite touching them when the swell rose, and through this opening crept beams of daylight, turning the waves to a clear malachite green.

The mytery was now clear enough. The cave communicated directly with the sea, but in such a way as to make an entrance for any large object impossible from that direction.

Turning his back upon the water, and holding up the candle, he examined the interior. The damp black rocks rose on every side, and from the room hung spongy and hideous weeds, like those fungi to be seen in sunless vaults of wine; but piled against the inner wall was a hoard of treasures to make a smuggler's mouth water or turn a wrecker's brain.

Puncheons of rum and other spirits, bales of wool, planks of mahogany and pine, oars, broken masts, coils of rope, tangles of running rigging, flags of all nations, and articles of such material as is used on shipboard, swinging tables, brass swinging lamps, mast-head lanterns, and hammocks; enough and to spare, in short, to fit out a small fleet of vessels. Lost in amazement, Brinkley examined this extraordinary hoard, the accumulation doubtless of many years. All at once his eye fell upon a large canvas bag, rotten with age, and gaping open. It was as full as it could hold with pieces of gold, bearing the superscription of the mint of Spain.

O William Jones! William Jones! And all this was yours, at least by right of plunder, upon the queen's seaway; all this which, turned into cash, would have made a man rich beyond the dreams of avarice, was the possession of one who lived like a miserly beggar, grudged himself and his flesh and blood the common necessaries of life, and had never been known, from boyhood upward, to give a starving fellow-creature so much as a crust of bread, or to drop a penny into the poor box! O William Jones! William Jones!

The above reflection and parenthesis belong, not to the present writer, but to my adventurous discoverer, the captain of the Caravan.

As Brinkley proceeded on his tour of inspection he became more and more struck with wonder. Nothing seemed too insignificant, or too preposterously useless, for secretion in that extraordinary ship's cavern. There were mops and brooms, there were holystones, there were "squeegees," there were canisters of tinned provisions, there were bags of weevil'd biscuits, there were sacks of potatoes (which esculents, long neglected, had actually sprouted and put forth leaves) there were ring bolts, there were tin mugs and pannikins, and, lastly, mirabile dictu, there were books—said books lay piled on the top of a heap of sacks, and were in the last stage of mildew and decay. For what purpose had they been carried there? Certainly not to form a library, for William Jones could not read. As curiosity deepened, Brinkley opened some of the forlorn volumes, covered with mildew, and full of hideous crawling things. Most were in foreign tongues, but there were several English novels half a century old, and a book of famous "Voyages," also in English. Near to them were some large paper rolls—ships' charts, evidently, and almost falling to pieces. And on top of the charts was a tiny prayer book, slime covered and dripping wet!

What possessed Brinkley to examine the prayer book I can not determine, but in after years he always averred that it was an inspiration. At any rate, he did open it, and saw that the fly leaf was covered with writing, yellow, difficult to decipher, fast fading away. But what more particularly attracted his attention was a loose piece of parchment, fastened to the title page with a rusty pin, and covered also with written characters.

Fixing the candle on a nook in the damp wall he inspected the title page, and deciphered these words:

"Christmas eve, 1864, on board the ship Trinidad, fast breaking up on the Welsh coast. If any Christian soul should find this book and these lines where I place them, if they sink not with their bearer (on whom I leave my last despairing blessing) to the bottom of the sea, or if God in His infinite mercy should spare and save the little child." (The book trembled in his hand as he read. The writing went on:) "I cast her adrift in her cradle in sight of shore, on a little raft made by my own hands. 'Tis a desperate hope, but He can work miracles, and if it is His will she may be saved. Attached to this holy book are the proofs of her poor dead mother's marriage and my darling's birth. May she live to inherit my name. Signed, Matthew Thorpe Monk, Colonel, 15th Cavalry, Bengal."

The mystery was deepening indeed!

At last Brinkley thrust the book and its contents into his pocket, and after one look round took the candle, and made his way up the rocks and out of the cave. When he saw the light of day above him he blew out the light, and crawled up through the aperture. Then, standing on the lonely sand hill, he surveyed the scene on every side. There was no sign of any living soul.

Carefully, but rapidly, he returned the trap door to its place, covered it with the stones and liberal handfuls of loose sand, and walked away, taking care, for the first hundred yards, to obliterate his footprints as he went.

CHAPTER XVI.

About this time Matt noticed a curious change come over her artist friend. He was more thoughtful and consequently less entertaining. Often when she appeared and began chatting to him about affairs in which she thought he might take some interest, she had the mortification, not merely of eliciting no reply, but of finding that he had not heard a word of her conversation.

Now this style of proceeding would certainly have caused her some annoyance, but for one compensating fact which put the balance entirely on the other side. It was evident that, despite the change, Brinkley's interest in Matt was not lessening; nay, it rather seemed to be on the increase; and this fact Matt, very woman as she was, was quick to perceive.

Very often on looking suddenly at him, she found his eyes fixed wonderingly and sympathetically upon her. She asked him on one occasion what he was thinking about.

"You, Matt," he answered, promptly. "I was trying to imagine," he continued, seeing her blush and hang her head, "how you would look in silks and velvets; got up, in fact, like a grand demoiselle. What would you say, now, if a good fairy were to find you out some day and were to offer to change you from what you are to a fine lady—would you say Yes?"

Matt reflected for a moment, then she followed her feminine instinct, and nodded her head vigorously.

"Ah!—by the way, Matt, can you read?"

"Print, not writing."

"And write?"

"Just a bit."

"Who taught you? William Jones?"

"No, that he didn't; I learned off Tim Penrenn down village. William Jones, he can't read and he can't write; no more can William Jones' father."

This last piece of information set the young man thinking so deeply that the rest of the interview became rather dull for Matt. When she rose to go, however, he came out of his abstraction, and asked her if she would return on the following day.

"I don't know—p'raps!" she said.

"Ah," returned the young man, assuming his flippant manner, "you find me tedious company, I fear. The fact is, I am generally affected in this manner in the present state of the moon. But come to-morrow, Matt. Your presence does me good."

However, the next day passed, and the next again, and there was no sign of Matt. He began to think the child had taken offense, and that he would have to seek her in her own home, when her opportune appearance prevented the journey. He was taking his breakfast one morning inside the Caravan, when he suddenly became conscious that Matt was standing outside watching him.

"Oh, you are there, are you?" he said, coolly. "Come in and have some breakfast, Matt."

He rose negligently, went to the door, and held forth his hand; Matt took it, gave one spring, and landed inside the vehicle.

"Tim, another knife and fork for the young lady—some more eggs and milk; in fact, anything you've got!" said Brinkley, as he placed a seat for Matt at the little table.

Tim gave a grunt of dissatisfaction. This "bold colleen," as he called her, was becoming too much for him, but he perforce obeyed his master's commands. Matt sat down and ate with an appetite. Brinkley played negligently with his knife, and watched her.

"It is two days since you were here, Matt," said he. "I was seriously thinking of coming to look for you. Why wouldn't you come before?"

"'Twasn't that!" said Matt. "I couldn't!"

"Couldn't? Why?"

"Why, he wouldn't let me, William Jones. He says he'll smash me if I come here and talk to you."

As Matt spoke her bosom heaved and her eyes flashed fire.

"He ain't at home to-day," she said, in answer to the young man's query concerning the ex-wrecker; "he's gone up to market town and won't be back before night."

As Brinkley looked at her a sudden thought seemed to strike him.

"Matt," he said, "you and I will go wreck hunting this afternoon; that is, if you've no objection."

She certainly had none; wherever he went she seemed willing to follow. In a very little while the two started off. It was Brinkley who led this time, Matt walking along beside him like a confiding child.

"By the way, Matt," he said, presently, "you told me once of treasures being hidden among the sand hills. Did anybody ever find any?"

"Not that I know on."

"William Jones, for instance?"

"No. Leastways I don't know."

"Well, what would you say, Matt, if I told you that I had found one?"

"If you!"

"Yes. I wonder if you can keep a secret? Yes, on reflection I think you can. Now, before we go any further, Matt, first you place your hand in mine, and promise never to mention until I give you permission what I am about to confide in you now."

Matt's curiosity was aroused.

"All right," she replied, eagerly, "I sha'n't tell."

"Very good," replied Brinkley; "we will now proceed."

(To be continued.)

ENGLAND'S WEALTHIEST DUKES.

Bedford and Westminster Head List in Territorial Possessions.

Speculation was rife a few days ago concerning the identity of the two millionaires who are credited in the statistical abstract of the United Kingdom with possessing between them the enormous sum of $32,095,000, says the Montreal Star. These two fortunate persons are probably the dukes of Westminster and Bedford.

The Duke of Bedford, who is known among his intimates by the nickname of "Hatband," owns the larger portion of Bloomsbury and the whole of Covent Garden, including the market, which is reputed to bring him $250,000 a year. The Duke and Duchess of Bedford care little for society, and the only occasions on which they appear are at rare intervals in the Bedford box at Covent Garden opera and at Prince's skating rink in Knightsbridge. At Woburn Abbey, their principal palatial residence, there are private zoological gardens. The Duchess of Bedford is a fellow of the Zoological Society. The duke is greatly taken up with all the varied interests of his property and is the author of a book on "The Management of a Great Estate."

It is doubtful whether the Duke of Westminster realizes exactly what he is worth. He is probably the most wealthy territorial magnate in the kingdom, counting among his properties the valuable Grovenor estate, which is situated in the heart of the West End.

The Grosvenor family represents one of the few remaining sets in London society that may be described as strictly exclusive. They live in a world of their own. Outsiders for them do not exist, nor will they willingly tolerate the presence of any one who by birth and breeding does not belong to the privileged elect. This exclusiveness is probably the result of the successful marriages made by the Grosvenor girls into exalted families.

An idea of the duke's colossal wealth can be gained by an inspection of the splendid town mansion, which is a treasure house filled with objects of priceless value. Many people are content with a clock which costs a few dollars, but that which tells his grace of Westminster the hour possesses a pendulum which in itself is worth $240,000, for it is set with forty-eight flawless diamonds, each valued at $5,000. The Duke of Westminster is a popular sportsman, and is known among his particular friends as Bend Or, a nickname conferred on him to commemorate the famous race horse of that name, owned by his grandfather, the late duke. Socialists and others may forgive him his great wealth when it is stated that fancy foods have no favor in the Westminster household. Simple dishes are always provided, such as mutton cutlets, milk puddings, fruit tarts and so on. Much of his vast wealth is derived from ground rents. He grows rich because he can't help it.

Why He Wept.

Little Bobby had been scraping the snow from the sidewalks for two hours. The minister, passing down the street, found him weeping as though his heart would break.

"What's the trouble, my little man?" asked the minister in consoling tones.

"Boohoo!" sobbed Bobby, as he mopped his eyes with his sleeve. "Bad tramp came along and stole the snow shovel from the little boy next door."

"Well, my lad, it is nice to be sympathetic, but you must not worry too much over other people's affairs."

"Oh, it isn't that, sir; I'm weeping 'cause he didn't steal my shovel, too."

Not for Publication.

"Yur pa attends a great many banquets," remarked the visitor. "I hear he is going to have his after dinner speeches published. I guess they will be interesting."

"Not half as interesting as his before dinner speeches," said truthful Tommy.

"Before dinner speeches?"

"Yes, the speeches pa makes when dinner is a few minutes late."

Practical.

"I take my stand on a high moral plane," said the young politician.

"You'd bettter provide yourself with a ladder," answered the old one. "If you have to come down suddenly you wouldn't want to jump off and break your neck, you know."—Cleveland Leader.

Method.

"I play popular stuff in the evening when I have a caller," said the sweet young thing. "Then later I play something classical."

"Why do you do that?"

"Then he goes home."—Cleveland Leader.

Tight Squeeze.

Mr. Green (in pet)—Well, Maria, if the shoe fits you wear it.

Mrs. Green—How absurd, Henry. You know I never wear a shoe that fits me. I always wear a size smaller.

Merely a Suggestion.

"Yes," she said, "I have seen twenty-three summers."

"Say," he queried, "do you think it is too late to consult an eye specialist?"

Ways of Women

Housekeeping by Machinery.

In Chicago there is a family whose bread winner earns $18 a week, says a writer in the April Appleton's. He is employed by one of the great electrical companies of the city.

His wife, of course, is her own cook, maid and laundress. On Monday the family wash, which has been soaking in soapy water all night, is put in a tub. She turns a switch; then cuddling baby in her lap she opens the morning papers and rocks and reads while the electric motor is swishing the soiled clothes back and forth in the washing machine.

The first step of the laundering process finished, she rinses the automatically cleansed clothing in clear water, turns another switch and feeds the moist cloth through the rubber rolls of the wringer, which is operated by the same motor that ran the washing machine. After the clothes are dried she irons them with electrical flatirons and what was once a back-breaking, health-destroying form of drudgery has become almost a positive pleasure.

The kitchen of this home has in it a gas stove, but it also has an electrical cabinet on which a goodly part of the meals are cooked. The cabinet is home-made, of dark stained wood, and on its broad shelf are several electrical "stoves," plates of iron in which are resistance coils that warm up to a cooking heat when the current is turned on.

The electrical oven stands on the floor when not in use, for it takes but an instant to screw the plug at the business end of its wire into the socket, and be ready to roast the Sunday leg of mutton. And all this in the house of a man who earns but $18 a week!

Snap Shots at Women

A mining company composed entirely of women was recently organized in Marquette, Mich.

The German empress for state occasions wears diamonds and a wreath of silver myrtle on her silvery hair.

In the patent office at Washington is the model of a pocket sewing machine, the invention of Sally A. Rosenthal of Dubuque, Iowa.

There is a men's league for women suffrage in London and one lone man was present at the international meeting representing it.

Miss Caroline McGill, an instructor in anatomy in the University of Missouri, has won the $1,200 Sarah Berliner reasearch fellowship for women.

Mrs. Millicent Garret Fawcett enjoys the unique distinction of being the only woman ever invited to address the University Debating Society at Oxford.

The Japanese woman dresses according to her age. She wears gold pins until she is 25. At 30 the pins are white and at 40 she wears plain shell combs.

Mrs. Philander C. Knox, wife of the secretary of state, personally manages the big dairy which is conducted on her husband's country estate at Valley Forge, Pa.

It is said that Queen Alexandra wishes to establish an order for the recognition of the special virtures of women in civil life, corresponding to the king's order for rewarding heroism in civil life.

Mrs. Harold Gorst, author of several novels dealing with the slums of London, and sister of Charles Rann-Kennedy, the playwright, who wrote "The Servant in the House," is in this country on a short visit. She is not a suffragette.

Mrs. Mary Crowell, of Byron, Ill., is one woman who believes that what is worth doing at all is worth doing well. She is engaged in the very prosaic occupation of raising hogs, but the dealers say the pork made from her hogs is of such good quality that they think she deserves to be allowed to vote.

A Two-Tone Turban.

The jaunty lines of this turban are most becoming, and the style is not at all trying despite its rather dashing character. The turban is of mixed navy and steel blue straw and the crown is entirely covered by a sweeping coq feather made of small gray quills tipped with blue. A scarf of navy blue satin goes around the right side, and the left, brim, which turns sharply upward, is caught by a smart cocade of gray lace centered with a steel button.

Husband as a Lover.

There seems to be a growing and widely spread dissatisfaction among women with the men. Very few women appear to be thoroughly satisfied with the men of their households. One and all, they fall far short of what they ought to be.

Fathers refuse to pay milliners' and modistes' bills with the pleased and unquestioning alacrity a fond and appreciative parent should show; brothers display a careless indifference to their sisters' company and an unreasonable and altogether inexplicable preference for the society of "that girl;" and husbands—never mind.

The only capacity in which a woman appears to be thoroughly satisfied with a man is when he is a lover—"her" lover, of course.

As her lover he is usually all she wants him to be.

As her lover he is willing to spend the whole evening telling her she has the most beautiful eyes, the most adorable chin and the most kissable mouth that were ever placed in the face of woman!

As her lover, he never praises another woman, because he never sees another woman!

As her lover, he listens avidly to everything she says—and believes it!

As her lover, he will go anywhere, do anything, get anything she wants!

As her lover, he has neither mind, will nor soul of his own!

Yes, as a lover he is thoroughly reasonable and a satisfactory person.

On the face of these facts does it not appear that it would be to the interest of the women to keep the men their lovers even after marriage?

Softening the Skin.

Homely complexion specifics are almost becoming too homely nowadays. Raw mutton fat, which is said to be excellent for the skin of the face in cold weather, is, as a matter of fact, a somewhat drastic remedy, and the same might be said of raw eggs, which are credited with a wonderful effect on the complexion.

A well-beaten new-laid egg, spread rather than rubbed over the skin in the evening, and left to dry on, is looked upon by many people as an excellent skin softener and preventive of the crow feet, the first signs of which have always to be closely guarded against. The face is first of all gently washed with tepid distilled or previously boiled water, and then dried with a soft handkerchief. A large sable-haired paint brush is afterward dipped in the well-beaten egg and worked over the face until the skin feels a little stiff and drawn. This is left to soak in for ten minutes, when the egg-wash is gently wiped off with a handkerchief dipped in rosewater.

Health & Beauty

Borax snuffed up the nose is good for cataarh.

It is said very strong tea will stop bleeding from a cut.

A sun bath is of much more value to health than much warming by the fire.

Undue consumption of tea, coffee, cocoa and chocolate will make the skin sallow.

A little good toilet water or cologne poured into a bath is delightful in its effects.

If your heart is weak do not indulge in showers, and be careful to temper the water, no matter how strong the heart.

Wherever there is an inconvenient hollow a gentle massage with cocoa butter will soon fill it up, and it is the purest and best of skin food.

A teaspoonful of strong black tea tied up in a piece of muslin, with boiling water poured over it, may be left on the eye all night for a sty.

Washing the eyes morning and night in water as hot as it can be borne is a wonderful tonic for those useful servants which are so easily injured.

An excellent household remedy for burns is pure vaseline or olive oil. The great thing is to exclude the air and dirt from the burned surface, and this the oil will do.

A dry shampoo of cornmeal is very cleansing if properly done. The meal should not be allowed to get too close to the scalp, and should be brushed out with a gentle "lifting" stroke.

To take disagreeable medicine eat one or two cloves or hold ice in the mouth until the tongue is chilled and the medicine will be less disagreeable. Medicines that discolor the teeth may be taken through soda straws.

In sleeping, keep the head as low as possible that the blood may circulate freely in the brain. The less pillows the better. Always stretch out your body fully. When the limbs are crossed or curled up in any way the rest is not so great.

An insect in the ear may be destroyed by pouring a teaspoonful of warm olive oil or camphorated oil into the ear and keeping it there for some time, holding the head in a position to retain the oil, which will afterward come away with the dead insect.

Covering for Featherbed.

For a covering for feather beds make a slip of cotton cloth eight inches longer and wider than the article to be covered, leaving an opening at one side a third of the length. On each inside corner sew tapes six inches long; also sew tapes six inches long on the four corners, tie the tapes, and either sew the opening at side or use buttons and buttonholes. Cotton challies can be used for comforts instead of cotton cloth.

Water Drives Away Blotches.

The brown skin patches which are so disfiguring and seemingly so hard to cure come supposedly from the liver. Many remedies have been tried for them, but the latest "cure" is so simple that it should at least be tested by every woman who wishes to fight the blemishes. A skin specialist declares that he has had more success in treating brown patches by copious water drinking than in any other way. The patient is forced to drink ten or twelve glasses of water a day, taking no other medicine. In a short time her skin shows good effects and in many cases the brown patches disappear entirely.

Tucked Blouse.

The blouse that is tucked in various effective ways is the favorite one of the moment, and this model would be charming developed either in lingerie material or such thin silks as crepe de Chine, messaline and the like or in cashmere; indeed, in any material that can be tucked successfully. The plain yoke and center front are especially well adapted to the hand embroidery that is so much in vogue, but they can, if preferred, be trimmed with applique or be made of fancy material.

Making a Fine Character.

The sweetest bread that any man or woman ever ate is that which is won by their own energy, or deserved by their usefulness. Whether labor be that of the hand or the head, there is dignity in it. Do not stand around with arms akimbo until occasion tells you what to do; don't live in hope with your arms folded. Fortune smiles on those who roll up their sleeves, put their shoulders to the wheel and push! To begin at the very foot of the hill and work slowly up to the top may be a very discouraging process, but it is precisely at this spot where so many begin to spoil their lives.

Home Love Best Charity.

We have come to realize that a child needs something more than clothes and food to develop the best; it needs the love that can only be found in a home. The success of the whole depends entirely upon the success of the unit, and this can only be achieved by recognizing each unit, though it be merely a puny little child of want or crime, as an individual, with individual characteristics and an individual yearning for love—Baltimore Star.

Attractiveness.

A magnetic personality is often more powerful than ability, and is often, very often, placed in the balance against it. It is, therefore, advisable to exert oneself to the utmost to cultivate that wonderful charm to the highest degree and she who has it not is not so much to be pitied as blamed, for it is more or less within the reach of all.

A Flower Hat.

Luxuriant flower wreaths composed of all the blossoms that grow weight the huge hats. The coloring of the example shown above was rich and beautiful. The hat itself, being of a burnt straw, lent a harmonious background to the wreath of black-eyed Susans encircling the high broad crown. The spots of intense black furnished by the flower centers gave richness to the color scheme. A huge chou made of many loops of satin ribbon of a rich burnt orange shade was placed on the left and completed the hat.

The Outdoor Woman.

The sight of an Englishwoman chasing a hare on foot, through bramble and thicket, over bridge and stiles, helterskelter over everything, would, says Town and Country, make a German hausfrau sit down in the middle of the road with her hands folded helplessly in front of her.

For the Kitchen Sink.

A bottle of household ammonia should be as invariably an adjunct to the kitchen sink and that of the waitress' pantry as the soap dish. It "kills" grease by a chemical combination with it and lends luster to silver by the same.

A Point in Ironing.

When ironing a starched garment, and a part of it becomes dry, do not dampen with water, but with a cloth wet with a little cold starch. This will keep all parts of the garment of equal stiffness.

Curious, but True.

"Girls Who Receive Hundreds of Proposals" is the title of an article in a contemporary. A curious fact in this respect is that liars, we believe, receive more proposals than any other sort of girl.—Punch.

REVIEW OF INDIANA

Evansville dealers are now offering 75 cents a bushel for corn, but many farmers continue to hold their supply on the belief that the price will go still higher.

At the request of Mrs. Pearl Pegley on her deathbed, six of the young women friends in Terre Haute were pall-bearers at her funeral. The six were attired in white.

Robert Monroe, twelve years old, was taken from Shelburn to a Terre Haute hospital, to be operated on for appendicitis, and the same day Helen Murray, eleven years old, of Terre Haute was taken to the same hospital for a like operation.

Dr. W. P. Wishard, of Indianapolis, known as one of the oldest physicians in Indiana, was seized with a double attack of paralysis a few days ago, and his condition is critical. Dr. Wishard is 93, and his advanced years makes his family apprehensive.

Cornelius L. Hollis, aged 71 years, a veteran of the civil war, and Miss Nellie Cravens, aged 17 years, were married at Evansville last week. Hollis used to hold his girl wife on his lap when she was a child in knee dresses. The mother of the girl gave her consent to the marriage.

Charles Williams, of Evansville, who recently sprung into notoriety by his claims that he had invented a new explosive that could be discharged by a wireless apparatus, made another demonstration by placing the explosive across the Ohio river. The shot shook the city and many people rushed from their homes.

Because his wife embraced Christian Science and refused to let him employ a physician to doctor his injured leg, Jacob Hien began suit for divorce at Hammond. Once he alleges she cracked a plate over his head, and then hurled a brick at him because he would ont become a Scientist. Hien states that he believes his wife will kill him unless he accepts her faith.

William Blankenbaker, a farmer near Shelbyville, last December heard some one in his chicken coop. He had been missing chickens, and, obtaining a shotgun, he went out in the yard. He saw a man on the road and fired. The man on the pike was seen to fall. Blankenbaker found the man he had shot was William DeCoursey his neighbor. DeCoursey has now brought suit against Blankenbaker for $2,000 damages, alleging he was injured to that extent.

Joe and Edwin Harris, ten and eight years old, respectfully, obtained a two-ounce bottle of blasting powder and went to a field near Greenfield to experiment. The boys land the bottle of powder against a rock and Joe dropped into it a lighted match. He was thrown ten feet by the explosion that followed, his hair was burned entirely from his head, severely cut by broken glass and bruised. The younger boy was not injured, but ran to the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Harris in Greenfield for help.

A pistol of ancient make and supposed to have been used in the battle of the Mississinewa, December 17 and 18, 1812, was plowed up last week on the Peconga farm, seven miles northwest of Marion, and not far from the place where the Indians made their strongest stand in the fight. William Smith, employed by William Lawrence who is opening for cultivation some new ground, plowed up the pistol, which has a long barrel. The curio will be turned over to the Grant County Historical society and placed on exhibition at the public library.

Silas Holler, of near Millersburg, has three daughters that are deaf mutes, and each has spent seven years at Indianapolis learning the language. The mother of the girls is not a mute, but for three years has been blind. The grandmother on the mother's side was a mute, but had no children who were, the affliction falling on the grandchildren. These three daughters have two sisters who are married and one brother who can talk and hear. With all of these odd afflictions it is said to be a happy family. One of the girls who can neither hear nor speak is a fine steamstress and an excellent milliner.

A peculiar coincidence has been discovered in connection with the appointment of Louis Shaffer as chief of police of Danville, Ill. Louis Schafer is the new police chief in Lafayette, Ind., the names being the same except for the slight difference in spelling. Only a few years ago both men worked together as machinists in the Monon shops in Lafayette. Mr. Shaffer moved to Danville, and two months ago was selected chief of police to succeed Charles H. Powell, now captain of police. Mr. Shaffer and Mr. Schafer are warm friends, and when the latter learned of the former's appointment he sent a telegram to the Danville man congratulating him on his appointment.

Dr. W. N. Fowler, of Bluffton, says he will not accompany Walter Wellman, on his second attempt to reach the north pole by means of a dirigible balloon. Dr. Fowler was a member of the Wellman party last year.

Mrs. Martha Manlove, aged 60 years, and J. W. Hankins, aged 52 years, were found dead in a house in Indianapolis. They had been asphyxiated. Gas was turned into the house by a new company, and it is supposed there were leaks in the pipes.

John Crowell, a farmer living on the Linton road four miles south of Jasonville, reports the almost complete loss of four acres of onions by hail. The onions were about ten inches high and they were beaten into the ground.

Isaac J. Brock, seventy-eight years old, father of eight children, grandfather of forty-three and great-grandfather of eighteen children, died at his home near Evansville last week. This was the first death of an adult in the Brock family in seventy-five years.

Lieutenant Governor Hall was found in a serious condition in his office in Rushville, but it was said that he will recover. Acute indigestion is his ailment.

The mouse adopted by the cat owned by S. W. Crozier, at Ridgeville, was killed, when its foster mother lay upon its frail body. While the strange affection of the cat lasted more than a hundred residents of the town visited the Crozier home and witnessed the unusual sight.

While lying upon a couch Mrs. Elmer Slick, of Wabash, rolled upon a pair of shears which had been left there. One of the blades penetrated her right leg near the ankle, puncturing a large arterry, and the woman came near bleeding to death before assistance reached her.

One of the richest birthday presents ever recorded in southern Indiana was recently given by Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Ribgyre, of New Harmony, to their son Robert, on his twenty-first birthday. The gift comprises 956 acres of land worth $100,000, and a valuable town residence in New Harmony.

Almost at the same minute, on the same day, two sisters, one in Indiana and the other in Ohio, were stricken with paralysis and both are dead. The women had often expressed a desire to die together, as one did not wish to survive the other. Mrs. Mary Felty, of Marion, Ohio, was stricken and before she died received a telegram from Richmond, Ind., telling of the death of Mrs. John Richards, her sister.

W. C. Hall, a rural mail carrier on Shoals, and a man of unquestioned veracity, reports that he has a cat which has adopted two young rabbits. Mr. Hall lives on a farm at the edge of town and recently a cat on the place was deprived of two kittens, leaving her with one young one. She was noticed, a few days later, with three young, and on examination it was found that two of them were rabbits. The cat, little kitten and its foster brothers, the rabbits, are living together agreeably and make a very interesting family.

While making a search in the cell occupied by Gorham and Van Tassell during the time they were prisoners in the jail at Martinsville several years ago, Sheriff Marley found a small saw and steel spring. The saw was about eight inches long, was very rusty, but the teeth were in good condition. The spring was about fourteen inches long. It is supposed the tools were slipped to the men by women from Indianapolis, who visited them at the time they were in jail. The sheriff's predecessors had heard that the tools were hidden in the jail, but had never been able to find them.

A scarlet ibis, a bird rarely if ever seen farther north than Mexico and a few of the gulf states, was found in Columbus last week. The bird stood about two feet high and had a bill at least five inches long. It appeared to have become worn out by a long flight because it was easily captured. A telephone message was then sent to Fish and Game Commissioner Z. T. Sweeney, asking for permission to kill the bird and mount it. The state commissioner replied that he had no authority to give permission to any one to break the law and advised that the bird be liberated. His advice was taken and the bird flew away.

The case of Edward McElvaine, of Seymour, against the Big Four railway, for $20,000 damages, is attracting considerable attention in the circuit court at Columbus. McElvaine lost his left arm while employed by the railroad company at Cincinnati. While the jury was being made up Deputy Sheriff Smith was sent to find a man to take his place. He selected Arthur Hacker, son of Judge Marshall Hacker, who is presiding at the trial. Young Mr. Hacker refused to do jury duty, because he said he could not leave his business. He telephoned to his father and asked if he had to come to the court house. "If Bill Smith says you have to come you do," answered the court. Mr. Hacker immediately reported for jury duty, and was accepted by both plaintiff and defense.

The grand commandery of the Knights Templars of Indiana, in session at the Scottish Rite temple in Indianapolis, elected the following officers: Luther Short, Franklin, grand commander; William B. Hosford, Mishawaka, deputy grand commander; John L. Rupe, Richmond, grand generalissimo; Charles M. Zion, Lebanon, grand captain general; Joseph G. Ibach, Hammond, grand senior warden; Carroll K. McCullough, Anderson, grand junior warden; D. D. Tillotson, Lafayette, grand prelate; Calvin W. Prather, Indianpolis, grand secretary; Charles L. Hutchinson, Indianapolis, grand treasurer; Harry G. Strickland, Greenfield, grand standard bearer; Adrian Hammersly, Washington, grand standard bearer; James L. Randall, Greencastle, grand warden.

Dr. Caleb W. Rice, of New Albany, was arrested a few days ago, charged with having performed criminal operation December 11. A young married woman is the physician's accuser, she having sworn out the warrant.

David Detrick, 102 years of age, of New Albany, the oldest man in Southern Indiana, walked to church to attend a special service in honor of his birthday and afterwards presided at a family dinner at which four generations were present.

Because her widowed mother wanted her to marry a man she didn't love Miss Vesta Hunsaker, a pretty girl of 24, committed suicide at Evansville. She left a letter for James Tremley, of Indianapolis, telling him she could not be his wife.

The Pleasant Ridge Oil company shot for the second time the No. 1 well drilled by the company some months ago on the Grimes farm, north of Portland. Recently the hole filled to a considerable depth with oil. Following the shot the well showed a strong pressure of gas.

We Are Getting Back Into Puritanism.

By JACOB GOULD SCHURMAN, President of Cornell University.

THE United States is going back to puritanism—to puritanical ideas, puritanical ideals, puritanical standards. I see almost universal evidence of puritanism.

SINCE THE TWENTIETH CENTURY OPENED THERE HAS BEEN MORE PURITANICAL WORK DONE THAN IN ALL THE YEARS SINCE THE CIVIL WAR PRIOR TO 1900. IN THE LAST SIX YEARS PARTICULARLY THINGS HAVE BEEN DONE WHICH ARE IN COMPLETE HARMONY WITH THE TEACHINGS OF THE PURITANS.

One of the signs of the times is the demand for good men in office. The American public is coming to realize that laws are so much waste paper and parchment unless there are GOOD MEN ELECTED to carry out those laws.

* * *

Another thing which shows the inclination to adopt standards of puritanism is the fact that today young men are turning more and more to character; they consider in a growing degree that CHARACTER IS MORE THAN MONEY. I can see a changed attitude among our young men as to the worship of money. Young men are coming to realize that the best things in the world cannot be got with money.

* * *

With money the young men see that they can get better food, clothing and so forth than without money, but they also see that MONEY IS USEFUL LARGELY FOR THE GRATIFICATION OF THE ANIMAL INSTINCTS.

TEN YEARS AGO THE MULTIMILLIONAIRE WAS LOOKED UP TO AS AN EMBODIED IDEAL WHICH YOUNG MEN MIGHT HOPE TO IMITATE. BUT WE HAVE RECOVERED FROM THE INTOXICATION OF WEALTH WHICH POSSESSED US A FEW YEARS AGO.

At any rate, there is little doubt that in public life we are coming to declare that money shall not exercise the TYRANNY that it did a few years ago. The fact that at the last election the contributions to the campaign funds were made public is an indication that government by the people is supplanting a government by the bosses through the use of money.

Then, again, there is a growing sense of humanity. The value of childhood is coming to be more fully recognized.

WE ARE COMING TO A RECOGNITION THAT WE'RE NOT MERE MACHINES, NOT MERE HANDS IN FACTORIES, NOT MERE THINGS AMONG THINGS, BUT THAT WE'RE BEINGS WITH IMMORTAL SOULS. THIS GROWING SENSE OF HUMANITY IS A TRIUMPH OF PURITANISM.

World Growing Better Despite New Evils.

By Professor EDWARD A. ROSS of the University of Wisconsin.

THERE is every indication that men are growing better. The moral scandals of our time signify not that men are worse, but that they are assailed by UNFAMILIAR TEMPTATIONS that they have not yet learned to resist. The older types of sin are invasive wrong, betrayal of personal confidence, oppression of the weak individual. In resisting these there has been great improvement.

The newer types of sin grow out of the interdependence of our time. Men come into new relations, and the ABUSE OF A NEW RELATION CONSTITUTES A NEW FORM OF SIN. This explains why the characteristic forms of wrongdoing of today are the abuse of the commercial relation, the abuse of the professional relation and the abuse of the fiduciary relation.

But goodness is developing as well as sin. The earlier goodness took the form of personal ministration. But the GOOD SAMARITAN IS NO LONGER THE PATTERN. As our relations become various and complex the upholder of laws and moral standards becomes more precious.

THE LATTER DAY SAINT IS NOT THE ONE WHO FEEDS THE HUNGRY AND VISITS THE SICK, BUT THE ASSAILANT OF INIQUITY, WHOSE SUCCESS LESSENS THE NUMBER OF TOMORROW'S HUNGRY OR SICK. HIS EPITAPH WILL READ NOT "HE WENT ABOUT DOING GOOD," BUT "HE WENT ABOUT CHECKMATING EVIL."

Our Great Wealth Threatens Safety of Nation.

By Dr. JOSIAH STRONG of New York, President of the American Institute of Social Service.

THE problem of the past has been poverty. The PROBLEM OF THE FUTURE IS WEALTH. Luxury has been the peril of a few. It is now the peril of a vast number—of every person who has not learned to control himself.

THE POWER OF KNOWLEDGE HAS PASSED TO THE MANY, BUT THE POWER OF IMMENSE WEALTH IS IN THE HANDS OF A FEW. THE RESULT IS UNSTABLE EQUILIBRIUM.

The leaning tower of Pisa has stood for centuries and may stand for centuries more, but make it twice or three times as high, and you will pass the point of stable equilibrium, and the whole structure will crumble.

So we cannot keep on piling up national wealth without PASSING THE POINT OF STABLE EQUILIBRIUM.

By 1940 the wealth of the United States, at the present rate of increase, will be as great as the wealth in 1900 of the United States, France, Germany, Russia, Great Britain and all her colonies.

THIS WEALTH WILL PLACE A STRAIN ON OUR MORAL CHARACTER SUCH AS NO NATION HAS YET WITHSTOOD.

The wealth that sunk Spain from the noblest to the meanest of nations is insignificant in comparison.

Col. Strathmore 2:12¼

Col. Strathmore 2:12¼, owned and in the stud of L. J. Diehl, Butler, Ind., the sire of Clatemore, with a four-year-old record of 2:21¼, winner of five straight races his first year out, and Marion Strathmore, with a two-year-old record of 2:27 in a three-year-old class, is a representative of the greatest family of early producers in the world. He is an exceptionally fast horse himself and also a sire of early speed. His sire, Strathmore, is the sire of Abbie Strathmore 2:07½, Terrell S. 2:08¼, Strathmeath 2:10¼, Strathdennis 2:10¾, and eighty-five other standard performers. He is one of the greatest of the trotting horse family builders. His dam, Crescent, is herself a race mare with a record of 2:24¼, and is the dam of Col. Strathmore 2:12¼, Crescendo 5:15¼, and George Crescens 2:17¼ as a three-year-old, she by Ira Wilkes, sire of eighteen standard performers; his second dam, Rigolette, took a race record of 2:22 and is also the dam of Exmore 2:18¼, Crescent 2:24¼. Many of his colts now in training show extreme speed, one in particular, a yearling, owned at Logansport, Ind., that has stepped an eighth in 17¼ seconds hitched to a cart. They are uniformally good individuals, good headed and have plenty of speed. Col. Strathmore is a coming young sire, worthy the consideration of breeders. Terms $20.00 to insure. $25 00 for living foal.

EMERY A. SHOOK, Auditor.

The Anti-Saloon Taxpayers' League, at Muncie, formed during the recent county option campaign, has changed its name to that of the Law Enforcement League and its members have pledged themselves to the task of running to earth the blind tigers and the bootleggers that may appear here after the saloons are ousted. Frank O. Ball, president of Ball Brothers' Manufacturing company, is president of the organization. A plan has been proposed to sell the stock in the Muncie Brewing company to 2,000 or more persons and to keep the plant going by supplying the home and family trade of stockholders in that manner. A share of stock, according to the plan, would cost a dollar and this would entitle the owner to be a customer of the company, as he would be in the position of selling liquor to himself. This plan is said to have been worked successfully elsewhere under similar conditions. Otherwise the company, which is now in the hands of a receiver, must go to the wall.

YOU'LL find that it will cost you more not to paint your property than to paint it. The good done by Devoe Lead-and-Zinc Paint is a lot more than it costs. A few dollars spent for paint will save many dollars' worth of property from decay and waste.

Devoe Lead-and-Zinc Paint is economy, not expense. Be sure to have it used for you. Geo. W. Geddes, Agent.

Think What this Guarantee Means to You

Here's the famous CLOTHCRAFT GUARANTEE.

The first all-wool guarantee ever given for clothes.

The best protection against disappointment that a clothing house ever issued.

KEEN KUTTER LAWN MOWERS

So light running that your "youngest" can now mow the lawn without help.

KEEN KUTTER Mowers are fast cutting and easy running because of the triple gear and the fine ball bearings. A KEEN KUTTER will last longer than any mower on the market and is easily kept keen and sharp. To sharpen, merely reverse the blades and they sharpen themselves. A cheap mower will cost more in the end on account of repairs, will not do the work properly and will require twice as much labor.

The KEEN KUTTER is a money saver, a time saver, a temper saver—and will keep your lawn looking like velvet.

MASURY'S HOUSE PAINT

THE PAINT WITH THE LONGEST LIFE

There is no question about it.

Masury's House Paints have been submitted to every possible test during the past sixty-five years. They have withstood the attacks of extreme heat, extreme cold, moisture and time. When properly applied on the proper surface they invariably give good accounts of themselves. Painters praise them because of their endurance and preservative qualities. Consumers endorse them because, by their use, they are spared the expense of repainting for the longest possible period. The wonderful success of the house of John W. Masury & Son for more than half a century is due to the care with which they select the ingredients used in the manufacture of their paints. Many substances could be used to lessen cost, but they are unhesitatingly rejected.

PURE LINSEED OIL

is used on account of its superior preservative qualities. The pigments ground with it are selected because experience has proved them to be best. In deciding upon paints for original painting or repainting you must remember it costs just as much to spread poor paints as it does to spread the best paints, and that in the interests of economy you should choose Masury's House Paints for the reason that they live the longest and retain their brilliancy of finish long after inferior paints have completely vanished. They are manufactured only by

There is a sentiment in favor of the city council purchasing the lots lying between West Main and West Oak streets, to be used for hitching rack ground to accommodate those who drive to town. There is great need of this addition to our hitching rails and we hope the council will decide to buy the lots and go ahead with the good work.

The little town of Dunkirk can boast of an extraordinary warrior. On Nov. 5, 1889, Amos Weaver of that town, then a sergeant in the regular army, attacked single handed fifteen Filipino insurgents He killed four and wounded several. The war department this week gave a belated recognition of his valor by awarding him a medal for conspicuous bravery, which was forwarded to him at Dunkirk.

Governor Marshall's objection to the first bids submitted by school book companies to the state board of education has had the effect of defeating a scheme of the publishing houses to dig into the pockets of the people of the state. The new prices asked for books for next year were denounced by the governor as exorbitant, and the board of education has adopted a series which, it is said, will save the parents of pupils something like $200,000. Just a minor incident, some people may call it, but it shows that Mr. Marshall has his eyes and his heart open to the welfare of the public.

The management at Cold Springs have been cleaning the park and making some extensive improvements this spring. They are now installing a fifty light pilot, carbonized feed, ascetylene lighting plant which they expect to have in operation for their opening day which will probably be the first Sunday in June. The hotel and pavillion will be lighted with this system and there will be six arc lights in the park. This will certainly be a great improvement and not only add to the convenience of those who spend the summer at this beautiful resort but also those from the neighboring community who enjoy spending an evening there, as on a dark night it was especially dark there on account of the trees.—Hamilton News.

Notions and Novelties

Its the little things, sometimes the most insignificant items to be found in a dry goods store, that are oftimes responsible for the creation of a good impression regarding that store among women. We know this, and having that thought ever with us, we have probably given more attention to that department than most concerns. We want you to feel that you get the article you want here, no matter whether its buttons, thread, needles, pins, hooks and eyes or what not, and that when you got them from us you know they are right. We take just as much care in the buying and selection of these small articles as we do on the most expensive lines in our house.

Hosiery and Knit Underwear Department

Merchandise that fits, wears and is reasonable in price, is the great difficulty in this class of goods. Whether its Hosiery or Underwear, you are uncomfortable if you are not properly fitted, and are dissatisfied unless you get good value for your money. We have studied both these problems in connection with this department and we feel that we have the best fitting and best wearing lines to be had in the country. Whether it is for yourself or your children we know we can please you.

Nazareth Waist Union Suit

Marks a decided improvement in Children's Under Garments. Combines shirt, waist and pants but is really one garment fitted with tapes for supporting outer garments; serviceable satteen front, satteen waist band, bone buttons that won't break in washing, buttons sewed on tapes that can't tear off, gussed seat--in fact every little detail is given the attention that insures a perfect under garment that will stand the wear and tear of the liveliest boy or girl.

good health, with its blessings, must understand, quite clearly, that it involves the question of right living with all the term implies. With proper knowledge of what is best, each hour of recreation, of enjoyment, of contemplation and of effort may be made to contribute to living aright. Then the use of medicines may be dispensed with to advantage, but under ordinary conditions in many instances a simple, wholesome remedy may be invaluable if taken at the proper time and the California Fig Syrup Co. holds that it is alike important to present the subject truthfully and to supply the one perfect laxative to those desiring it.

Paper and Canvas.

In a book entitled "Stories of the English Artists," R. Davies and C. Hunt tell an interesting anecdote of Turner, the great landscape painter. He disliked to part with his pictures, and when he sold one, invariably wore a look of dejection and oppression. If a friend asked him what was the matter, he would sorrowfully explain, "I've lost one of my children this week."

Once a rich Birmingham manufacturer, Gillott by name, introduced himself to the painter, and stated that he had come to buy.

"Don't want to sell," or some such laconic rebuff, was the answer.

The manufacturer then drew from his pocket a bundle of bank-notes, about five thousand pounds' worth.

"Mere paper," observed Turner, with grim humor, a little softened, however, and evidently enjoying the joke.

"To be bartered for mere canvas," replied Gillott, waving his hand at the "Building of Carthage" and its companions.

This tone of cool depreciation seemed to have a happy effect, and finally Gillott departed with some five thousand pounds' worth of Turner's pictures.

It oppressed my heart and I was in such a condition that I did not take an interest in anything. As a last effort I began using Doan's Kidney Pills. The kidneys responded quickly, began carrying off the poisons, and when I had used twelve boxes the trouble was all gone. I now enjoy better health than ever before."

Why Uncle Sam's New Navy Is Obliged to Grow Slowly.

WHEN Congress adjourned at the close of the first half of its fifty-seventh session it was satisfied with its appropriations for the naval establishment of the United States. There were not many ships, it is true, but there were enough, in the opinion of Senators and Representatives. A total of approximately thirty-one and a quarter millions of dollars was turned over to the Navy Department with which to maintain its ships and yards and construct new vessels. And everyone was apparently content. This was in 1897. The following year the Maine was blown up in Havana harbor, and, like a bolt from the blue, the United States found itself forced to go to war. The country was not prepared, the navy was on the scantiest kind of a peace footing, and although the nation was to measure strength with a second-hand power, there was consternation everywhere. This had its effect on Congress. While the regular appropriation bill for the navy carried $33,005,234, there was added a lump sum of $50,000,000 "for national defense" and an additional amount of $42,298,741 for the general improvement of the fleets and yards and the purchase of new vessels wherever they could be found. In all, the budget for the year of the war with Spain amounted to the enormous sum of $125,301,975. These figures startled everyone, once the battle of Santiago had been fought and the last vestige of the Spanish sea power had been swept away. Not much was said, however, for the victories of Dewey and Sampson were not such as to admit of criticism of the preparations that had made them possible. There were cries of economy, but in the following year it was found impossible, so strong was public sentiment, to get the appropriation beneath $62,547,793, just twice as much as the budget carried two short years previously.

Thus it might be said that the real birth of the modern navy of the United States was due to the war with Spain. Ever since that year there has been increasing activity in the upbuilding of the naval establishment, and for the first two years the appropriations for the maintenance of the navy have been greater than the heavy sum appropriated in the stirring days of 1898. During the last decade the sums granted each year by Congress to the navy have been ever increasing, with only two exceptions, those being in the years 1906 and 1907. These exceptions to the general rise, however, were more than overcome by the bill of 1908, which was the greatest ever passed in the history of the country for the use of the navy. It was not until 1886 that the first boat of the new navy was authorized. This was the second-class battleship Texas, long since discarded as of small importance. Two years later the first armored cruiser was provided for by Congress, and the New York was the result. Both of these vessels took part in the naval engagement off Santiago in 1898, when Cervera's fleet was destroyed.

In 1890 the first of the big modern battleships were authorized. Congress, with the lesson of the Spanish war fresh in mind, did not haggle over terms, but furnished the money necessary to build three first-class battleships; these eventually were the Indiana, Massachusetts and Oregon. In 1892 the Iowa was provided for, in 1895 the Kearsarge and Kentucky, and in the following year the Alabama, Illinois and Wisconsin. There was a lapse of a year, but in 1898 three first-class ships were laid down, the Maine, Missouri and Ohio, while in the year succeeding the Georgia, Nebraska and Virginia were authorized. In addition, the naval bill of that year provided for the powerful armored cruisers that now are a feature of the American sea power. There were two of these laid down in 1899, the California and the West Virginia, and three additional in 1900, the Colorado, Maryland and South Dakota.

The increase of the United States navy is due primarily to the fact that this nation has been forced into taking its position as a world power. The war with Spain forced upon the American people the Philippines, Guam and Porto Rico. In addition it was necessary to take over Hawaii. All these outlying possessions need protection, and to afford protection worthy of the name a powerful navy is necessary. There is another explanation of the rapid growth of the navy, and that is found in the increasing necessity for policing the Central American and South American countries. The United States, as promulgator and defender of the Monroe doctrine, is compelled to maintain a naval force great enough to enforce order, whenever that should become necessary. This country is the policeman of the Western Hemisphere and the navy is its club and badge of office.

WELL-KNOWN BOY KILLED.

Paul M. Monfort Falls Through Elevated Car Window.

Paul Maurice Monfort, the 4-year-old son of A. W. Monfort, a Chicago commercial photographer, was killed by falling from an open window of a South Side "L" train as it started from Stony Island avenue at 63d street, and the heartbroken parents have been consoled by messages of sympathy from friends scattered through several States, where the boy's face has been familiar for years in advertisements of staples.

The child was known as the most photographed baby in America and his father had posed him more than 1,000 times. The most familiar include the talcum-powder picture of a child smiling at fine particles strewn from a box and one of a babe seated in a bathtub with a cake of soap in his hand.

The boy's mother was with him at the time of the accident. The boy, running ahead of his parental guardian, leaped to a window seat and leaned forward to steady himself on the window pane. But the window was open and, instead of finding glass, the child toppled out into the street below. Mrs. Monfort, only four feet behind him, frantically leaped after him, but missed the child by a few inches. Then she tried to throw herself after it through the window, but was prevented by the train crew.

USE OF ALLIGATOR SKINS.

Consumption of the Leather Is Now Greater than Ever Before.

Occasional attempts to utilize the coriaceous epidermis of alligators in leather manufacture have been made for over 100 years or more, but not with much success until 1855, when this novel leather became somewhat fashionable and a considerable demand developed. The market, however, was not long continued, and after a few thousand hides had been shipped from the Gulf States the demand ended.

During the Civil War another raid was made upon these saurians to supply shoe material and they were again slaughtered in thousands, but with the cessation of hostilities and the restoration of free commerce in shoe material the alligators were again left to repose for a period.

The rest, however, was only temporary, for about 1869 fickle fashion again called for the leather for manufacturing into fancy slippers, boots, traveling bags, belts, card cases, music rolls and so forth. An immense demand was soon created for it, resulting in the slaughter of many thousands of the animals every year, giving employment to hundreds of men. The demand soon exhausted the productive capacity of this country and large numbers of skins were imported from Mexico and Central America.

The consumption of this leather at present is greater than ever before, and owing to the large importations the market price is somewhat less than a few years ago. The output of the tanneries of the United States approximates 280,000 skins annually, worth $420,000. It is a characteristic of all aquatic leather—indeed, of all leathers—that they are curiously checkered in oblong divisions, known as "scales" or "bosses," separated by intersecting grooves, and varying in size and character from the rough, hornlike scutes on the back to the smooth, pliable markings on other parts of the body, giving the skin that peculiar effect which makes it so popular for leather purposes.

DOESN'T GO TO MARKET.

Under Present Conditions the Markets Come to Hotel Stewards.

"I run over to the market about once a week to keep in touch with it, but the modern hotel steward no longer 'goes to market' in the old-fashioned sense. He is too busy. He would have to spend the whole day there. In other words, under present conditions the markets come to the hotels," said J. H. Todd to a New York Herald man.

"You see, the market men come around looking after business, for they find competition rather keen."

"How do you manage to get the best of everything?" was asked.

"We have to depend absolutely upon the dealers, and that works all right, for they could not afford to send inferior stuff. If they did, it would go right back to them, and they would also run a risk of losing business. We also depend upon them to notify us by telephone when they have anything especially fine on hand. You see, there is always a limited supply of delicacies, and the hotel steward who is enterprising gets what he wants of them. For instance, I had the first fresh mackerel that reached New York. That was Tuesday. Then in the middle of the week I captured a small shipment of peaches, nectarines and Japanese plums that came in from South Africa.

"We also have had canteloupes grown especially for us in a Pennsylvania hothouse. They come with the name 'Plaza' on the melon. This is done by placing a metal case and stencil over the melon just before it is ripe and the sun burns the name. The experiment was tried last year of raising canteloupes this way, but only this season has it been possible to raise a number of them. The fruit is red, sweet and of good taste.

"We have printed slips of what is on hand every night, and this is sent to me. I go over it and then find out what entertainments are scheduled for the next day, and so cover the day's supply as closely as possible."

Intellectual Diversion.

"That psychological-research man entertains some strange theories."

"You have it the other way around," answered Miss Cayenne. "Those theories serve to entertain him."—Washington Star.

If some people were to marry for brains instead of for money they would probably get left just the same.

GAZELLE LIKE ONE ROOSEVELT SHOT IN HIS FIRST DAY'S HUNT.

COINERS STEAL BELLS.

Taken from Church and Jail—Metal of Counterfeiters.

The strange theft of a church bell from the chapter house of Southwark cathedral the other day was paralleled some few years ago by the mysterious disappearance of the big bell of a famous English jail. It was in its place one evening and the next morning it had vanished. The affair was kept a secret from the press, in accordance with the traditional policy pursued by our prison authorities, and for a long while nobody knew what had become of the missing article.

Eventually, however, it leaked out that it had been stolen by one of the convicts with the connivance of a warder. The thief was a professional coiner whose period of detention was on the point of expiring and his reason for desiring the acquisition of so much good metal is sufficiently obvious to need no explanation.

In all probability the missing Southwark bell was annexed for a similar purpose, although other ends have been had in view in the past by stealers of such articles. There was, for instance, the case of the antiquary who stole the famous St. Killin bell from its place in the tower of Killin Church in Perthshire.

The vulgar believed that the bell if surreptitiously carried away would extricate itself from the hands of the thief of its own accord and return home ringing all the way; and the antiquary, when called to account, pleaded that he took the bell in order to prove the falsity of this particular popular superstition. Then there was that "Ralph the Rover" of Southey's well-known ballad who stole the Inchcape bell in order that peaceful merchantmen might be wrecked upon the dreaded reef. He perished himself, with all his crew, because of the absence of its warning note, a fact known to every schoolboy.—Pearson's Weekly.

Blacking Heels.

"The ordinary bootblack," said the woman who has had much experience, "does not know how to polish a woman's shoes. He thinks if he puts a brilliant shine on the toes and slaps a thin coat of dull blacking over all the other parts of the shoes he has done a perfect job, because that is the way he blackens men's shoes; but that will not suffice at all for women's shoes. They should be evenly polished all over.

"The front part of a man's shoes is all that ever shows, but when a woman crosses the street or goes up or down stairs or steps on or off a car or into an auto or a carriage her whole shoe is likely to show, and nothing looks wore than soiled heels or dingy strips up the back of a woman's boots. A woman who cares to be well groomed is extremely particular about the trimness of her heels and ankles, but it almost is impossible to get a bootblack to give that part of her shoes sufficient attention, although she pays him extra."

The Self-Improvement Habit.

The very reputation of having an ambition to amount to something in the world, of having a grand life-aim is worth everything, says a writer in Success Magazine. The moment your associates find that you are dead-in earnest; that you mean business; that they cannot shake you from your determination to get on in the world or rob you of your time or persuade you to waste it in frivolous things, you will not only be an inspiring example to them, but the very people who are throwing away their time will also admire your stand, respect it, and profit by it, and you will thus be able to protect yourself from a thousand annoyances and time-wasters, and experiences which would only hinder you.

In other words, there is everything in declaring yourself. In taking a stand and thereby announcing to the world that you do not propose to be a failure or an ignoramus; that you are going to take no chances on your future; that you are going to prepare yourself for something out of the ordinary away beyond mediocrity, something large and grand.

The moment you do this you stand out in strong contrast from the great mass of people who are throwing away their opportunities and have not grit and stamina enough to do anything worth while, or to make any great effort to be somebody in the world.

Marriage is a gamble when there is money back of it.

Civil War Stories

"We're Old Abe Lincoln's Boys."

Oh, comrades true, who wore the "blue"
from sixty-one to five;
Keep your camp fires burning brightly,
yes, keep the flames alive,
And you'll not forget those days of strife,
their sorrows and their joys,
In victories won or battles lost, we were
"Old Abe Lincoln's Boys."

From crowded marts and western plains,
how our volunteers did pour,
Singing "coming, father Abraham, three hundred thousand more."
For Sumter's walls "in ruins rife by traitors' missiles hurled,
And sounds of fratricidal strife, went echoing round the world.

There was Donaldson and Shiloh—what awful carnage there,
Then Corinth fell, and Vicksburg, too,
gave up in wild despair,
Our gunboats open up the way, where,
ere their line deploys—
Our transports pass the silenced forts with "Old Abe Lincoln's Boys."

Before our veteran ranks in blue, the Southern legions flee,
'Till Lookout Mountain comes in view,
hard by the Tennessee,
Along its base and on its crest, far, far beyond our view,
Bragg's Southern army waiting for "Abe
Lincoln's Boys in Blue."

That foggy dark November night, no
moon nor stars to shine,
With muffled wheels, and footsteps light,
we formed our battle line.
We waited for the morning sun—that did not pierce the gloom,
'Till General Sherman's signal gun upon the air did boom.

A shout, a charge. From vales below, out from the misty shrouds,
Up lofty Lookout heights we go, we fight
"above the clouds."
Bragg's mighty hosts in full retreat from carnage fierce and noise,
They'd met a "Waterloo" defeat—from
"Old Abe Lincoln's Boys."

And then we turned our faces from Savannah and the sea—
We waded South Carolina swamps, the turbid Congaree,
We met Hood's shattered army, some in groups and some alone,
They'd fled from far-off Nashville and
"Pap Thomas's sycione."

We were after General Johnston and his veterans in gray,
They tried all kinds of hindrances our onward march to stay—
But we cleared away obstructions, or one side our columns turned,
Sometimes we waded chilly streams,
where bridges had been burned.

We heard of Lee's surrender. Oh, the "end" was coming fast,
Then Joe Johnston's fifty thousand men laid down their arms at last.
"To Richmond," then to Washington,
then in the "Grand Review,"
Marched the loyal Union armies, "Abe
Lincoln's Boys in Blue."

But what of all our heroes, three hundred thousand dead?
"On fame's eternal camping ground their silent tents are spread."
Their marchings done, their battles o'er,
be theirs eternal joys,

Sheridan's Famous Horse.

The part played by Sheridan's great horse "Winchester" in one of the bloodiest battles of the rebellion has been repeatedly recognized in books of history and in patriotic verse. Read, the poet, by a few strokes of his pen, lifted the beast into a fame almost as enduring as that which had been earned by its rider.

"Winchester," the cognomen by which the beast has been known since the war, was jet-black in color, with a small white star almost in the center of the forehead—a sort of "lucky star." He stood sixteen and a half hands high, and was trim built, active and proud-spirited. When Sheridan took command of the Second Michigan Regiment, in 1862, Captain Campbell presented him with the animal, which was then spoken of as a 3-year-old colt. His owner dubbed him Rienzi, after the Mississippi town of that name. He carried his master through the battles of Stone River, Chickamauga, Mission Ridge, and a score of other engagements in the Tennessee campaign. He pranced around among the mules and ordinary steeds at the battles of Opequon, Fisher's Hill, Cedar Creek, Petersburg, Trevilian Station, the Wilderness, Spottsylvania, Cold Harbor, Gordonsville, Waynesboro, Five Forks, Jettersville, Sailor's Creek, Appomattox Station and Appomattox Court House, and a score or more of other combats. In fact, "Winchester faced the guns in ninety engagements, and, with a single exception, never flinched or turned tail to the enemy. In the battle of Stone River, a solid shot passed under him, grazing the skin of his belly. He became fractious and unmanageable, the general being obliged to dismount. The appearance of the animal on the field without a rider was the foundation for a report that his owner had been killed. The horse was wounded by pieces of shell in the battles of Opequon and Trevilian, but not severely in either instance.

History describes the ride to Winchester as a furious and headlong race. General Sheridan said, in speaking of the matter a few months before his death, that he had ridden the horse at a full gallop, at times breaking into a run. The staff officers, Generals Forsyth and O'Keefe, and the escort of twenty cavalrymen, rode with him, but the horse Winchester showed more spirit and "bottom" than any of the other animals. The general added that the actual distance ridden was sixteen miles, the poet Read having used about four miles of "poetical license." He spoke feelingly of his old black steed, saying he had been unexcelled in speed, courage, docility, and noblness of nature. The general had not been upon "Winchester's back since the war closed. He had required the hostler to give him the tenderest attention. The horse suffered more or less from rheumatism. A boy was allowed to take him out to exercise one day, and, as he was trotted at a pretty lively gait, became overheated, and this, combined with an enfeebled constitution, caused death. The skin of old "Winchester" was prepared in the best art of the taxidermist, and is preserved to this day among the general's relics of the war.

How We Eat the Wedding Supper.

During the winter of 1864 my regiment (Twenty-first Connecticut) was ordered from Newport News to Morehead City, N. C., to guard the railroad from Morehead to Newbern. We made our encampment on the ground where a Vermont regiment had built barracks and established itself in comfortable quarters to guard the road and a long bridge over one of the branches of the Neuse River. But we were gobbled up by Pickett and his veterans almost to a man. They burnt the quarters and the bridge, and played havoc in general. After fixing things up and rebuilding the bridge our duty consisted in scouting through dense pine woods to learn of Pickett's movements or gain any information of any Confederates in the vicinity. The whole country was covered with the yellow pine. It was the home of the tar kiln burner or the rosin gatherer. The only roads were cart roads leading from one cabin to another or to some little hamlet of the fishermen living on the shores of a shallow body of water known as Bogue Sound—one of the many along a coast famous for its fish, which, with sweet potatoes and razor-back hogs, forms the principal food of the natives.

So our foraging added but little to our commissariat stores, and a mess of sweet potatoes or a few chickens was ever welcome. No porker came amiss, and many a string of fish, hanging salted, fell from their lofty elevation to our mess kettle. Many a tale of lost stores from their winter's supply was rehearsed and retold to our officers by the sad eyed and sullen, sorrowing settlers. Their complaints, always gained them at the least sympathy in the way of rations of coffee, sugar and hard tack, so that after all their loss in fish or truck was their gain in good, substantial food.

One day a contraband told us that a wedding was to take place at a little hamlet a couple of miles away, between a wounded paroled Confederate soldier and a maiden of the fishers' village, with a grand supper and dance to follow. Two comrades and myself obtained permission from our lieutenant to attend. Our contraband, as our guide, soon piloted us near the house. Taking our station where we could see and not be seen, we waited till "there was a sound of revelry by night, and eyes looked love to eyes that spake again," when, with our rifles as our tickets of admission, we entered the ball room.

Anxious for peace
Or ready for war,
To dance with the bride
Of the young Lochinvar.

Did we dance? Nary figure. Did we partake of the supper? Yes, after we got back to camp, having taken the table cloth to carry it in for luck?

O, but that was a royal feast! Fish, bacon, sweet potatoes, turnips and corn cakes. 'Twas a pathetic scene, worthy of delineation by Bill Nye. When they saw their supper in the hands of the Philistines their mirth was hushed, their joy was ended. Doubtless some of your fair readers will say, "What wretches, to carry off their wedding supper." But I will leave our defense to their husbands or brothers, who, perhaps, were comrades wearing the blue, and who will add, "Those were the days when might made right."

At Atlanta.

It is curious why soldiers will unnecessarily expose themselves to danger. I have often wondered whether it was true bravery or foolhardiness that inspired a man to imperil his life without orders, when he could do more good behind shelter. An incident of that kind occurred in the battle of Atlanta, which shows the results of such conduct. We were in a skirmish pit, and had to lie low, for every time a man showed his head above, he got the contents of a Confederate sharpshooter's gun. There was a small tree which obstructed our view of the enemy which troubled us not a little. There was a man in the pit by name Dick Brian, who said he would go back to the pioneer corps, get an ax and fell the tree. He procured the ax and safely returned to the pit. Then we began to think the man was in earnest. We knew that he would not get one-half of the way to the tree before he would be riddled with balls, and remonstrated with him, but it was no use. He took the ax in one hand and his gun in the other and started. He did not reach one-third of the distance before he was stretched on the plain; mangled with bullets. His life was lost to him; he was lost to his country and to his family, through an act which a moment's consideration would have convinced him was sheer folly.

For my part, I did not call that bravery. I was always much braver when I was behind a tree, and the larger the tree the better. I do not wish to intimate that the men of the late war were not brave men, for I think that they were all (with the exception of myself) the bravest men that ever marched in the ranks of an army.

The Camera in War.

M. B. Brady, the Washington photographer, was the first to take the camera on the battle field in the civil war. He pitched his tripod first at the battle of Bull Run, and he continued throughout the war to make these important pictures. The "instantaneous process" was not known in those days, or we might have had photographs of the bullet and bomb shell "in motion."

Kidney Ailment

I want every person who suffers with any form of Kidney ailment, no matter how many remedies they have tried, no matter how many doctors they have consulted, no matter how serious the case, to give Munyon's Kidney Remedy a trial. You will be astonished to see how quickly it relieves all pains in the back loins and groins caused by the kidneys. You will be surprised to see how quickly it reduces the swelling in the feet and legs, also puffiness under the eyes, after taking a few doses of this remedy. You will be delighted to see the color returning to your cheeks and feel the thrill of vigor and good cheer. If your Urine is thick or milky, if it is pale and foamy, if it contains sediments or brickdust, if it is highly colored or has an offensive smell, if you urinate frequently, you should persist in taking this remedy until all symptoms disappear. We believe this remedy has cured more serious kidney ailments than all the Kidney medicines that have been compounded. Professor Munyon believes that the terrible death rate from Bright's Disease and Diabetes is unnecessary and will be greatly reduced by this remedy.

Go at once to your druggist and purchase a bottle of Munyon's Kidney remedy. If it fails to give satisfaction I will refund your money.—Munyon.

"I shall circulate a petition," answered Rivers, savagely, "demanding that the chewing gum cars be abolished!"

Fell from Scaffold and Injured His Back.

Thirty years ago James C. Lee, of 1100 9th street, S. E., Washington, D. C., fell from a scaffold and seriously injured his back. In telling about it he says: "My suffering was terrible; from the small of my back all around my stomach was just as if I had been beaten with a club. I tried all kinds of plasters—belladonna, capcine and porous—without getting relief, and bought so-called electric belts but none of them did me any good.

One day, while working near my daughter's house, my back pained me so badly that I had to quit. I went into the house and lay down for ease. My daughter had a bottle of Sloan's Liniment in the house and she rubbed my back well with it and gave me some to take home. I used six and a half bottles of Sloan's 25c. Liniment and can do as much work now as any man in the shop, although I am sixty-seven years old. I would not be without Sloan's Liniment for any consideration and recommend it to anyone suffering pain."

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

ELDERLY PEOPLE HELPED FREE

The last years of life are the sweetest, and yet the most difficult to prolong. It is then that the greatest care is exercised in maintaining bodily health. But the chief care should always be with regard to the food you eat and whether you are digesting it properly. You should not allow yourself to become constipated.

No doubt you have tried salts and cathartic pills, purgative tablets, etc., and have come to the conclusion that they are violent in action and do but temporary good. Listen, then, to the voice of experience with regard to a wonderful and mild laxative, Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It is not new, only we are trying to find new friends for it.

A. A. Felts, of Johnston City, Ill., suffered from stomach trouble for six years and found his cure in Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. His wife uses it too with success. We could name hundreds of others. Some heard of it first through neighbors or friends; others through the doctor's offer to send any sufferer from a stomach, liver or bowel complaint a free sample bottle for trial, without charge. If you will send your name and address he will send you a trial bottle direct to your home. If it proves itself as he claims then continue the treatment by buying a 50-cent or $1 bottle of your druggist, as all of them sell it. Old people, like children, should look for purity, and it is well to mention that the purity of this remedy is vouched for with the U. S. government. Also, though a free bottle is sent to prove its merits, results are always guaranteed from the regular bottles bought of druggists, who will refund your money if it does not satisfy you. Send at least for the free test bottle to-day.

If there is anything about your ailment that you don't understand, or if you want any medical advice, write to the doctor, and he will answer you fully. There is no charge for this service. The address is Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 202 Caldwell bldg., Monticello, Ill.

SKIN TROUBLES CURED.

Two Little Girls Had Eczema Very Badly—In One Case Child's Hair Came Out and Left Bare Patches—Cuticura Met with Success.

"I have two little girls who have been troubled very badly with eczema. One of them had it on her lower limbs. I did everything that I could hear of for her, but it did not give in until warm weather, when it seemingly subsided. The next winter when it became cold the eczema started again and also in her head where it would take the hair out and leave bare patches. At the same time her arms were sore the whole length of them. I took her to a physician, but the child grew worse all the time. Her sister's arms were also affected. I began using the Cuticura Remedies, and by the time the second lot was used their skin was soft and smooth. Mrs. Charles Baker, Albion, Me., Sept. 21, 1908."

PENNY LUNCHES AT SCHOOL.

Scores of Los Angeles Children Enjoy a Good Penny Meal Daily.

Pathetic to watch, but inexpressibly delightful to participate in, the penny luncheon has come to be an important factor in the daily routine of the Ann street school, and which, it is hoped, has come to stay, says the Los Angeles Herald.

Armed with contributions from merchants and private citizens, the local Civic Association has taken up this good work, which was begun in the East, of serving penny luncheons to little children who come to school either without any breakfast or with not enough to nourish them properly. The association is starting with the Ann street school, where the pupils are of Mexican or foreign parentage, and where the need of this work is most sorely felt.

One of the schoolrooms makes an admirable dining room and four long oilcloth covered tables are placed with benches down each side.

Promptly at 11:45 a. m. everything is in readiness for the eager rush of hungry children who can hardly wait for the hour to arrive.

Big white bowls with blue rims are filled with thick, delicious soup, and there are two big cold buns at each place, with the necessary spoons and usually some kind of fruit, which, all together, make a meal fit for a king.

Children who cannot bring even the one penny required are furnished with tickets, and lessons in unselfishness and generosity are taught by these little people. When, perchance, a midget has forgotten or lost his or her ticket some other child near by pays, that the treat may not be missed.

The work, though started but a short time ago, is already showing remarkable results; half-starved bodies are responding to the kind treatment and the average of work in the school is improving proportionately.

LIGHT BOOZE.

Do You Drink It?

A minister's wife had quite a tussle with coffee and her experience is interesting. She says:

"During the two years of my training as a nurse, while on night duty, I became addicted to coffee drinking. Between midnight and four in the morning, when the patients were asleep, there was little to do except make the rounds, and it was quite natural that I should want a good, hot cup of coffee about that time. It stimulated me and I could keep awake better.

"After three or four years of coffee drinking I became a nervous wreck and thought that I simply could not live without my coffee. All this time I was subject to frequent bilious attacks, sometimes so severe as to keep me in bed for several days.

"After being married, Husband begged me to leave off coffee, for he feared that it had already hurt me almost beyond repair, so I resolved to make an effort to release myself from the hurtful habit.

"I began taking Postum and for a few days felt the languid, tired feeling from the lack of the stimulant, but I liked the taste of Postum, and that answered for the breakfast beverage all right.

"Finally I began to feel clearer headed and had steadier nerves. After a year's use of Postum I now feel like a new woman—have not had any bilious attacks since I left off coffee."

"There's a Reason." Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true and full of human interest.

FARM AND GARDEN

Suburban or Village Barn.

The building herewith shown is well suited to the needs of the suburban or village resident, or of the man owning a small tract of land, and making a speciality of gardening, poultry, bees, or fruit. Size can be varied within certain limits.

As shown it has one single and one double horse stall. The latter can be used as a box stall. There are two single cow stalls. The cows are loose, being kept in by chains behind them. There is a harness room, shelves for milk pail, etc., medicine cupboard, ventilator, three feed bins in hopper form so as to take little room in the stable and filling from above, and stairway with door balanced with weights at top. The carriage room is large enough for a set of vehicles, or part can be used as a repair shop. The hay loft will hold at least two loads, and some bedding. The storeroom fills a general need. Outside walls are covered with drop siding, and roof has prepared roofing. Foundation is of grout, brick, or cement blocks. Stable floors are of cement, with wood blocks in stalls. The style of exterior finish may be varied to harmonize with that of the other buildings. A cupola may be substituted for the iron vent cap. This design gives in compact form a complete small barn and stable, at moderate cost.—F. L. Marsh.

GOOD BARN PLAN.

Fresh Water for Poultry.

It is essential that water for fowls be changed twice daily, at least, and unless it is kept celan it will occasion disease. Should a fowl be ill, and the owner not be aware of it, as it drinks it is bound to contaminate the water from some discharge, perhaps from its nostrils or from the breath, says the Mirror and Farmer. A sick bird, of course, should always be removed, but sometimes the farmer or poultryman is unaware that the fowl is sick until it is too late to undo the harm it has done by contaminating the drinking water. The best plan is to keep the water as fresh and the drinking vessels as clean as it is possible to do. A few drops of carbolic acid in the drinking water will assist in keeping it pure, but the acid should be used carefully on account of its poisonous qualities. Washing the drinking fountains or vessels daily will do more to keep the water fresh and pure than anything else. When water is allowed to stand, even if only for a few hours, on throwing it out there will be the smallest accumulation of slime in the fountain, and if they are refilled without washing them, the coating increases until the water, although freshly put in, is unfit for the fowls' use. As the warm weather advances there is more necessity of watching the drinking vessels.

Corn Crop of 1908.

The Indian corn crop for 1908, amounted to 2,643,000,000 bushels. The crops of three years have exceeded this, but only the crop of one year (1906) exceeded it very much. The value of the crop is estimated at $1,615,000,000. The price of corn is exceptionally high. There are only two years in which the farm price of this crop was as high as it is for this year. In 1881 the price was 63.6 cents; in 1901, when there was only two-thirds of an ordinary crop, the price was 60.5 cents. The total value of this crop is by far the highest ever reached. The crop of 1902 was worth a billion dollars, and the crops of 1904, 1905 and 1906 were worth $100,000,000 more; the great increase of $300,000,000 over the crop of 1902 was made in 1907, and now the increase is $600,000,000—equal to the gold in the treasury of a rich nation.

Sowing Vegetable Seeds.

If the soil has been properly watered after the sowing of vegetable seeds little attention in this direction will be needed before the proper time for transplanting. This will depend largely upon the character of the weather. In bright, sunny weather, when free ventilation is required, the flats may need an application of water almost daily. Excessive watering, however, should be guarded against, as it tends to produce tender, spindling plants.

To Revive Grass.

No top dressing or fertilizer will do more to revive grass than nitrate of soda, and it should be used in combination with materials containing phosphoric acid and potash. A mixture of 150 pounds of nitrate of soda, 150 pounds of acid phosphate and 75 pounds of muriate of potash is recommended. Grass, even in the old meadows, will respond very quickly to this treatment.

Testing Eggs.

It is claimed that a freshly laid egg placed in a bucketful of water will sink to the bottom; one day old will sink nearly to the bottom; two days old, about half way up; three days old, will float not quite at the top; four days old, just touch the top; five and six days, rise a little above the top, rising a little higher as it daily grows older.

Farm Mechanics.

Every farm should have a workshop. The building may be large or small. It is not necessary to have it very expensive. The tools may be few or many, but what there are should be good. No man can do good work with poor tools, and good tools cost but little more than poor ones. A building 10 by 12 feet will answer for a blacksmith shop with a small vise bench in one corner. If this is fitted with a good chimney, forge, anvil, hammer, tongs and good steel vise, considerable blacksmithing work can be done to advantage.

There should be a small stove to make the shop comfortable in winter. This is very important, because there is more time to work in a shop in the winter, and you can't work with blacksmith's tools in a frosty atmosphere.

Carpenter's work is different. A carpenter's bench may be placed against the side of the building and covered with a shed roof, for, if necessary, carpenter work may be done outside if you have a covered place for the bench and tools.

A much better arrangement is to have a blacksmith shop in one end of a larger building and a carpenter shop in the other end, with a partition between. There should be no shavings lying about a blacksmith shop; there is too much danger from fire. For another reason, the two kinds of work do not jibe well together. It is comparatively easy to keep a blacksmith shop in order, but there is a great deal of litter about a woodworking shop, and a farmer never finds time to keep such things neatly in order.

In buying woodworking tools the best are the cheapest. It is poor economy to buy cheap tools. Not many are needed for common repair work, and a good kit may be had for a few dollars.

Instruction books on mechanics may help a good deal. The principles may be studied out and applied in the shop. The boys on the farm take up such things easily and often make good mechanics.—Agricultural Epitomist.

Increase in Farm Animals.

The Crop Reporting Board of Bureau of Statistics of the United States Department of Agriculture estimates the numbers and values of farm animals on farms and ranges in the United States on January 1, 1909, as follows: Compared with January 1, 1908, the following changes are indicated: Horses have increased 648,000; mules, 184,000; milch cows, 526,000; other cattle decreased 694,000; sheep increased 1,453,000; swine decreased 1,937,000. In average value per head, horses increased $2.23; mules, 8 cents; milch cows, $1.69; other cattle, 60 cents; sheep decreased 45 cents; swine increased 50 cents. In total value milch cows increased $52,888,000; other cattle, $17,816,000; sheep decreased $19,104,000; swine increased $15,764,000. The total value of all animals enumerated above on January 1, 1909, was $4,525,259,000, as compared with $4,331,230,000 on January 1, 1908, an increase of $194,029,000, or 4.5 per cent.

Packing the Fleece.

One of the best ways to pack the fleece is to lay it upon a table, turn in the head and tail, then the flanks. After this roll it up into a neat roll and tie it firmly, using such a device as here illustrated.

The tying box is made from light lumber with slots, as shown, through which the rope is passed. The fleece is placed upon this rope and the roll easily tied. Wool buyers prefer to have the fleece loose, light to handle and elastic and tied up so that it can be easily opened if needed.—Farm and Home.

SIMPLE FLEECE-PACKING BOX.

The Silo.

The silo should be depended upon, not only for winter feeding, but for the entire year, in case pasture is scarce or poor in quality. It is the cheapest way to get succulent summer feed if the land is at all limited in area, or if the pastures are not such as to produce good feed in dry weather. In parts of Massachusetts large milk producers consider that it costs 1 cent a quart more to produce milk without silage than with it.

Hours of Labor on Farm.

Prof. Boss of the Minnesota Agricultural College says that statistics of the actual hours of labor on the farms investigated show that farmers work nine hours a day in the summer and between four and five in the winter. Prof. Bailey of the Roosevelt Farm Life Commission tells the story of the school ma'am working from 9 until 4 until she married a farmer, and had to work from 4 to 9.

The First Baldwin Apples.

The place where the first Baldwin apple tree grew is marked by a monument. This first tree was a chance seedling that came to maturity on a farm near Lowell, Mass., about 1740. It was not until 1784 that Col. Baldwin became interested in the apple, developed it and gave it his name. The original tree lived till after 1817, and did not live in vain. For the Baldwin apple is one of the best.

Drain the Feed Lots.

There is no place upon the farm where a system of drainage can be more profitably installed than in the feed lots and around the hog pens. In too many instances large wallows are formed around the hoghouse and these are both unsightly and unsanitary if the hoghouse is not so situated that drainage is natural an artificial drainage system will repay its cost many times.

HOUSEHOLD TALKS

Mignonette Drives Away Flies.

Mignonette, it has been discovered, is abhorred of flies, and in a room where pots of the flowers are set no fly will linger for a moment, says the Gentlewoman. Now is the time to sow the seeds, and for early blooming the pots must be subjected to gentle heat. Instead of fly papers and horribly sticky brown mixtures left about a room in glass dishes, what a blessed resource as a deterrent to the irritating fly is the sweet, wholesome flower of mignonette!

One-Egg Cake.

One and a half cups granulated sugar, half cup butter, scant, one cup sweet milk, two and a half cups sifted pastry flour, one egg, two and a half level teaspoonfuls baking powder in sifted flour. Flavoring. Beat butter and sugar thoroughly, adding a little of the milk to help make creamy. Beat egg well and add then the balance of milk. Just at this point beat the mixture with the egg beater, which makes it fine grained. Add flour last.

Beef and Ham Pie.

Cut cold roast beef into pieces 3 inches long and 1 inch wide and cut raw ham into similar pieces, three hard-boiled eggs cut into quarters.

Line a buttered baking dish with pie crust, pack in the meat and egg, and season well, then add just enough gravy to moisten. Cover with crust, cutting an opening in the center. Bake for one hour in a moderate oven. When done pour in some more gravy just before sending it to the table.

Chicken Baked in Rice.

Cut a chicken into joints as for fricassee, season well with pepper and salt, lay it in a deep dish lined with slices of ham or bacon, add a pint of veal gravy and an onion finely minced; fill the dish with boiled rice, well pressed and piled as high as the dish will hold; cover it with a paste of flour and water and bake one hour in a moderate oven. If you have no veal gravy use water, adding a little more ham and dressing.

Delicious Apple Pudding.

Peel, core and cut in halves four or five apples and place them in bottom of baking dish. Then rub together a tablespoon of butter and two tablespoons of flour, and wet this mixture with about three-quarters of a cup of cold water, then add one cup of sugar, cinnamon and a little salt. Pour this over the apples and bake until tender. Serve with cream, and you have something good.

Divinity Candy.

One pint golden drip sirup, one pint of sweet milk, one cup of granulated sugar; butter the size of a walnut. Boil until a soft ball may be made. Remove from the fire and whip until it is creamy, then pour in over one-half pound of shelled California English walnuts.

Steamed Ham.

Soak in cold water for twelve hours after it has been well brushed with warm water and a stiff brush. Then steam over boiling water for at least twenty-five minutes to the pound, keeping the water at a fierce boil all the time. Skin when cold and dab with dots of black pepper.

To Freshen Old Bread.

The best way to freshen home-made bread so that it is as good as new is to dip the loaf in cold water, put it in a pan and bake it until it is heated through. Then wrap it in a damp cloth and when cold it is as good as when first baked.

Short Suggestions.

If fat catches fire throw salt on it at once to prevent a disagreeable smell.

A slice of onion in a dish of water if left in the room will kill the odor of paint.

A little sugar added to boiled starch will give a desirable gloss to the clothes when ironed.

It is said that the flavor of chicken is greatly improved by adding a pinch of white soda while it is cooking.

Do not peel rhubarb until the skin is tough. It will call for less sugar to sweeten it if a pinch of soda is added while it is being cooked.

Save sour milk in any quantity, large or small, for it is so useful for cakes. With sour milk use carbonate of soda instead of baking powder.

Examine the bread pan three times a week, in case crumbs left in should become moldy. These would speedily affect the whole contents of the pan.

The dish cloth should have more attention than is usually bestowed on it. Boiling in soda water once or twice a week will keep it perfectly sweet and clean.

One of the best known remedies for rash caused by sunburn or excessive perspiration, often irritating to the shoulders and back, is the application of hot milk.

Tomatoes should be skinned before using for salad. To do this easily, place the fruit in a basin and pour boiling water over. Drain at once and the skin will come off without any trouble.

When oilcloth is badly worn and you wish to paint it first fill the worn places with a mixture of ocher and paste. This fills up the cloth and when dry it makes a substantial foundation for paint.

The paraffin paper which comes around soap is excellent for waxing irons when the wax happens to give out. It should always be saved for this purpose. Spread out the paper to use it, and pass the iron over it to draw out the paraffin. It will be found to serve the purpose temporarily as well as the wax.

DON'TS BY THE BABY.

These Rules Should Be Strictly Followed by All Concerned.

All newly born babies who desire to have a copy of the following on a card to hang around their necks can obtain one free by applying to this office:

Don't handle me more than is necessary.

Don't put into my mouth, to stop me from crying, an old piece of rubber to suck. It is about the worst habit I can get into.

Don't let any relatives see me.

Don't take me up, strain me to your breast, walk the floor with me, dance before me like a wild Indian shaking a horrible rattle, or talk gibberish to me when I have a crying spell. There may be something serious the matter with me, but this isn't going to help.

When I push away my bottle, don't force me to feed. I know when it is necessary for me to eat anything.

Don't take me to the circus, prayer meeting, or to spend the day at the seashore. I'm not so old or so foolproof as you are.

Don't kiss me. Take some one of your own size.

Don't show your anxiety about me when in my presence. I haven't any too much confidence in myself.

Don't be too proud of my unnatural brightness. It may be a form of degeneracy.

Don't tell anybody that I am only a little animal. Let them guess it for themselves.

Don't take my temperature or send for the doctor on the slightest provocation.

Don't let the light strike into my eyes.

Don't rock me to sleep. Remember that the hand that rocks the cradle is ruled by the baby.—Lippincott's Magazine.

"What?"

"If a one-legged man wears trousers or just one trouser."—Kansas City Times.

Answer This Question

When a remedy has lived for over thirty years, steadily growing in popularity and influence, and thousands upon thousands of women declare they owe their very lives to it, is it not reasonable to believe that it is an article of great merit?

We challenge the world to show any other one remedy for a special class of disease which has attained such an enormous demand and maintained it for so many years as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, the famous woman's remedy for woman's ills. Unless it is a very good medicine and the claims made for it are honest, such a record would have been impossible—fraud or misrepresentations would long ago have been detected and the business gone into oblivion. Read this unsolicited letter:—

Melbourne, Iowa:—"I suffered for many years with female troubles, inflammation, and bearing-down pains, so that I was unable to do my work.

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was recommended, and I am so thankful for the great good it has done me. I feel that I am a living advertisement for this medicine as I have influenced so many of my friends to use it, so thankful am I that it restored me to health."—Mrs. Clara Watermann, R. D. 1, Melbourne, Iowa.

When a woman like Mrs. Watermann is generous enough to write such a letter as the above for publication, she should at least be given credit for a sincere desire to help other suffering women. For we assure you there is no other reason why she should court such publicity.

We say it in all sincerity and friendship—try this medicine.

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No sick woman does justice to herself who will not try this famous medicine. Made exclusively from roots and herbs, and has thousands of cures to its credit.

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health free of charge. Address Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass.

"Strictly Pure."

The United States is not alone in labeling its foods as "strictly pure." A writer in the Strand Magazine quotes the following from a bottle of "Tonatoe Sauce" purchased somewhere in the Straits Settlements:

TONATOE SAUCE.

The sauce are pur. The flavor are terrific. Hope not think imitation as good fine as us sauce. We havnt put nothing but nice tonatoe in sauce which give us such fine terrific flavour. Once taste will have more.

Better Not Get Dyspepsia

If you can help it. Kodol prevents Dyspepsia, by effectually helping Nature to Relieve Indigestion. But don't trifle with Indigestion.

A great many people who have trifled with indigestion, have been sorry for it—when nervous or chronic dyspepsia resulted, and they have not been able to cure it.

Use Kodol and prevent having Dyspepsia.

Everyone is subject to indigestion. Stomach derangement follows stomach abuse, just as naturally and just as surely as a sound and healthy stomach results upon the taking of Kodol.

When you experience sourness of stomach, belching of gas and nauseating fluid, bloated sensation, gnawing pain in the pit of the stomach, heart burn (so-called), diarrhoea, headaches, dullness or chronic tired feeling—you need Kodol. And then the quicker you take Kodol—the better. Eat what you want, let Kodol digest it.

Ordinary pepsin "dyspepsia tablets," physics, etc., are not likely to be of much benefit to you, in digestive ailments. Pepsin is only a partial digester—and physics are not digesters at all.

Kodol is a perfect digester. If you could see Kodol digesting every particle of food, of all kinds, in the glass test-tubes in our laboratories, you would know this just as well as we do.

Nature and Kodol will always cure a sick stomach—but in order to be cured, the stomach must rest. That is what Kodol does—rests the stomach, while the stomach gets well. Just as simple as A, B, C.

Our Guarantee

Go to your druggist today and get a dollar bottle. Then after you have used the entire contents of the bottle if you can honestly say, that it has not done you any good, return the bottle to the druggist and he will refund your money without question or delay. We will then pay the druggist for the bottle. Don't hesitate, all druggists know that our guarantee is good. This offer applies to the large bottle only and to but one in a family. The large bottle contains 2½ times as much as the fifty cent bottle.

Kodol is prepared at the laboratories of E. C. DeWitt & Co., Chicago.

FREE TO YOU—MY SISTER

Free to You and Every Sister Suffering From Woman's Ailments.

I am a woman.
I know woman's sufferings.
I have found the cure.

I will mail, free of any charge, my home treatment with full instructions to any sufferer from women's ailments. I want to tell all women about this cure—you, my reader, for yourself, your daughter, your mother, or your sister. I want to tell you how to cure yourselves at home without the help of a doctor. Men cannot understand women's sufferings. What we women know from experience, we know better than any doctor. I know that my home treatment is a safe and sure cure for Leucorrhoea or Whitish discharges, Ulceration, Displacement or Falling of the Womb, Profuse, Scanty or Painful Periods, Uterine or Ovarian Tumors or Growths; also pains in the head, back and bowels, bearing down feelings, nervousness, creeping feeling up the spine, melancholy, desire to cry, hot flashes, weariness, kidney and bladder troubles where caused by weaknesses peculiar to our sex.

I want to send you a complete ten days' treatment entirely free to prove to you that you can cure yourself at home, easily, quickly and surely. Remember, that it will cost you nothing to give the treatment a complete trial; and if you should wish to continue, it will cost you only about 12 cents a week, or less than two cents a day. It will not interfere with your work or occupation. Just send me your name and address, tell me how you suffer if you wish, and I will send you the treatment for your case, entirely free, in plain wrapper, by return mail. I will also send you free of cost, my book—"WOMAN'S OWN MEDICAL ADVISER" with explanatory illustrations showing why women suffer, and how they can easily cure themselves at home. Every woman should have it, and learn to think for herself. Then when the doctor says—"You must have an operation," you can decide for yourself. Thousands of women have cured themselves with my home remedy. It cures all, old or young. To Mothers of Daughters, I will explain a simple home treatment which speedily and effectually cures Leucorrhoea, Green Sickness and Painful or Irregular Menstruation in Young Ladies. Plumpness and health always result from its use.

Wherever you live, I can refer you to ladies of your own locality who know and will gladly tell any sufferer that this Home Treatment really cures all women's diseases, and makes women strong, plump and robust. Just send me your address, and the free ten days' treatment is yours, also the book. Write today, as you may not see this offer again. Address

HIGH SCHOOL

Graduating Class Gave a Fine Program at Their Commencement

The excellent program given in Thompson's opera house last Friday night upon the occasion of the Butler high school commencement, was evidence of careful training and strict attention to school work during the past year by the nine graduates who made such a splendid appearance upon the stage and gave such a good account of themselves. The entire program was a delightful treat to the large audience that filled the opera house. Mrs. Stage's orchestra furnished several numbers in the usual artistic manner.

The stage setting was very tastefully arranged, the furniture being from the Brindley store, Mr. Brindley kindly loaning the necessary pieces for the occasion. The class colors were in evidence as decorations.

Each graduate did their part well, and the audience was greatly pleased with the exceptionally good showing made. The program was as follows:

THE ALUMNI BANQUET

As a fitting climax to the successful work of the past school year the alumni banquet was given Saturday evening in the Butler school building. The sumptous repast of three courses was served by Clyde Oberlin. It was a feast indeed of the choicest viands, served in splendid style. Attorney E. B. Dunten acted as toastmaster, and as usual, brought out many bright and witty remarks. The attendance was large, quite a number from abroad being present. The occasion was one that will long be remembered and was thoroughly enjoyed by all.

CLASS HISTORY

Four eventful years ago the class began its career in the old well remembered Mason building on Broadway. We had run the gauntlet of the grades and come out alive. And now that that ordeal was over prided ourselves on being Freshies. The structure was not a very attractive school building. The assembly room was very dark, and for that reason we all got good deportment grades. While in the building we were initiated into the mysteries of Algebra, Ancient History, English and German, even if we did have to march to the old shoe department for recitation. There was one class, however, that was looked forward to with mingled feelings of fear and trembling, yet at the same time pleasure. That was German at the third hour. Then like dutiful children we marched up the back stairway in a long line, while the teacher waited at the foot no doubt to see that we arrived safely through the throng of awe inspiring Juniors and Seniors who evidently thought we were great curiosities and took extreme delight in tormenting us. As yet we did not feel as big as the other classes, but nevertheless we were proud to be called Freshies. During the year we had a "German Contest." The class was divided—twelve on each side—the side that missed the most words during the month was to give a Dutch supper for the entire class including the faculty. The time arrived, the lunch was prepared, consisting of most everything the German enjoy eating. The evening was one long remembered during our course.

In January the new building was completed, and all joyously on Monday morning Mr. Baker ushered each and every one of us to our respective seats. During the year we chose "pink and cream" for our class colors, but as we have improved with age we changed them. Athletics were the prominent feature of the year. For morning exercises we sang football songs, inspiring all our young hearts for athletics. A girls basket ball team was also organized.

By the time we had entered the Sophomore year we had all become used to the recitation rooms. Yet some still looked with awe and admiration at the daring of those privileged Seniors who would manage to sit with impunity on those stairs. For if we attempted it either Mr. Austin or Mr. Bean was sure to see us and give us a prodigious "calling down" or an admit to the matinee held every evening after school in the study room, or perhaps of enriching our store knowledge with a German vocabulary. We showed how spirited we were, for by this time other Freshies had taken the place we had left, so it was our turn to torment. Accordingly one black and cloudy night when opportunity offered, the Freshmen flag was lowered and not returned to them. The Sophomores were blamed, but of course we didn't confess, but we wouldn't whether we had really done it or not. We were now conquerors.

In the following September we took our seats as Juniors. During this year no literary societies were formed in the school. Programs were given every Friday morning, and there seemed be a race of which society could give the best programs. Then we held congress meetings with Mr. Bean acting as president. In March a joint debate was held with Auburn, one of the debaters was a Junior and did the class honor in helping to win the debate for Butler. In the same spring a "track meet" was held for the school, all of the classes we represented. Harold, Vern and John won several points for the Juniors, thus making the Juniors second, Seniors first.

The following fall found ten seated in the places previously occupied by Seniors. Now our struggles became more and more difficult. One out of the ten dropped out, leaving the nine for completion. We have all worked our best during the entire year. We organized with Harold as president, Vern vice-president, Ethel secretary and Rosalie editor. With these officers things went very smoothly until the time came for the choosing of a motto. We were given two weeks vacation the holidays, and during this time we got our book reports out of the way. After vacation came the semester examinations, but before we were fairly through the school was closed for three days on account of scarlet fever, giving us another short vacation. When we returned we realized that we would have no more vacations while we were members in the B. H. S. Next came the study of electricity, when we received such dreadful grades that made us wonder whether we would receive the much coveted diplomas. But with our careful study and patience on the part of the teachers we have succeeded. We held many important meetings during the year deciding all business connected with a Senior's life. We were entertained very pleasantly by the Juniors, April 28.

Now we have reached the crisis, and we feel glad of our success, yet sad at our separation. The "Naughty Nine" has had close fellowship throughout the whole high school course.

Together we have begun the grand march determined to persevere till the end. Some have fallen by the wayside or departed from our ranks to join some other institution, some have gotten out of step and not been able to keep pace, but the nine of '09 will carry with us forever the memory of those four years of struggle and fellowship in the "Butler High School."

BY OLLIE MISER.

INVOCATION TO ATHENE

SENIOR CLASS POEM, 1909
BY JOHN C. BLAKER

In the olden Roman legend,
And in ancient Grecian tongue;
We find the tale of Athene,
Who, full armed, from Zeus' brain sprung.

Athene, the goddess of Wisdom,
Wisdom ne'er disclosed to man,
Upon Ignorance she frowneth,
And hath placed an awful ban.

In the seeking of thy wisdom
Have many lives been spent,
By those, who, without wisdom,
Would never rest content.

The class before thee, Goddess,
Hath sought thee, year after year,
Though some classmates have left us
In trouble, some in cheer.

We began to seek thy wisdom
In ignorance of thy name;
And since so patiently we've toiled,
We all would thine aid claim.

So help us all, Athene,
Each one of the Naughty Nine;
The first, a maiden, before thee,
In a musical field would shine.

So consult with thy sister Muses,
And give her additional power,
And send down thy musical wisdom
To charm us, hour on hour.

And let no discord strike her,
Let all be harmony fine,
And let her name bring honor
On the class of Naughty Nine.

And here's a youth before thee,
Who would wish a silv'ry tongue
To make him noted in his work,
Let his name through the land be rung.

In his study of the statutes,
If in office or in college,
Help him, Goddess, with thy wisdom,
Give him of thine untold knowledge.

Let him always be successful,
No matter what his line,
And let his name bring honor,
On the class of Naughty Nine.

A maiden here with light hair,
Another, with hair dark brown,
Also desire thy wisest aid,
Upon them do not frown.

They would of thy store of wisdom,
What seems the very heart,
The power that they to others,
Thy Wisdom may impart.

Then give them help in teaching,
Let their careers be bright,
And make it to them a pleasure,
To others to show the light.

Let their methods and proceedings,
Be always of the best;
And let them sit beside thee,
In their periods of rest.

Let them follow in thy footsteps,
'Till they meet thee, goddess divine,
And let their names bring honor,
On the class of Naughty Nine.

Another maid of thy wisdom,
Doth wish a plenteous yield,
Not in music or in teaching,
But in a business field.

Of mathematical wisdom,
And of the figures lore,
Give her of thine own, Athene,
For thou hast exhaustless store.

She would be in the great field
Of commerce and of trade,
Recording all transactions,
By busy merchants made.

Then let her labors prosper,
Nor let her sad repine,
But let her work bring honor,
On the class of Naughty Nine.

A youth before thee, Goddess,
For thine wisdom doth reach,
He also desires thine aid
When he begins to teach.

He taketh not his lifework up
At once, but this alone
Leads onward to a broader field,
Used as a stepping-stone.

The stepping stones in life reach out
To desires of the heart,
But ah, sometimes it seems,
They are far, too far, apart.

Then guard thy followers, Goddess,
That they may step aright,
And not by using wrong paths,
Be placed in awkward plight.

But when someone is so placed,
Then send him light aglow,
Let all experience teach him,
The safer way to go.

This youth howe'er desireth
That thou wouldst help him on,
For if wisdom doth desert him,
Each cherished hope is gone.

Then aid him onward, upward,
Urge him on if he recline,
And help him to bring honor,
To the class of Naughty Nine.

Another maiden wisheth help
In all she does in life,
Thy wisdom aid and guide her,
Through the darker vales of life.

Help her as thou helpest all
Thy followers, through the world,
Under foreign skies are many,
Who thy banner have unfurled.

Those who follow thee, oh Goddess,
Will surely reap reward,
Long before they lie, forgotten,
Under the rich green sward.

Then aid this maiden onward,
Let her as the diamonds shine,
And let her name bring honor
On the class of Naughty Nine.

Another of this class, a youth,
would also ask thine aid,
Then help him all through this life,
E'er his game of life is played.

Help him mid storm and sunshine,
Mid May and December hours,
In the darkest spots and lightest,
Mid storm and blooming flowers.

In the light of thine own wisdom,
Let him sparkle as new wine,
And let his name do honor,
On the class of Naughty Nine.

We will all give aid to wisdom,
Just as we ask aid of thine,
So help thou ev'ry member,
Of the class of Naughty Nine.

Let us pause and reconsider,
Oh, Athene, what art thou?
Art thou some impalpible presence,
That hoverest o'er us now?
Ah, no, thou art the power
That makes ignorance cow.

Is it not just knowledge, wisdom,
That is monarch over all?
That dominates each one of us,
Here on this earthly ball?
Until unto a brighter place,
We've heard a hidden call?

Have we not sought for wisdom,
Mid trouble and mid cheer?
And will not now that wisdom,
Help us on, year after year?
If we but play our parts well,
Here on this passing sphere?

Will what we've learned not help us,
And ne'er fail or decline,
Will it not help each one of us,
No matter what our line,
And thus bring honor and glory,
On the class of Naughty Nine.

So here's hoping that each comrade,
In the dear old B. H. S.,
Will find the golden letters,
To spell one word—SUCCESS.

VALEDICTORY ADDRESS

B. H. S CLASS, '09

It is not only with feelings of joy, but also with feelings of sorrow, that I deliver this address this evening; joy because I am a member of this class and have been successful in finishing my high school course; but sorrow, because this address is the last that binds this class together as a class of the Butler High School, which has been our home for the past four years. Each one of us, always possessing a mutual interest in the other, rejoices when one of our number has been successful, and sorrows when one has failed.

But, this evening, these ties are severed forever, and we, as a class, will be scattered abroad, some possibly taking up college work, and some taking upon themselves the grave responsibilities of moulding their future in the business life of this Twentieth Century.

Class of '09: We have now reached the goal that we have all been striving for during the last four years. At times the road has seemed hard and the way dreary, and many of our number, who started with us, have been lost by the wayside But I am proud, and I know that each member of this class is proud that he or she still belongs to this class this evening Then there comes the question: What is our reward? Is it the mere receiving of this piece of paper this evening, certifying that we have proven so many propositions in geometry; that we have had so many experiments in physics; that we have studied so many authors? No! It signifies that we are now prepared to enter into the strife for a goal in the future, one far more important and one that will take us more than four years to reach. This goal that I am picturing in the misty future is the goal of "Success". The road to this is one that is not laid out before us by our instructors and our parents, as has been our course through high school But, on the other hand, each of us must map out a road for himself or herself, and this road becomes smooth only by our constant treading upon it. This then is the goal of our preparatory work in high school which we have just completed

It has been said that the ideal man is, "a man seven stories high," and he is the only man who is really abreast with the present "sky scraper age!" And I would that every member of this class could be known some day, as a seven story man or woman.

Our foundation must be one of faith. First, faith in God; second, faith in ourselves, and third, faith in our fellowmen. Without this firm foundation it would be as absurd to try to build a large, seven-story, stone building on a foundation of sand. It might stand for a while, but, when the storms and the tempests come the building will fall. And that is the way with ourselves. We may be successful for a while, and considered by those around us men and women of high and noble character, but when the temptations and trying points of our lives come, they are going to test whether our character has been founded upon the solid rock of faith or upon the sands of luck and chance.

Then having a good firm foundation, let knowledge be the second story. The old expression, "Know thyself," has never been replaced by a better one. But that is not all, we must also know men and God to be successful. Many men have had very strong faith, but yet have failed because of the lack of knowledge.

This second story of our character is the story that we have been working upon. The receiving of these diplomas this evening does not mean that we have finished this second story of our character. It only shows that we have the frame work whereupon we can build, as "every man is the architect of his own character," or in words we have received the instrument with which we can obtain knowledge. "For him that seeketh knowledge will find its counsel sure."

Then upon knowledge we must add "temperance" as the third story. Ruskin said: "That no immortal work has been done in the world since tobacco was discovered" Of course this is not true, but the deeper thought in it is true, that no man can do his best when his system is filled with intoxicants and narcotics. Guthrie says: "I have four good reasons for being an abstainer—my head is clearer, my health is better, my heart is lighter, and my purse is heavier." We should always be on our guard against these bad habits. "A bad habit has a velvet foot. It steals upon one softly, unaware. First it charms, next masters, and then destroys." "For the best is yet to be, the last of life for which the first is made."

Godliness must be the fifth, for without God we can do little, but with him we can accomplish great things. "If we have God in all things while they are ours, we shall have all things in God when they are taken away."

Brotherly kindness is the sixth. Without this we would have a selfish nation. "We are members of one great body, planted by nature in a mutual love, and fitted for social life. We must consider that we were born for the good of the whole"

For the seventh and surmounting story of this superstructure we must have what Henry Dummond said was the greatest thing in the world—love. "Love is an image of God, and not a lifeless image, but the living essence of the divine nature which beams full of all goodness"

And a man possessing all of these qualities is rightfully called a man "seven stories high" or a man among men.

Again let each one of us in moulding our future have an aim in life, and let that aim be high. "Providence has nothing good or high in store for one who does not resolutely aim at something good or high. A purpose is the eternal condition of success." We may fail at times but we must not let that discourage us. Only use our mistakes as stepping stone which will enable us to rise higher. A man who has failed ten times and has succeeded once has achieved more than the man who has never failed, but only because he always feared that he would fail and therefore never tried to achieve anything, "for fear is the graveyard of prosperity" "The measurement of merit today is achievement," and not the mere statement that a man has never failed. Each one of us is going to make mistakes sometime or another in our life, but we must not let that discourage us.

The American character is best portrayed in George Washington. But even he was fiercely assailed. God never gave the world a character so noble but that some tried to blacken it. His enemies said his religion was hypocrisy, his immovable determination a fixed selfishness, his patriotism a sham Some said that those whom he appointed to office were "a corrupt squadron" This slander was so strong that even he declared to his friends, "I would rather be in my grave than endure this longer"

But this did not discourage him He went right on doing what he thought was right and for the good of his country. And "If a man who dies in the excitement of battle, fighting for his country, is a hero, what is he who lives misjudged, often discouraged and low of heart, but fighting always inch by inch, never giving up, setting his back against the wall and his face to the foe—fighting to the last breath to defend the honor, the greatness of his country? What is he?"

And now fellow-students as I bid you the last farewell, let this glorious spirit of the Father of His country be the spirit of each one of us as we leave this building tonight. "Let us move forward with high purpose, knowing that obstacles are but opportunities to prove our worthiness"

And my highest hope this evening is, that each one of us, as he or she nears the close of life can look back upon that life with a joyful face and enumerate the good and noble deeds that have been accomplished, as we, this evening, look back upon our high school course feeling that we have not utterly failed.

The First of the Season Will Be Given Saturday Evening, May 22. A Splendid Program Has Been Arranged. Concert Begins at 8:30. Don't Fail to Come to Butler and Enjoy the Music.

EIGHTH GRADE GRADUATES

Do Great Honor to Themselves and Their Instructor

Clarence Murch, instructor of the eighth grade of the Butler school, had much credit reflected upon himself last Thursday night on the occasion of the graduation of the class of thirteen girls and boys who acquitted themselves in a very creditable manner. In fact the program was exceptionally well rendered, each graduate doing their part in a way that showed that their instructor had been thorough and painstaking in his work during the past school year.

The program was rendered in the Christian church, that edifice being crowded to its full capacity with the parents and friends of those who gave the evening's exercises.

There was not a break or a misstep in the long program, and the large audience gave close attention to each number and voiced their approval in hearty applause.

In presenting the diplomas Prof. Bean gave expression to many logical thoughts and gave some very sensible and useful advice to the young ones who will enter the high school next year. His remarks were timely and to the point. He reminded the superstitious people that the class numbered thirteen, the date of the commencement was the thirteenth, and if those who were just entering upon a broader life were to graduate from the high school the date would be 1913, a striking coincidence indeed.

The graduates were dressed in a very tasteful and becoming manner, and their bright, happy faces expressed the joy and gratitude they felt upon this auspicious occasion.

The church was prettily decorated with the class colors, Copenhagen blue and cream, and the class flowers, white and pink roses, were much in evidence, adding greatly to the splendid effect.

The class motto, "Only a Beginning," is appropriate, and each one should exert his or her best efforts to to push forward toward that higher goal that is gained only by close application and hard study.

The program rendered was as follows:

Instrumental Duet....."Flower Song"
Leighton Tombow.
Wallace Knepper.
Invocation.....Rev. Braden
Salutatory......"Indiana"
Besse Oberlin.
Vocal Solo....."The Mountain King"

The Noonday of Life

Married people should learn what to do for one another's little ills, and for the ills of children that may come. They are sure sooner or later to have occasion to treat constipation or indigestion. When the opportunity comes remember that the quickest way to obtain relief, and finally a permanent cure, is with Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, the great herb laxative compound. A bottle should always be in the house. It is absolutely guaranteed to do what is claimed, and if you want to try it before buying, send your address for a free sample bottle to Pepsin Syrup Co., 119 Caldwell Bldg., Monticello, Ill. It is sold by all druggists at 50c and $1 a bottle. 18-1m

THE GRAVEL PIT MANAGEMENT

Wishing the public to know about the present management at the gravel pit owned jointly by Stafford and Wilmington townships and located near the cemetery, east of Butler, a taxpayer and subscriber of the DeKalb County Herald wishes the following information published:

The management of the said gravel pit is in the hands of the two township trustees, and lately they made an arrangement by which the supervisors who get gravel from the pit are to receive $1 50 per day for the time each spends in superintending the hauling of gravel therefrom. This pay of $1 50 per day is not to apply as pay for services as supervisor, but is special pay for the above work. Each supervisor is to have the use of the pit a week at a time, beginning after corn planting and continuing till harvest. After harvest the same plan is to be continued till Dec. 1, 1909, the time when by law road work is to end for the year. No gravel is being sold from the pit now, as formerly, and no one has a right to get gravel at the pit except by order of a supervisor, and no one as heretofore is at the pit all the time to keep account of the gravel taken therefrom and to see that none is stolen or not properly accounted for, as the supervisors are the only persons who can get gravel at the pit should they not be paid for said work as a part of their time as supervisors. By the law a supervisor can put in, if necessary, sixty days each year and get $2 per day for his time. By the present plan each supervisor can put in sixty days as supervisor and in addition thereto get $1 50 per day for all the time he spends while getting gravel from the pit, and by the plan adopted this expense may amount to a large sum for the public to pay. After proper consideration with the above information we think the public will conclude that the plan adopted recently is a mistake. Formerly a man was kept at the pit to keep an account of the gravel taken away. He had to be paid, but whether the former or present method will be best for the public remains to be seen. Another objection against the present plan is that there is no law by which supervisors can be paid for such extra work and that if objections are made they may not be able to get pay for the said services. At the end of each year the townships should settle and without correct accounts no correct settlement can be made. If our trustees had planned so that each supervisor should superintend the gravel pit when getting gravel therefrom. Keep a correct account of all gravel taken away by his men, and that the time so spent should be a part of the sixty days provided for by law at $2 per day their plan would have been good and I I think satisfactory to the public. If not too late a change can be made yet and possibly prevent trouble in the future.

The writer does not wish to be considered a "kicker," but does desire to use his influence for the public's good, and wishes in this way to call attention to the above matter, hoping it will be properly received and do some good.

Prolonging Life

While no way has yet been found to make life perpetual it is a fact that life can be prolonged. Many people die before their time because the organs become clogged and cannot do their work To keep the body open, active and free from impurities there must be no constipation, dyspepsia, flatulency, liver troubles, etc. If old or young people suffer from these complaints they can find a ready cure with Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It is absolutely guaranteed to do what is claimed, and if you want to try it before buying, send your address for a free sample bottle to Pepsin Syrup Co., 119 Caldwell Bldg., Monticello, Ill. It is sold by all druggists at 50c and $1 a bottle. 18-1m

AN UNNECESSARY EXPENDITURE

At a recent session of the county council an appropriation of $800 was made to pay for the building of a wash house at the county infirmary. Under the large new infirmary there is a large basement that can not be used for a cellar on account of it being made too hot by the pipes of the furnace. This basement or a part of it would make a fine wash house. Why not use it? Across the road stands the old infirmary with its fixtures In these buildings there is plenty of space for a wash house. The only reason advanced for the need of a new wash house is the necessity of keeping "an eye" on the inmates, male and female, so that they do not intermix improperly. Can not the inmates of our poor house be watched as well in the basement or in a part of the old buildings just across the road as in a new building? They surely can. This being true a new wash house is not needed, and if the $800 appropriated is spent for one the money will be practically wasted. It is also intimated that as a mistake was made in placing the pipes of the heating apparatus, an up-ground cellar may have to be built too before long. There is a fine large cellar in the old infirmary. Why not use it for cellar purposes instead of using a lot more money and spoiling the general appearance of our new poor house and its surroundings by placing a lot of small buildings near by. The author of this article has been familiar with the old infirmary and its fixtures for years and recently visited the new building and knows what he is talking about. He also suggests that the county commissioners would do well to reconsider the building of a new wash house. Heed the ideas herein stated and thus save some of our public money for other and more needed purposes.

Respectfully submitted by an INTERESTED CITIZEN.

DEDICATION OF SOLDIERS' CANNON MONUMENT MAY 30

The erection of the soldiers' cannon monument, which will adorn the court house square at Auburn, is now being completed. The solid cement foundation is four feet high and eleven feet in dimensions. Above this will be the second base two feet high and eight by nine feet in dimensions. Then will come a section six feet high, six by eight feet at the bottom and tapering to the top, which will be four by five feet. On top of this the cannon will be placed. It will point to the southwest. Underneath the cannon's mouth will be a bronze tablet with the inscription, "Dedicated to the Memory of DeKalb County's Soldiers" There will also be given the date of dedication, the number of soldiers this county furnished in the Civil war, 1,313, and the number in the Spanish-American war, 230. It is the intention to enclose the monument with an iron fence a few feet high and flower beds are to be placed around it. The dedication will occur Sunday, May 30, and will be the feature of the Decoration day exercises in Auburn. Former Congressman C. C. Gilhams, of LaGrange, will be the principal speaker.

Don't miss this the greatest opportunity of the season to buy shirt waists.

The Taft Family and the Judiciary

It is not the first time in my family that a judicial decision has played an important part in the political fortunes of the judge deciding it. While my father was a judge of the superior court of Cincinnati, the question arose whether the school board of the city had the power by resolution to change the rule under which schools were opened in the morning by the reading of the King James version of the Bible. Two of the judges of the superior court held that this was beyond the power of the school board, while my father, the third judge, dissented. The case proceeded to the supreme court, and that court, in a unanimous judgment, approved the views of my father as a dissenting judge in the court below. Notwithstanding this result, in three gubernatorial campaigns my father was defeated in republican conventions on the ground of his decision in the Bible case, but it never fell to his lot to be nominated as a party candidate and to find it necessary to go upon the stump to explain or defend his decisions I think I may say that my experience in this respect has been truly exceptional.—(President Taft in the June McClure's.)

Babe Victim of Gasoline.

Mabel Williams, three years old, daughter of A. F. Williams, of Columbus, Ohio, was fatally burned in a fire which destroyed the family home, following a gasoline explosion. The child's father tsarted to light the stove when the gasoline let go. He was successful in rescuing five children, his wife and mother, but when he rushed up stairs to get Mabel, he found the bed in flames. The child was carried down stairs a moment before the floor fell down and hurried in an automobile to a hospital where she died within a few minutes. Both the child's parents were badly burned.

Boy Loses Life at a "Belling."

Shelby Patridge, 18 years old, lost his life as a result of a gunshot wound inflicted in the course of a charvari—a "belling" in local vernacular—in the country near North Manchester, Ind. Two newly married couples were being belled. A shotgun was accidentally discharged and one of Patridge's legs was torn off. His companions were denied entrance to the house and to a telephone, their story that Patridge was injured being disbelieved as a joke, and when a doctor at length was reached he could not save Patridge.

Lake Craft in Collision.

Two and perhaps three lives were lost in a collision between the steamer Western States, of the Detroit and Buffalo Navigation company, and the tug Princeton in the harbor off the United States life-saving station at Buffalo, N. Y. The drowned were: William McClure, fireman; Raymond Norby, fireman. Frank Trauffer, engineer, is missing. Captain James Sullivan, of the Princeton, escaped by swimming to the life-saving dock.

Four Perish in Oklahoma Flood.

At least four lives have been lost and thousands of dollars damage has been done to railway and farm property by a flood that prevails in the northeastern part of Oklahoma, the result of four days' continuous fall of rain, which in places culminated in a cloudburst. The known dead are Mrs. W. W. Brown and her three little children, who were carried down stream with their farm house from near Foraker.

Convict Conquered by Hunger.

Harvey Johnson, the negro burglar serving a life sentence in the Ohio penitentiary, who disappeared one day last week and who had been hiding is now in solitary confinement awaiting trial in the prison court for his attempted escape, Johnson's hunger is responsible for his surrender, which occurred after he had been treed on the stop of the washhouse in the prison yard.

Revolver Fell; Bystander Shot.

As Humphrey O'Neil, of Worthville, Ky., was passing through the gates at the union station in Chicago, Ill., about to board a train for home, a revolver dropped from his pocket and was discharged. The bullet lodged in the neck of Frank Frame, of Chicago. O'Neill and R. S. Baldwin, who was with him, were arrested. Frame is in a serious condition.

Child Played With Matches; Is Dying.

As the result of playing with matches James Sweeney, four-year-old son of Patrick Sweeney, of Terre Haute, Ind., lies at St. Anthony's hospital fatally burned. Where the little lad obtained the matches is not known, but when discovered he was enveloped in flames.

Every Bone Broken.

While Roscoe Holderman, was driving home from a party in Goshen, Ind., a Wabash freight train struck the buggy, killing him instantly. Every bone in his body was broken.

Killed Great Gray Eagle.

Charles Loos killed a gray eagle near Madison, Ind., measuring seven feet from tip to tip of its wings.

Same Old Story.

A duel between Joseph and Monk Bray, brothers and prosperous farmers residing near Pensacola, Fla., occurred in which Monk Bray met death. They quarreled over the dividing line of some land.

Stork Brought Five.

The wife of Fay Irish, of Thorp, Clack county, Wis., has given birth to five babies, three daughters and two sons. All are alive and well.

Hole Is Torn in Breast.

Word was received at Madison, Ind., of the accidental death of Miss Mabel Delay, near New Marion. A child knocked down a shotgun, which was discharged, the whole load entering her body and tearing a large hole in her breast.

Crushes Baby's Skull.

Ruth Lamb, 15, while at the home of her aunt, Mrs. John Patridge, of Wellson, Ohio, having her one-year-old brother in her arms, stumbled and fell, crushing the skull of the child in two places. The child cannot live.

H. H. ROGERS IS DEAD; VICTIM OF APOPLEXY

Standard Oil Magnate Suddenly Stricken While at His New York Home.

NEWS SHOCKS WALL STREET

Romantic Career of Man Who Rose from Poverty to Vast Wealth—His Genius as Organizer.

Henry H. Rogers, the Standard Oil magnate, died at his home in New York City Wednesday of apoplexy. He arose as usual, but began to feel ill, complaining of numbness and nausea. Before anything could be done he died. The news of his death came as a surprise and shock to Wall street. This was the second illness of this nature suffered by Mr. Rogers, the first having occurred in July, 1907. His health had been failing for several years, and he had curtailed his financial operations to some extent, but he continued to perform the duties of vice president of the Standard Oil Company.

Mr. Rogers was for many years one of the most prominent financiers of the country. He took a leading part in all of the enterprises undertaken by the Standard Oil group of capitalists, was vice president of the Standard Oil Company, and was the active spirit in the organization of the Amalgamated Copper Company, of which he was president up to the time of his death. He also was interested in a number of railroads.

Henry H. Rogers was a man of mystery. So silent, so secretive was he that not even the date of his birth was a matter of record or knowledge. As nearly as can be determined, this colossus of modern finance was born in 1840. Fairhaven, Mass., was his birthplace. The story of his life is one of those romances of modern finance in which present-day America is so rich. He rose from newsboy to head of the wealthiest corporation in the world and master of a personal fortune of perhaps $125,000,000 in fifty years.

When he was still in his twenties the story of the oil that was spouting from the earth in Pennsylvania reached his ears, and he determined to go to the oil fields. This was in the HENRY H. ROGERS.

'60s, when the oil business was new. Methods were crude and wasteful, and the first principles of economic refinement and handling of the product were just being worked out. He started at the bottom and learned the business from the ground up. Then he met three men who were to become his lifelong associates—John D. and William Rockefeller and Henry M. Flagler, and later, John D. Archbold. These men evolved an audacious scheme to concentrate the business of the refinement and transportation of oil into one colossal firm and corner the market. The credit—or discredit—for this idea is popularly given to John D. Rockefeller, but financiers who claim to know have stated repeatedly that the idea really was Rogers' and that he was the driving power behind the new Standard Oil Company from the first.

ST. PAUL GIRL ACCUSED.

Louise Arbogast Formally Charged with Murder of Father.

Louise Arbogast, aged 22, who is said by the police to have been the victim of a delusion incited by fortune tellers that a man was pursuing her, was formally arraigned in police court in St. Paul, Minn., on a charge of having slain her father, Louis Arbogast, a wealthy meat dealer. He was found dead in bed last Thursday morning with his head crushed. The girl denies the crime. It is expected that insanity will be the defense made.

CHICAGO "L" WRECK HURTS 23.

Man Running Express Held Guilty of Carlessness by Road President.

Following a collision of two Northwestern elevated trains in Chicago Tuesday morning, in which twenty-three passengers were injured, rigid investigation to learn the cause of the wreck was begun by city officials. The collision, which occurred at North Franklin and Ohio streets, was attributed by President Mason B. Starring to "gross carelessness" on the part of A. Winterberger, the motorman in charge of a Wilson avenue express train, which, on a straight track, ran into the rear end of a Ravenswood local. Both trains were city bound.

The motorman's explanation that the brake refused to work was disputed by Mr. Starring and by Millard B. Hereley, city traction expert. The latter declared the car was inspected less than ten days ago and found to be in perfect condition. Both trains were jammed to the doors with pasengers on their way to work in the loop district. Among those most seriously injured was William C. Schroeder, cashier of the Continental National Bank, who suffered fractures of both legs and cuts about the head and body. In addition to those injured many passengers on both trains were shaken up and the women became panic-stricken. Firemen rescued many persons bewildered and imperiled by the third rail by carrying them down ladders to the ground.

The accident occurred shortly before 8:30 o'clock. The rear vestibule of the last car of the Ravenswood train was partly demolished and the front of the motor car of the express train was wrecked. President Starring and other officials of the road supervised the work of rescue and the clearing away of the wreckage.

POLITICS and POLITICIANS

Judge Milton D. Purdy has resigned from the United States District Court bench.

J. Adam Bede is expected to make a fight to recover his seat in Congress from the Eight Minnesota district.

To the amazement of West Virginia liquor interests, the city council of Charleston voted 22 to 7, to make the city dry.

An authoritative definition of the attitude of the Taft administration toward economic problems was given to the officers of many banks in New York by Secretary of the Treasury MacVeagh during a dinner in his honor at the Union League. He said that a new study was to become a part of the government, the study of economic, intelligent and systematic expenditures and revenues in their natural relations.

That the census office has in its employ in one bureau the wife of the secretary of a representative in Congress, the wives of two officials of the War Department and the wife of a prominent official in the Treasury Department was the charge made by Senator McCumber in criticising the conference report on the census bill. The North Dakota Senator said Washington was getting to be a city of official families, the younger members of which had never seen the States to which they were credited.

Sam H. Nicholas, secretary of state, in Washington, has resigned owing to scandals connected with his office. Insurance Commissioner Schively will probably be compelled to take the same course. Former Governor A. E. Mead is a candidate for Nichols' place.

Colorado has a new law which provides that the State shall contribute for campaign expenses every two years 25 cents for each vote cast at the preceding general election, the sum to be divided among political parties according to the vote cast for their candidates for Governor.

HIDES IN PENITENTIARY.

Negro Crawls Beneath the Floor and Eludes Ohio Prison Guards.

Within the walls of the penitentiary in Columbus, Ohio, Harvey Johnson, a life prisoner, who was received a few days ago from Franklin County, is hiding. Since Wednesday the penitentiary officers and guards have been searching for him. Twice during the night he was seen. One of the wall guards said he saw him stick his head out of a bolt-shop window and he fired. The bullet afterward was found, imbedded near the window. Capt. Krouse of the guardroom also saw the little prisoner, who is a negro, but was unable to capture him on account of the darkness. A double guard was on duty all night and Warden Jones slept only a few hours. The entire floor in bolt shop No. 6, where the colored man worked, was ripped up, and it was found that Johnson had crawled beneath the floor. His working clothes were found there and also a crude, improvised ladder. Warden Jones has ordered the guards to shoot to kill if Johnson does not voluntarily give up. The police department has been notified.

MORRIS TO BUILD BIG PLANT.

Will Invest Millions in Oklahoma City Packing House.

Involving an investment between $3,000,000 and $5,000,000, a deal was closed in Oklahoma City the other night by the Chamber of Commerce with representatives of Morris & Co., Chicago, for the erection of a packing plant there. The plant will have a capacity of 1,000 cattle, 2,500 hogs and 1,500 sheep per day and between 1,600 and 1,700 men will be employed. Representatives of the company say preliminary arrangements for the construction of the plant will begin at once. With such a plant there the live stock industry of the State will be changed materially, as now all cattle slaughtered go to Kansas City and hogs to Fort Worth, Tex.

DOG RESCUES TWO PREACHERS.

Saves John Wanamaker's Pastor and Brother from Drowning.

Rev. Asay Ferry, pastor of Bethany Presbyterian Church, Philadelphia, which John Wanamaker attends, and his brother, Rev. Ebenezer Ferry, pastor of the Morrisville, Pa., Presbyterian Church, were saved from drowning by a shepherd dog. The brothers canoe upset in the Delaware River. They could make no progress and both were rapidly becoming exhausted when the dog plunged in and swam out to them. The dog seized his master's collar in his teeth and dragged him to shallow water. The big shepherd went back after the Philadelphia minister and soon pulled him to shore.

Supposed Kidnaped Boy Drowned.

The body of John Altmeyer, 6 years of age, who was thought to have been kidnaped, was found in the river at Newark, N. J. It developed that John, accompanied by several other boys, went swimming Friday, and it is thought he was "ducked" and accidentally drowned. The other boys will be questioned.

Woman Is "Jim Crow" Victim.

Gussie Morgan, a negress, was convicted in the Circuit Court in Little Rock of violating the Arkansas separate coach (Jim Crow) law. It was shown she insisted on riding in the part of a street car reserved for white passengers. This was the first conviction of the kind in Little Rock courts.

Killed in Presence of Family.

In the presence of his wife and young son, George Zell, a resident of Williamstown, N. J., was instantly killed when a revolver exploded in the pocket of a hunting jacket which he was throwing over his shoulder, the bullet entering his heart.

Killed by Gasoline Explosion.

Mrs. N. M. Freemond, aged 65 years, was fatally burned in Marysville, Ohio, by the explosion of a gasoline stove which she was filling. The house caught fire and was destroyed.

GEORGE MEREDITH IS DEAD.

Succumbs in London to Attack of Heart Disease at 81.

George Meredith died at 3:35 Tuesday morning in London. The news of the great novelist's illness caused deep and widespread regret and it had been generally feared that because of his great age—he was past 81 — the chances of recovery were slight. The immediate cause of death was heart failure, following grave symptoms that developed early in the evening. Mr. Meredith's illness began on May 14 and he steadily declined since that time.

George Meredith was born Feb. 12, 1828, in the county of Hampshire, England. He was educated in Germany but returned to England after qualifying for a university and read for the bar. He gave up this for literature after meeting with success in articles written for prominent reviews of his time. In 1851 Meredith published "Poems," his first volume of verse, and since then throughout his active literary life he published poems and books every few years. Recognition, however, was slow, and not until 1885 when the novelist was 57 years old and "Diana of the Crossways" appeared, did he receive the recognition which was to be his until his dying day. After the success of "Diana of the Crossways" Meredith's early works were recognized as masterpieces and his novel, "The Ordeal of Richard Leverel," is now ranked as one of his best efforts. Of his many prose works those which are declared by critics to be certain of undying fame are "The Egoist," published in 1879, "Rhoda Fleming," published in 1865, and the two books already mentioned.

FROM FOREIGN LANDS

The Persian Nationalists lost sixty men killed and 100 wounded in the sortie from Tabriz, in which H. C. Baskerville, an American school teacher, of Royalton, Minn., lost his life.

Gilbert, a retired French merchant whose declining years have been made miserable by speeding automobiles has bequeathed his entire fortune to churches in certain French cities for masses for the repose of the souls of the victims of the "diabolical machines which have poisoned my last days."

The outbreak of the Albanian garrison at Uskup, Tuesday, about 100 miles north of Saloniki, where the deposed Sultan of Turkey is a prisoner was believed at Constantinople to be the beginning of an uprising under the leadership of the Sultan's son Berrhen-Eddin, for the purpose of reinstating Abdul Hamid on the throne.

The commission which is taking an inventory of the property at the imperial palace at Yildiz has discovered according to the local newspapers bank notes to the value of $2,250,000 and a large quantity of jewelry, including one rosary alone valued at $375,000. Papers seized at the palace show that Abdul Hamid had over $5,000,000 on deposit in foreign banks. These refuse to give up the cash to the Young Turks.

The Zeppelin company is negotiating with the Lucerne, Switzerland authorities for the establishment of a daily aerial service between Lucerne and Friedrichshafen. The airships will be used also for excursion parties.

The Shah of Persia has once more proclaimed the resumption of the constitution, calling upon Said ed Dowleh to form a Liberal Cabinet, with himself in his former post as foreign minister, while Nasir el Mulk, now a refugee in Europe, is called back to become the premier.

Work of Congress

After devoting the greater part of Tuesday's session to debate, the Senate passed upon a number of important committee amendments to the tariff bill. It also disposed of adversely an amendment by Mr. Stone restoring the Dingley rates on razors. On that vote most of the progressive Republicans voted in the affirmative with the Democrats. More than two hours were devoted to a discussion of a resolution by Senator Gore to investigate the cost of production at home and abroad and the relative price of commodities at wholesale and retail. The resolution was referred to the committee on finance. Considerable progress was made in the adoption of several sections of the tariff bill. There were several amendments decreasing duties formerly reported by the committee, but some of the others adopted increased duties. The House was not in session.

-:—:-

A denunciation of the sugar trust and an appeal for a smaller differential on refined sugar in the interest of consumers were the features of an extended address before the Senate Wednesday by Senator Clay of Georgia. Mr. Paynter sought to reduce the duty on linotype and other typesetting machines from 30 per cent ad valorem as provided in the tariff bill to 10 per cent ad valorem, but by a vote of 65 to 43 his amendment was rejected. All sections of the metal schedule were agreed to before adjournment. The House was not in session.

-:—:-

The Senate spent Thursday in the discussion of amendments to the tariff bill. The white lead duty was reduced to 2¾ cents a pound, Mr. Aldrich having accepted an amendment to that effect offered by Senator Curtis. This duty being higher than that fixed by the House was opposed by ten Republican Senators. After a long discussion Mr. Aldrich withdrew the provision fixing a duty of 3 cents a gallon on cotton seed oil. Mr. La Follette offered an amendment to reduce the duty on quebracho to one-quarter of a cent a pound. It was defeated, 29 to 38. The session of the House lasted but five minutes. There was such a meager representation of members that Mr. Macon of Arkansas raised the point of no quorum. This was promptly conceded by Mr. Dalzell, who was the speaker pro tempore, and thereupon adjournment was taken until Monday next.

-:—:-

Several paragraphs of the tariff bill were disposed of Friday, with the understanding that the Senate might still return to them if thought advisable. The House rates on polished glass were retained, notwithstanding the opposition of the Republican progressives. The duty on feldspar was increased and that on mica and gypsum reduced. The Finance Committee's automobile schedule was adopted. The House was not in session.

-:—:-

By special agreement the Senate took no votes Saturday on any subject and the entire session was devoted to speechmaking. The lumber schedule was under discussion during the greater part of the day. Senator McCumber introduced the subject by presenting an amendment providing for free lumber, and he was on the floor several times in support of this provision. He contended that the American forests were being rapidly depleted and urged that every encouragement should be given to the bringing in of outside lumber. On the other hand, Senator Elkins, Scott and Heyburn, all of them representing lumber-producing constituencies, contended strenuously for a higher duty than is allowed by the House bill. They controverted the theory that the American lumber supply is rapidly diminishing. Once more the Senate placed on record its determination not to undertake other legislation while the tariff bill is pending. This action was taken in opposition to an effort on the part of Senator Burton, former chairman of the House committee on rivers and harbors and now a member of the Senate committee on commerce, to have extended certain appropriations for the improvement of the country's water ways. He was antagonized by Senators Hale and Clapp and was compelled to desist. Senator Bailey began the day by demanding that the advocates of the tariff bill should maintain a quorum notwithstanding there were to be no votes taken, and he and other Senators were responsible for a number of roll calls. The attendance was good, however, and there was no indication of a falling off in interest. There was no session of the House.

Force Engineer to Apply Brakes and Force Postal Clerks to Give Up Mail.

PURSUED BY POLICE IN AUTOS.

Hold-Up Is Accomplished with Neatness and Expedition—Passengers Not Molested.

Four masked men held up and robbed Union Pacific train No. 2, known as the Overland Limited, a few miles west of Omaha just before midnight Saturday and secured a number of registered mail pouches. The exact number of sacks taken is not known, but they are believed to have contained a large sum. The robbers are being sought by squads of Omaha police in automobiles.

The hold-up occurred about a mile west of the city limits, in a deep cut along the recently constructed Lane cut-off. The robbers climbed over the tank, forced the engineer to stop his train and then proceeded to the mail car. The clerks were forced to open the door and hand out a number of pouches of registered mail. Once the robbers secured the bags, they hurried away in a southerly direction and permitted the train to proceed. The passengers were not molested. As soon as the robbers left the train proceeded to Omaha.

Two of the robbers climbed into the engine with drawn revolvers and forced the engineer to stop the train. The engine crew was ordered out of the cab and two of the robbers stood guard, while the other two escorted the engineer and fireman to the rear. The quartette were apparently well acquainted with the ground, as they forced the train to stop in a deep cut.

There were eight clerks on the mail car and they were forced to open the door. The chief clerk was singled out and asked to point out the registered mail. This he did and the robbers gathered up seven pouches and the leader then remarked: "This is all we can get into our automobile." They left the scene quickly, walked down the track 300 feet and clambered out of the cut.

A continuous fusillade of shooting was kept up during the robbery, evidently to intimidate passengers and crew. A flagman who went to the rear narrowly escaped being shot. Several passengers who had not retired started to get out of the vestibules, but in no uncertain tones the robbers ordered them back into the cars.

RULES NEGRO INFERIOR.

Judge Holds He Can't Be Damaged as Much as White by Jail Term.

A colored man is inferior to a white man, according to a decision of Justice Dugro of the Supreme Court of New York. This all came out before the Appellate Division the other day in the matter of Griffin versus Brady. Daniel M. Brady, president of a brass company and brother of "Diamond Jim," three years ago lost a card case containing money and passes on a train. He caused the arrest of George W. Griffin, the colored porter of his car. Griffin was tried and acquitted in Montreal. He brought suit against Brady in New York City and got a verdict for $2,500. Brady moved to have this set aside as excessive and the justice agreed with him. He said in ruling: "No such verdict would stand in any court for the plaintiff in this case. He earned less than a dollar a day. He was a colored man and, while the law says he is as good as the President of the United States, it would be a bad argument to say that he is as good in many senses."

CAPITAL INTERESTED IN LEPER

John R. Early, Ex-Soldier, Not Afflicted, Some Specialists Declare.

Many persons in Washington, D. C., are beginning to take a lively interest in the case of John R. Early, the ex-soldier who, government officials declare, is a leper. The authorities have separated Early from his wife and two children and have provided a tent for him adjoining the cottage in which they live. A fence is built between the cottage and the tent. There are several specialists who believe Early is not a leper. Among them is Dr. Bulkley of New York, who was induced by Mrs. Early to study her husband's case. His action has met with the disapproval of the authorities because they were not consulted first. Mrs. Early is devoted to her husband, and with her two children often may be seen conversing with him "across the fence."

Famous Hotel Is Burned.

White Face Inn on the west shore of Lake Placid, one of the best known hotels in the Adirondack region of New York, was burned to the ground early Thursday. The loss is estimated at $150,000. The hotel had not yet been opened for the season.

Sixteen Years in Prison for Lawyer.

John Sykes, a Trenton lawyer, who was convicted a few weeks ago of charges of forgery and embezzlement, was sentenced by Judge Rellstab in the Mercer County Court to serve sixteen years in the New Jersey State prison.

Frowns on Use of Tobacco.

A committee report to the United Brethren quadrennial conference in Canton, Ohio, proposes that applicants for the ministry shall abstain from the use of tobacco. An increase of 25 per cent in the salary of editors and assistants of church papers was made.

Wounded by Son; Slays Wife.

August Poos, a jeweler at 3564 South Broadway, St. Louis, killed his wife at his home, after he had been fatally wounded by his son. The tragedy followed a family quarrel.

COMMERCIAL AND FINANCIAL

CHICAGO.

Payments through the banks and lower defaults testify to healthier conditions. The commercial outlook is keener and awaits an early settlement of tariff revision. Developments as a whole carry the encouragement which stimulates enterprise, renewed strength and confidence being well established. Current activities are conspicuous in the enlarged movements of heavy materials, factory products, general merchandise and grain. The outgo of provisions also is increased, although live stock arrivals declined and packing capacity works under the normal.

Weather conditions have favored more extended operations in the leading industries, construction and building, and gain is seen in the absorption of seasonable goods, but more warmth is needed for an adequate disposition of light-weight apparel, retailers not yet securing ample sales.

Cheaper prints and costlier tendencies of wool fabrics induce more widespread orders in wholesale dry goods and clothing. This has brought larger numbers of visiting buyers into the markets for staples, and bookings rise for immediate and fall shipments of textiles, footwear, men's furnishings, furniture and household needs.

Inquiries for furnace and mill outputs extend farther into the future and the contracts closed reflect distinct progress in iron, wood, brass and leather working. Railway orders appear more freely and assure increasing activity at the forges and equipment plants. Building materials are under the greatest consumption known here, and this stiffens prices and puts the building trades upon a substantial basis.

Bank clearings, $271,814,502, exceed those of the corresponding week in 1908 by 19.5 per cent and compare with $252,032,830 in 1907. Failures reported in the Chicago district number 24, against 36 last week, 28 in 1908 and 14 in 1907. Those with liabilities over $5,000 number 10, against 4 last week, 7 in 1908 and 4 in 1907.—Dun's Weekly Review of Trade.

NEW YORK.

Weather conditions continue irregular, but a change for the better has occurred in staple crop conditions, and retail business is slightly improved, though disappointing and showing evidences of the repression heretofore evident. Re-order business from jobbers and wholesalers has been rather quiet, but there is, if anything, a more assured optimism permeating the reports as to the outlook for next fall and winter trade.

Best reports as to retail trade comes from the upper part of the great central valley and its tributaries. Cold wet weather has interfered with business in parts of New England and the middle Atlantic States, and trade seems slow to improve in San Francisco and in parts of the Pacific Northwest.

All indications of activity have to do with future trade, the expectation being that the removal of tariff uncertainty will give an impetus to general business. Retail trade, though better than a year ago, has been on the whole disappointing, causes assigned for this being weather conditions and the high prices of the general public.

Business failures in the United States for the week were 219, against 224 last week, 284 in the like week of 1908, 165 in 1907, 170 in 1906 and 179 in 1905. Canadian failures for the week were 25, against 30 last week and 39 in same week last year.—Bradstreet's.

Matt

A TALE OF A CARAVAN

By Robert Buchanan

CHAPTER XVII.

They passed on among the sand hills, and came to the entrance of the cave. Brinkley removed the stones and sand from the hole, and entered. Breathless with curiosity, Matt followed. They reached the bottom. Brinkley struck a light, and pointed out to her all the wonderful treasures which the cave contained. It was such a surprise to the girl that for a time she could do nothing but stare and stare in speechless wonder. Whistling gayly, Brinkley turned about the casks of rum and brandy, and thrust his hands into the bags and let the gleaming gold slip through his fingers.

Matt's amazement turned into awe.

"Don't," she said, in a fearful whisper; "it belongs to the fairies."

Brinkley laughed.

"It belongs to a very substantial fairy, Matt, but I don't think that to-day I will mention that fairy's name. Did you ever see so much money in all your life before, Matt?"

She shook her head, but her eyes were still fixed upon the gold.

"I see," observed Brinkley, flippantly, "the sight of that gold fascinates you. Well, so it did me at first, but you see what use does. I can regard it now with comparative calmness. However, I have a particular wish to accustom you to the sight of wealth; therefore, I shall bring you here and show you this now and again. Come, Matt, tell me what you would do if you were very rich, if all this flotsam and jetsam in fact belonged to you."

Without the slightest hesitation Matt replied:

"I should give it to you—leastways half of it."

"Ah, the reply is characteristic, and clearly shows you are not at present fitted to become the possessor of riches. But I shall bring you to the proper state of mind in time, no doubt. The next time I ask you a similar question you will propose to give me a third, the next an eighth, and so on, until you finally come to a proper state of mind, and decline to give me any at all. And now that I have made you the sharer of my secret we will go."

They left the cave once more and made their way back across the sand hills, Brinkley pausing to obliterate their footprints as they went. When they had proceeded some distance he paused, and took the girl's hand.

"Good-by, Matt," said he. "If it wasn't for that promised smashing I should certainly see you home."

"Then do," returned Matt. "I don't care if he does smash me!"

"Probably not, but I do. It would be an episode in your career which it would not be pleasant to reflect upon—therefore, good-by, Matt—and—and God bless you, my girl!"

He gave her a fatherly salute upon the forehead; a bright flush overspread her cheek as she bounded away. Brinkley watched her until she was out of sight, then he turned, and strolled quietly on in the direction of the Caravan.

"It's a strange game," he said, "and requires careful waiting. I wonder what my next move ought to be?"

He thought very deeply, but when he reached the Caravan he found he had come to no definite conclusion as to his plans. He therefore partook cheerfully of the repast which Tim had prepared for him, and after he had smoked a couple of pipes in the open air he retired to rest.

The next morning he began pondering again.

"I have got my trump card," he said to himself, "but how to play up to it? I have a splendid hand, but it will want skillful managing if I am to win the game. One false move would do for me, for my opponents are crafty as foxes, and they are two against one. What is my right move, I wonder? I wish some good fairy would guide me!"

He took out his pipe, which was his usual consoler, and smoked while he took a few turns on the greensward outside the Caravan.

Suddenly an idea struck him.

"I think I'll pay a domiciliary visit to Mr. Monk," he said. "I can meet him now on pretty equal terms. If I hint a few things to him, the amiable gentleman may think of becoming just."

He called up Tim, and sent him on some trivial errand down to the village. As soon as he was well out of the way Brinkley entered the Caravan, produced some papers from the inner pocket of his coat, and locked them up securely in his trunk.

"So far so good," he said. "My amiable friend may not be in an amiable mood, and I don't wish him to get any advantage of me!"

He did not even take with him the key of the box, but having attached to it a small piece of paper, on which were some written instructions, he hid it in the Caravan and started off upon his journey.

It was a dark, gloomy morning, giving every promise of coming storms. As he passed through the wood which surrounded Monkshurst House, the wind whistled softly among the trees, making a moan like the sound of human voices.

"A gloomy place," said Brinkley; "a fit residence for such as he. Any dark deed might be committed here, and who would know?"

The path which he followed was a neglected carriage drive, strewed with stones, overgrown with weeds, and bordered on either side by the thick trees of the forest. Presently the trees parted, and he came in view of the house.

A large gloomy looking building, as neglected as the woodland in the center of which it stood. It seemed as if only a part of it was inhabited, and the large garden at its back was unprotected by any wall, and full of overgrown fruit trees.

The door was opened by a grim elderly woman. He inquired for Mr. Monk, and was informed that he was at home. The next minute he was standing in a lonely library, where the owner of the house was busy writing. Monk rose, and the two stood face to face.

CHAPTER XVIII.

It is not my purpose to describe the interview which took place between my hero and Mr. Monk. Suffice it to say that when the young man again emerged from the gloomy shadows of the dwelling there was a curious smile upon his face, while Mr. Monk, who had followed him to the door, and watched his retreating figure, wore a horrible expression of hatred and fear.

No sooner had he disappeared than Monk left the house also, and, following a foot path through the woods, made straight for William Jones' cottage. Entering unceremoniously, he found that worthy seated beside the hearth; without a word he rushed upon him, seized him by the throat and began pummeling his head upon the wall.

The attack was so sudden that for several minutes William Jones offered no resistance whatever. Indeed, so passive was he, and so violent was the rage of his opponent, that there was every prospect of his head being beaten to a jelly. Presently, however, Monk's fury abating, his unfortunate victim was allowed to pick himself up. He sat and stared before him, while Monk, looking like the Evil One himself, glared savagely in his face.

"You villain! You treachers scoundrel!" he said. "Tell me what you've done, or I'll kill you!"

But William Jones was unconscious of having done anything, and he said as much, whereupon Monk's fury seemed about to rise again.

"Mr. Monk," cried William Jones, in terror, "look ye now, tell me what's the matter!"

"I mean you to tell me what you have been hiding from me all these years. Something that might lead to her identity, and you have kept it, thinking to realize money upon it, or to have me in your power. What means it? Speak, or I'll strangle you!"

But William Jones was evidently unable to speak, being perfectly paralyzed with fear. Monk stretched forth his hands to seize him again, when the old man, who had been a horrified spectator of all this, suddenly broke in with:

"Look ye, now, I know there was summat. It were a leetle book, stuffed in the front of her frock!"

"A book!" returned Monk, eagerly; "and what did you do with it? Tell me that! Did you burn it?"

'Burn it?" exclaimed the other. "No, mister, we don't burn nothin', William and me. You know where you put it, William dear. In the old place."

"The book has been stolen—do you hear?—stolen by that young painter!"

He could say no more; the effect of his words upon William Jones was electrical. He gave one wild shriek, and began tearing his hair. It now became his turn to moan and rave, and for some time nothing coherent could be got from him.

At length, however, Monk gathered that there was some secret hiding place which Brinkley had discovered.

"I thought his poking and prying meant summat," moaned William Jones. "I fancied, too, I seen marks i' the sand, but I never could find no one near, and I thought they was my own marks. Oh, what will come to me! I'm ruined!"

"Curse your folly!" exclaimed Monk; "you've brought it all on yourself by your own greed, and you don't deserve I should help you; but I will help you! Listen then! It is clear that this young man has possessed himself somehow of your secret and mine. But from what he said to me, I fancy he has not as yet divulged it to a single soul. He is the only human being we have to fear. We must cease to fear him. Do you understand?"

No, William Jones did not understand; so in order to make his meaning clear, Mr. Monk drew him out from the cottage, and whispered something in his ear. William Jones turned as white as death, and began to tremble all over.

"I couldn't do it, sir," he moaned. "Look ye now—I couldn't do it!"

Monk stamped his foot impatiently; then he turned to his frightened victim.

"Listen to me, William Jones. You ought to know by this time that I have both the power and determination to effect my ends. Continue to oppose me, and play the fool, and all that power shall be used against you. Do you hear? I will ruin you! I will hand you over to the authorities as a thief—I will have you tried for concealing the papers which might prove the identity of the child found washed ashore fifteen years ago! Do you hear?"

Mr. Monk evidently knew the nature of the man with whom he had to deal; for after a little more conversation, William Jones, cowering like a frightened child, promised implicit obedience.

"Now, then," said Monk, when he had brought matters to a satisfactory termination, "you will show me this hiding place of yours."

To this William Jones at first objected, but Monk was firm.

"Who knows," said he, "but there may be other things having reference to the child. I mean to see for myself. Now, William Jones?"

So William Jones, seeing that resistance would be useless, promised to conduct his friend to the cave; and after a good deal of hesitation and of continued show of unwillingness on William Jones' part, the two men started off.

When they drew near to the cave, William Jones gave a cry, and pointed to the sand. Looking down, Monk clearly saw footprints. They followed them, and found that they led right to the mouth of the cave.

"It's standing open!" cried William Jones, as he pointed down with trembling finger.

"Follow me!" said Monk, crawling down into the hole.

Jones followed in terror.

As he reached the rocks below he heard a sharp cry, and looking down, saw, by the dim light of a candle stuck in the wall, Brinkley struggling helplessly in the powerful grip of Monk. He had been sprung upon from behind, and was helpless through a sort of garotte.

Horrified and trembling, William Jones was rooted to his place.

Suddenly he saw the young man fall backward lifeless, and, with one last gasp, lie perfectly still. Monk stooped over him, and looked into his face.

"O Mr. Monk!" cried William, "is he—is he——"

"He is dead!" was the reply. "So much the better."

As he spoke, he bent down and searched the young man's pockets. His brow blackened, for he did not find what he sought. Then he took the light from the wall, and held it close to Brinkley's eyes.

Satisfied that he did not breathe, he climbed up the path and rejoined his trembling companion. They passed out of the place, hurriedly replaced the trap door, and piled on sand and stones.

"There!" said Monk, with a wild smile on his deadly pale face. "He won't trouble either of us again. Come, come!"

And he strode hastily away, followed by William Jones, leaving the young man of the Caravan in the subterranean tomb.

(To be continued.)

A Paying Job.

"Do you find poultry keeping pays?"

"Well, no; I can't say that it pays me, but I think that it pays my boy Jim."

"How's that?"

"Well, you see, I bought him the fowls. I have to pay for their keep and buy the eggs from him, and he eats them."—Illustrated Bits.

FEMININE FANCIES
THINGS OF INTEREST TO WOMEN

When Is Woman at Her Best?

"If it is not a paradox," says a man, "I like a woman best while she is still a girl, while she still retains her frank innocence and freshness, the bloom which the world so soon rubs off. The girl in her teens is simplicity itself—and simplicity is woman's greatest charm." "A woman is at her best when she has just become engaged," another says. "She sees everything couleur de rose then. The whole world is bright and beautiful. Everybody seems kind to her, and she feels on the best of terms with everybody. She becomes bright and animated. She achieves things, launches out in ways that nobody supposed her capable of."

"A woman is at her best during the earlier years of married life. During the engagement she has perhaps been selfishly wrapped up in her lover, and has only striven to cultivate that side of her character which most appeals to him. After marriage, though the glamour of romance still lingers, she is installed in a home of her own, where the more practical side of her character is developed. Her outlook is broadened, her sympathies deepened. The sacred duty of motherhood has claimed her, but she has not reached the trials and anxieties that too often age a woman before her time."

"I think a woman is at her best in the bloom of young motherhood. Her sympathies are readier and deeper, her whole nature is softened and made beautiful." Another suggests that the mother of 35 or so, with three or four young children, is even more at her zenith. "She has passed the empty foolishness of youth, she has learned the grandeur and nobleness of bringing up children. But she is still young enough to enjoy herself. She has enough children to make her happy, but not so many that they overtax her strength."

"The woman between 25 and 40, married or single, still retains some of the freshness of youth, tempered by the ripeness of maturity. If she is married, she is the guiding light of her home, single, she is that splendid thing, a mother of many mothers' children. She is lenient and charitable in her views. She has learned to know human nature and adapt herself to circumstances. She knows that a woman needs more than personal beauty. At 30 and upward the best side of a woman's nature shows to the best advantage and it is then that her attractiveness is at the zenith of her power. And she has a repose and restfulness about her which is delightful in these hustling times."

"I think a woman is at her best between 40 and 50," says one reader. "A woman at that age has learned the true value of things. There is something wonderfully attractive in the face of a woman who has profited by the lessons which life teaches, who has 'come through the furnace.' At that age, married or unmarried, she is the most useful member of society."

Serviceable Business Hat.

This simple but attractive model is an ideal suggestion for the business girl. It is modish, good-looking and practical, as in its construction it employs only materials which can not be harmed by sun or dampness. The hat of the fashionable bucket shape may be had in almost endless variety of straws and braids, and for trimming there is used one of the new silk scarfs so attractive in their pretty colorings as well as soft one-tone effects. Directly in front is placed a huge bird, its bill just peeping over brim.

Peculiar New Color.

There is a new color that one does not know how to classify. It is not brown and it certainly is not gray, and it does not belong to the greens, but it has tints of all three colors. The general tone is as much like putty as anything else, but it is not putty color.

Shoes That Hurt.

Women with narrow heels frequently have trouble with ready-made footwear. The shoe rides up at the heel and a painful blister occurs, which effectively cripples one for the time being. This is especially true of low shoes. To prevent it with your next pair cut a few inches from a piece of old velvet, or get a bit of velvet ribbon to fit between the heel and the shoe. It can be either tacked into place or pasted. This renders the heel comfortable without lessening the size of the shoe, which is the disadvantage of the felt sole.

There are over 600 women students of medicine in French universities.

Last year Mrs. Russell Sage made public gifts amounting to $1,559,635.

Statistics show that out of every twenty greenhouses in this country one is managed by a woman.

Countess van Boos Farrar is to build a home for the children of criminals at Spring Valley, N. Y.

Ada C. Sweet, formerly United States pension agent in Chicago, was the first woman ever appointed as disbursing agent for the United States government.

Red morocco cases containing 22 varieties of cigarettes are bought by the queen of Spain for presents to the ladies of her court.

There are 7,670 woman postmistresses in the United States government employ, some of them receiving more than $1,800 a year.

Six towns and cities of Colorado have elected women as treasurers in the last few weeks. Two women have been elected as town clerks.

Women writers of Paris and London are raising a subscription fund to erect a monument to Mme. de Stael, whom Napoleon honored with his intense hostility.

Probably the highest-paid women in the United States civil service are two young woman translators of French and Spanish employed at the bureau of American republics. They receive $2,400 a year.

The queen of Denmark is exceedingly interested in having women vote at the coming elections. When these elections were held last month, the queen went to a polling place and urged women to exercise the right of franchise.

Baby's Frock.

A little empire frock for babies' wear is one of the new season's offerings. It has the tinient, shortest yoke, cut out in the conventional square, which is daintily finished with beading, ribbon threaded. The full skirt is gathered to the yoke and is trimmed on the bottom with groups of tucks and lace insertion. The little puff sleeves end in narrow lace frills. It is a sweet little frock and is entirely new in design.

For Rough Hands.

Another quaint "farmhouse" remedy for rough hands was made of three parts of pure shredded beef suet to one part of pure beeswax, simmered over the fire until melted, and then poured into a mold. In applying it dairymaids, whose arms and hands were apt to become very red and chipped after scouring out the milk pans in cold weather, were wont to dip their hands in hot water, and then, sitting before a red fire, to rub the cake of soap well over the hands until the pores of the skin had absorbed the emollient.

Fashion Item.

A good potato sack will make
A very stylish gown,
The narrower the better, so
You don't by chance sit down.
The corset now must be of steel,
All riveted before
You get it in the antique shows,
The kind Crusaders wore.
The scuttle used to carry coal
Now makes the swellest hat,
When trimmed with rubber auto tires
Put on quite plain and flat.
No puffs are large enough to suit
The coiffure of the spring,
So feather pillows pinned behind
Are now the proper thing.

Should Girls Box? Of Course!

An Evanston (Ill.) club has passed by an overwhelming affirmative vote the following proposition: "Resolved, That girls should be taught to box." Mrs. Catherine Waugh McCulloch, a woman justice of the peace, introduced the resolution.

Work of the Woman.

Mrs. Catherine B. Bell, editor of the Cannon, of Cannon City, Colo., besides attending to her household and editorial duties, finds time to serve as probation officer in her home county, to do the work required of the president of the Board of County Visitors, to act as special agent to the County Commissioners in cases of destitution and to be the humane officer and secretary of the local Humane Society. She is a widow with three children. She is a New Yorker by birth and has lived in Colorado less than eight years.

EASILY MADE TUB FROCKS.

The length of skirts varies almost as much, from one season to another, as the shape of sleeves, and that is saying a good deal. However, all walking skirts must clear the ground all around this year. The skirts of the new tailored suits for traveling and shopping are all walking length. More handsome suits, in broadcloth, rajah and other fabrics used for "dressy" wear appear with a short train. Many suits are being made this season with one coat, usually braided and in the three-quarter length, or longer, and two skirts. One of these will be off the ground, in trotteur length, while the other, for more ceremonious occasions, will have the graceful short train. Walking skirts are capable of some variation. The short woman should wear hers as long as she can without toubhing, while the tall woman will look well in a much shorter skirt. Women of medium height will find a skirt two inches off the ground an effective length. Genuine princess gowns should always have trains. This is not true, however, of the semi-princess frocks where the belt destroys the actual princess lines. All evening frocks except those for dancing are being made with trains.

Bread and Butter Plates.

Bread and butter plates are no longer used on formal occasions, but are too convenient to be dispensed with at family meals. They go to the left of each plate above the plates, and the glass of water to the right.

To Polish Japanned Trays.

Clean japanned trays by rubbing them over with a little olive oil, and then polishing it off with a soft cloth.

Smiles of The Day

Tonsorial Philosophy.

"You seem to have a lot of confidence in mankind," said the victim in the chair.

"Not necessarily," rejoined the knight of the whisker knife. "I merely take men at their face value."

His Whereabouts.

"What became of that young man who sought your hand in marriage at the seashore last summer?" asked the dear girl who had been abroad.

"Oh," replied the fair one who had remained at home. "I have him under my thumb now."

His Finish.

"Give woman the credit she deserves," the suffragette cried, "and where would man be?"

"If she got all the credit she wanted, he'd be in the poor house," sneered a coarse person in the rear of the hall.—Stray Stories.

A Disgrace to the Class.

Percy—No, Clawrence is not in ouah set any longah. The vulgah fellow wears ready-made clothes.

Mortimr—Ready-made clothes are doocid vulgah.

Percy—Not only that, but you have to pay cawsh for them. That's doocid doocidly vulgah, bah Jove.

A Certainty.

Rich Uncle—You might as well stop mooning about Miss Beauty. She hasn't been in love with you after all. She's been after the money she thought you would inherit from me.

Nephew—Impossible! Why do you think so?

Rich Uncle—I have proposed to her myself and been accepted!—Tit-Bits.

Heavy Tones.

Old Man—My little man you'll catch cold if you get your feet wet in that puddle.

Kid—Dat's what I'm after. I got to speak some Shakespeare in school to-morrow and I wants to make my voice hoarse.

At the Wayside Inn.

Guest—So the old house on this place was one of Washington's headquarters, was it? Did Gen. Washington really stop here?

Waiter (new but loyal—Yessir; often. The general used to be very fond of our 40-cent table d'hote.—Puck.

Horrors of War.

Miss Gush—Colonel, were you ever in many tight places during the last unpleasantness.

Col. Binks—Madam, I have camped in three Cuban hotels!

Slow and Sure.

Binx—Has young Foster a good education?

Jinx—He must have. It took him seven years to go through college.—Somerville Journal.

A Recipe.

"Whenever I try to make a speech everybody laughs."

"I know how to fix that."

"How?"

"Try to say something funny."—Cleveland Leader.

Felt He Was Intruding.

"Is your mistress in?"

"Yes; but she can't be disturbed. She's playing whist."

"Ah, I understand. Well, another time will do. I only came to tell her that her little boy fell into the river."

Needless Trouble.

"Did you wash the fish?" a Springfield woman asked her new servant. "Shure, an' phwat's the use of wash'n anything that's always lived in the water?" asked the girl.—Kansas City Star.

Different.

"Pa, were you always a good boy?"

"Yes, Tommy—a much better boy than you are."

"But gran'ma says she used to spank you."

"Y—yes. Your grandma never understood me."

Bobby's Idea.

Bessie—Oh, look, Bobby, there is a taxicab broken down in the street. Do you think they'll send for a blacksmith?

Bobby—No, I guess they will send for a taxidermist.

An Insinuation.

Stella—I said something to Jack last night that he declared made him the happiest man on earth.

Mabel—Indeed! But aren't you aware this isn't leap year?

Conditional.

Him—How long should a man know a girl before he proposes to her?

Her—What's the man's income?—Cleveland Leader.

Good Shooting.

Officer (to recruit who has missed every shot)—Good heavens, man, where are your shots going?

Recruit (tearfully)—I don't know, sir, they left here all right!—Punch.

The Threat Terrible.

Heiress—But, father, that handsome foreign count says he will do something terrible and awful if I do not marry him.

Father—He will. He will have to go to work.—Cornell Widow.

Might Have Been Worse.

"Those apples you sent up," said Bilkins, "were not half bad.

"I'm glad you liked them," rejoined the grocer, cheerfully.

"Yes," continued Bifkins, "only about a third of them were bad."

"No Fishin' Here."

Boarder—I've fished in your old pond for three days and haven't had a bite. What does that sign, 'No fishin' Here,' mean, anyway.

Hiram—Just what it says, sir—'no fish-in here.'"—Boston Herald.

Discouragement.

"So you have bought a horse?"

"Yes. The doctor said riding would give me an appetite."

"Does it?"

"Certainly. But what's the use? By the time I get through feeding the horse I can't afford to eat."—Washington Star.

Filled the Bill.

Book Agent—Madam, here is an admirable work I have on how to manage servants.

Housewife—Don't want it. You can't get any help in this town to manage.

Book Agent—Then here is a still better series on self help.—Baltimore American.

No Great Loss.

"Now, Mr. Knox," said the professor of physiology, "can you tell me with what faculty a man could most easily dispense?"

"Yes, sir," answered the student.

"Good," said the professor. "Which one?"

"The college faculty," replied young Knox, soberly.

Advance Information.

Shortleigh—Is Miss Scaddsby in?

The Maid—No, sir.

Shortleigh—When she comes in, will you tell her that I called?

The Maid—If you wish it—but she knows it already, sir.

An Inference.

Miss Oldham—I had a proposal of marriage last night.

Miss Young—Indeed! Who taught you the art?

Miss Oldham—The art?

Miss Young—Yes, of hypnotism.

Bearing Honors with Modesty.

"You, Jimmy Smith, you're the worst, very worst, boy in this town!"

"Aw, quit yer flattery."

Postgraduate Course.

She—Are you going abroad to complete your education?

He—I haven't decided yet. Which would you advise me to do?

She—Beg pardon?

He—Would you you advise me to complete it by going abroad or by getting married?

Good Neighbors.

"Have you good neighbors where you live?"

"I should say I have. One of them owns a naphtha launch and the other one an automobile. They entertain me all summer long."

An Unfounded Rumor.

"Mrs. Muchmore told me," said Mrs. Oldcastle, "that the new minister came in his vestments when he officiated at your daughter's wedding."

"It ain't true," replied her hostess, as she flung one of her ropes of pearls over the back of a $90 rocking chair; "we brought him over in our limousine."—Chicago Record-Herald.

One Man's Way.

The Lowly One—And were you born great?

The Great One—No; I thrust myself upon it.

Not Suitable.

She—Try this delightful cough candy.

He (coughing)—It wouldn't do me any good. I haven't a delightful cough.

Utterly Tactless.

Manager—So the great critic invited you to dine with him?

Actor—Yes, but his choice of menu was not only utterly without tact, but also cruelly suggestive.

Manager—Dear me! What was it?

Actor (shuddering)—He actually put me down to what he called a good roast.—Baltimore American.

Marketing a New Product.

Mrs. Dexter, from somewhere "down State," was enjoying her first ride in a crowded street car in Chicago. It happened that a health officer, in the performance of his regular duties, was taking a sample of the air in the car. Mrs. Dexter saw his manipulations, but could not understand them, so she turned to a policeman who was sitting next to her.

"I beg your pardon," she said, "but can you tell me what that man is doing?"

"Yes, ma'am," answered the officer. "He's bottling th' atmosphere."

"For mercy's sake!" exclaimed Mrs. Dexter. "What won't they do next! Do they can the air and sell it nowadays?"

"Mad as a Hatter."

The phrase "mad as a hatter," really means as venomous as a viper. "Mad as a hatter," is simply a corruption of an ancient form, "Mad as an atter, or adder."

It's easy for a rich man to die poor. All he has to do is acquire the lawsuit habit.

South American Trade Worth Cultivating.

By JOHN BARRETT, Director of the International Bureau of American Republics.

THERE are no important European countries which are not planning to gain every advantage possible from the Panama canal. Even Japan is laying her plans for steamships and access to the east coast of South America via the canal, which will give her an entrance to that mighty field of trade. In contrast to this WE ARE PRACTICALLY DOING NOTHING.

WE HAVE BEEN SO OCCUPIED WITH STUDYING EUROPE AND THE FAR EAST THAT WE HAVE NEGLECTED THE TWENTY LUSTY NATIONS REACHING FROM MEXICO AND CUBA SOUTH TO ARGENTINA AND CHILE.

These countries conducted last year a foreign trade valued at $2,100,000,000. Our share of this is only $600,000,000. It should reach $1,000,000,000, and it will soon do that if we EMULATE THE EXAMPLE OF EUROPE.

First, we must IMPROVE OUR STEAMSHIP FACILITIES. Second, we must provide ourselves with BANKING FACILITIES—that is, there must be established throughout Latin America banks or banking agencies controlled by United States capital.

Cost of Living Will :-: :-: :-: :-: Continue Rising.

By Professor JOSEPH F. JOHNSON, Dean of New York University's School of Commerce, Accounts and Finance.

IN THE NEXT TEN YEARS PRICES WILL GO UP AS STEADILY AS THEY HAVE BEEN DOING DURING THE LAST TEN YEARS. FROM 1897 TO 1907 PRICES JUMPED 44 PER CENT. IN 1918 WE SHALL SEE PRICES ADVANCED TO 80 PER CENT ABOVE THE PRICES QUOTED IN 1897.

The wages of workingmen will not rise in the same proportion. That is a law of political economy. The workingman will find himself PINCHED IN POCKET. The tremendous increase in the world's supply of gold has rendered capital here and abroad easy to obtain. WITH INCREASED LOANS INTEREST WILL RISE, AND THEN UP WILL GO COMMODITIES.

The fact, however, that wages will not rise proportionately does not mean there will be any lack of employment. With gold so plentiful manufacturers will enlarge their plants and increase their forces. The army of labor will keep pace with the demand for it, but WAGES CAN'T RISE WITH THE INCREASE OF LABORERS HIRED.

Why the Country Boy Leads the City Bred Lad.

By JOHN H. FINLEY, President of the College of the City of New York.

I HAVE often wondered why the country boy proves so successful. It is NOT HIS PHYSIQUE NOR HIS INTELLECT nor because he has dwelt in the midst of the eternal mysteries of creation and growth.

The city boy has seen the great bridges span the rivers and has talked to the men who have built those bridges. He has seen the skyscrapers built. Electricity has been explained to him. He has not the awe of it as the country boy has of the bolt from the sky which has killed his friend.

WHAT BOY BORN IN THE COUNTRY DOES NOT REMEMBER THE GREAT WORLD BEYOND HIS HORIZON?

This is the disadvantage of the city boy: The unquiet and pettiness and narrowness which bring home to him that he is SWALLOWED UP IN THE CROWD, an insignificant atom in the throng. These are the forces which show the city boy his limitations. And the great spaces MAGNIFY THE IMPORTANCE OF THE COUNTRY BOY.

The Rev. Dr. Lyman Abbott, editor-in-chief of the Outlook, a publication of which ex-president Roosevelt is one of the associate editors, is justly esteemed as taking high rank among the foremost publicits of the country. In one of his books, entitled "The Rights of Man," this far-famed divine and author says: "My objection to prohibitory laws is not that they cannot be enforced, but that they ought not to be enforced. Has a rural county in Maine, which thinks the saloon an injury, a right to prohit the saloon to the people of Bangor or Portland, who entertain a different opinion? If so, on what is the right based? It is not based to their right to protect themselves for drunkenness and disorder in Portland or Bangor inflicts an insignificant amount of injury upon the inhabitants of a remote rural country. It must be based on the supposed right of the majority to impose their consciences on the minority, to determine for them what is safe and right, and the right of the majority to act in this way toward the minority is fundamentally antagonistic to the essential principle of the democracy, which is founded upon local self-government."

Pushtown

Use Butler flour.

The Aid Society met at Prudy Schramm's last Wednesday. We heard there were twenty women and a number of children present. They occupied the time in sewing carpet rags and talking.

Mr. Dennis is farming the J. F. Greenawald place. Mr. Greenawald is not farming this season as his time is employed in the real estate business.

Mrs. Dora Hewey and family were the guests of Mrs. Prudy Schramm last week.

A few of the neighbors and friends of Levi Oberlin enjoyed a taffy pulling at their place east of Pushtown the 18th, it being the nineteeth birthday of his son, Grandville.

Some people in this place have little to do;
You never can find them at home,
When they are not tending the aid meetings,
They are rubbering over the phone.

There is only one buggy horse left in Pushtown,
Of course this answers the purpose, but still
It is not very pleasant to get out and push,
Every time you come to a hill,
And of course when this one wears out,
The township will get them an automobile.

PROCLAMATION BY GOVERNOR

Governor Marshall has issued a proclamation setting aside Monday, May 31, to be observed as Memorial day throughout Indiana. An act of congress makes May 30, the date to be observed as the annual holiday, but since May 30, falls this year on Sunday, the day following will be observed in Indiana, according to statute. The proclamation is as follows:

"The orator has reached his highest flights in words of eulogy for the living and the dead soldiers of the civil war; music has struck and played upon the human heart, a requiem to the departed heroes of that time; sculptors have embalmed in marble and in bronze their loftiest conceptions of that age; legislation has done all that it could do to honor the dead and lessen the burdens of the living boys in blue.

"The custom of once each year strewing the graves of the dead heroes, and speaking some word of gratitude and good cheers to the living, is one that must commend itself to every patriotic American. We have had enough of words, let us have this year a genuine outpouring of the people's love in memory of the men who saved the union. For such purpose, I, Thomas R. Marshall, governor of the state of Indiana, do hereby designate and set apart Monday, May 31, 1909, as Memorial day, and do proclaim the same a legal holiday throughout the state. Let this be, indeed, a holy day, when tears for the dead and cheers for the living will convince the boys in blue that those who died, died gloriously and those who live have not lived in vain."

Sleep On

Sleep on! O boys in blue, sleep on!
The battle thunder rolls no more,
The enemy you fought has gone—
The fight is o'er.

Sleep on, the bugle blows no more,
Nor drums beat up a call to arms,
The sentry's lonely watch is o'er;
And naught alarms.

Sleep on, in deepest slumber rest!
Old Glory's waving there on high
Where you last set her, and no quest
Of her is nigh.

Sleep on, your comrades love you still—
To-day alone was born for thee—
And they will deck your graves until
They sleep with thee.

Sleep on, beneath God's starry skies,
On mountain, plain or shady knoll,
Till called to answer, when you rise—
His muster roll.

—JOHN WILLIAM BARBER.

To Keep Light Dresses Clean

Magnesia may be obtained either in powder or in square cakes, and it is very effective in cleaning laces and delicate fabrics. Sift or rub it on the parts to be cleaned, and lay them away in a box or drawer where they will be undisturbed for a day or so, and then shake them out. It is a very good plan to apply the magnesia in this way when putting away party dresses that have become slightly soiled. The magnesia absorbs the dust, and when you take the dresses out to wear them the next time, they will be fresh and dainty. The magnesia is also effective when applied in the same way, for removing grease spots.—Woman's Home Companion for June.

As Watterson Puts It

I protest against that religion which sands the sugar and waters the milk before it goes to its prayers. I protest against that morality which poses as a saint in public to do as it pleases in private. As the old woman said of the old man's swearing, "If there is anything I do hybominate it is hypocrisy." I do not believe that men can be legislatured into angels. The old blue laws of New England did more harm than good. I would leave them in the cold storage, to which they were consigned long ago, and not embalm and ship them here to poison the meat, and drink the character of the people.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Ruth A. Kline, of Auburn, has been granted a divorce from Earl E. Kline, and given the custody of the daughter, Genevieve, two years of age.

The Washington Post, noting that the best ear of last year's corn crop was grown in Indiana and brought enough in prizes to buy a good sized farm, urges the need of improving the seed and the meshods of cultivating all crops: A yield of thirty bushels of corn, fifteen bushels of wheat, 800 pounds of tobacco and half a bale of cotton to the acre ought to be a disgrace to the farmer, for with intelligence, the best untensils, energy and industry it is easy to harvest one hundred and thirty bushels of corn from an acre of ground as thirty bushels. York county, Pennsylvania, is not the best corn region in the union by a long shot, and yet the agricultural papers tell of a farmer there who gathers annually more than thirty-five barrels of five bushels each, to every acre he plants to corn. The same methods adopted in Iowa or Missouri would produce forty barrels, or two hundred bushels to the acre. This Pennsylvania farmer has been improving his seed for thirty years, though he is fortunate in owning many fields and grows a crop of corn on some one of them yearly. If this idea prevails of improving seeds, and it become general, within a decade the yield of corn per acre will be double what it is.

Clothcraft is Almost Too Good To Be True

You must not judge CLOTHCRAFT CLOTHES by their low prices.

When we say $10 to $25 some wonder how CLOTHCRAFT CLOTHES can be as good as we claim.

This is where the famous CLOTHCRAFT GUARANTEE comes in. It is an absolute protection as to style, all-wool, shape-holding qualities, workmanship and durability.

But the Guarantee doesn't explain the low prices. And explanation is what makes belief easier.

Clothcraft Clothes

59 Years of Honesty

Here is the explanation:

Three generations of honest men have devoted their lives to the study of one thing—how to make good, stylish, all-wool clothes that can sell at medium prices.

CLOTHCRAFT is the result of 59 years of scientific study of one idea.

These years have shown how to eliminate waste.

They have brought forth marvelous processes known to no other factory.

You Are the Gainer

They have seen the output grow until the cost of each individual garment has been reduced to a minimum.

Thus several dollars is actually saved in the cost of each and every garment.

And this saving is what pays for the better woolens and better tailoring in these clothes. You are the gainer.

Remember

This is the only line of all wool clothes in America that sells at from $10 to $25.

EDUCATION

The following oration given at the Butler high school commencement by Mr. Vern Pifer, is worthy of a place in these columns and we take pleasure in presenting the same to HERALD readers:

The subject of this oration this evening is education—a subject that is so broad that I can only touch upon some of the most important phases of education.

Many people get a very wrong conception of an education. They think it is the mastering of the numerous technicalities, and thoughts of others, which we meet with, throughout the school course. But this is not true. The aim of education should be to teach us rather how to think than what to think; rather to improve our minds so as to enable us to think for our selves, than to load our memories with the thoughts of other men.

Education is the development of man. What the sculptor is to a block of marble, education is to the human soul. If we do not educate ourselves along these lines, we are no better than the animals around us. God gave to man a portion of his own divine nature in bestowing on him the wonderful power of reasoning and then placed the mental and moral growth in man's own keeping, holding him responsible for the result.

It depends on each of us just how much we are going to get out of this life, and to what extent we will be able to help those about us. To be able to get the most out of this life by the use of God's divine nature, which we are endowed with, we must first educate our mind. Not carrying the idea that the mind is a warehouse and education, but a process of filling it with goods. The aim should be to convert the mind into a living fountain, not a reservoir filled by pumping, and can be emptied by pumping out.

Our mind should be educated to teach us how to think and when to act. This will enable us to take advantage of the number of opportunities that lies before us.

It makes little difference what the trade, business, or branch of learning in mechanical labor or intellectual effort the educated man is always superior to the common laborer. Anyone who is in the habit of applying his power in the right way, will carry system into any occupation. It is the educated man the world is looking for today.

Now education of the heart. Under education of the heart is kindness and unselfishness, a very important element to be considered. Kindness will go farther and yield more happiness in the world than all the haughtiness we can assume. How much easier it is to act kindly and natural toward our fellowmen and even to the domestic, useful and faithful animals about us, than to effect a rude and boisterous demeanor, which is sure not only to make others despise us, but upon reflection to cause us to despise ourselves. A kind sympathizing word from the lips falls like oil upon the ruffled waters of the bosom of the human breast. A man with a pleasant disposition finds friends where people of a contrary nature see only enemies. Good nature is one of the sweetest gifts of providence, like the pure sunshine, it gladdens, enlivens and cheers in the minds of anger and revenge. A word of kindness is seldom spoken in vain, while witty sayings are as easily lost as the pearls slipping from a broken string Unselfishness. Selfishness is an extremely bad characteristic for one to have, you cannot move a step in this world today without finding some duty to be done, and every man is useful to his kind, by the very fact of his existance.

The world in which we live is extremely full of misery and ignorance, and the plain duty of every one of us is to influence and enlighten and help those in our immediate vicinity. It is said of the Earl of Shaftsburg that his long and perfect life had no day misspent.

Third; the education of the soul. This may be considered by some the least important of the three, but it is not, rather it is the most important.

The soul may be compared to a great harp of strings, and is strung with every chord of sense and sentiment, passion and principle. It is tuned at will and thrumbed by the fingers of thought. This great harp is played upon differently by different people. One is on the bass, another is ever upon the tenor, while others are continually sweeping back and forth with harmonies of a thousand variations. At times we all play more or less rudely upon this harp of immortality; and it requires the same culture to play upon the internal as well as the external instrument. No untutored hand can even play the simplest strain or melody upon this lyre, except after years of study and practice. Everybody, every thing in creation plays a part upon the harp of every soul. We are all musicians of some sort, either in accord or discord with God and nature, and not only in the rea lm of the true, the beautiful and the good, in the sphere of the false, the hideous and the bad, every thing touches the strings of our harp, either to make or mar the melodies of life and immortality. Therefore, we all should be most careful in the education of the soul, and not educate in the sphere of the false, hideous, and the bad, but in the realms of the true, the beautiful and the good.

Now, should anyone fail to educate any one of the three elements of education; education of the mind, education of the heart, and education of the soul, we have not a good successful citizen. For example, if a man should educate the mind, omit educating the heart and educate the soul in the sphere of the false, the hideous, and the bad, we as a result would be one of the worst scoundrels that could be produced.

Therefore, for education to be complete we must first, educate the mind; second, educate the heart; third, educate the soul.

Headache For Years

"I keep Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills on hand all the time, and would not think of taking a journey without them, no matter how short a distance I am going. I have a sister that has had terrible headaches for years, and I coaxed her to try them and they helped her so much, she now keeps them by her all the time. From my own experience I cannot praise them enough."

MRS. LOU M. CHURCHILL, 63 High st., Penacook, N. H.

Many persons have headache after any little excitement or exertion. They cannot attend church, lectures, entertainments, or ride on trains without suffering. Those who suffer in this way should try Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills. They give almost instant relief without leaving any disagreeable after-effects, as they do not derange the stomach or bowels; just a pleasurable sense of relief follows their use. Get a package from your druggist. Take it according to directions, and if it does not benefit he will return your money.

Col. Strathmore 2:12¼

Col. Strathmore 2:12¼, owned and in the stud of L. J. Diehl, Butler, Ind., the sire of Clatemore, with a four-year-old record of 2:21¼, winner of five straight races his first year out, and Marion Strathmore, with a two-year-old record of 2:27 in a three-year-old class, is a representative of the greatest family of early producers in the world. He is an exceptionally fast horse himself and also a sire of early speed. His sire, Strathmore, is the sire of Abbie Strathmore 2:07½, Terrell S. 2:08¼, Strathmeath 2:10¼, Strathdennis 2:10¾, and eighty-five other standard performers. He is one of the greatest of the trotting horse family builders. His dam, Crescent, is herself a race mare with a record of 2:24¼, and is the dam of Col. Strathmore 2:12¼, Crescendo 5:15¼, and George Crescens 2:17¼ as a three-year-old, she by Ira Wilkes, sire of eighteen standard performers; his second dam, Rigolette, took a race record of 2:22 and is also the dam of Exmore 2:18¼, Crescent 2:24¼. Many of his colts now in training show extreme speed, one in particular, a yearling, owned at Logansport, Ind., that has stepped an eighth in 17¼ seconds hitched to a cart. They are uniformally good individuals, good headed and have plenty of speed. Col. Strathmore is a coming young sire, worthy the consideration of breeders. Terms $20 00 to insure. $25 00 for living foal.

KEEN KUTTER
LAWN MOWERS

So light running that your "youngest" can now mow the lawn without help.

KEEN KUTTER Mowers are fast cutting and easy running because of the triple gear and the fine ball bearings. A KEEN KUTTER will last longer than any mower on the market and is easily kept keen and sharp. To sharpen, merely reverse the blades and they sharpen themselves. A cheap mower will cost more in the end on account of repairs, will not do the work properly and will require twice as much labor.

The KEEN KUTTER is a money saver, a time saver, a temper saver—and will keep your lawn looking like velvet.

MASURY'S HOUSE PAINT
THE PAINT WITH THE LONGEST LIFE

There is no question about it.

Masury's House Paints have been submitted to every possible test during the past sixty-five years. They have withstood the attacks of extreme heat, extreme cold, moisture and time. When properly applied on the proper surface they invariably give good accounts of themselves. Painters praise them because of their endurance and preservative qualities. Consumers endorse them because, by their use, they are spared the expense of repainting for the longest possible period. The wonderful success of the house of John W. Masury & Son for more than half a century is due to the care with which they select the ingredients used in the manufacture of their paints. Many substances could be used to lessen cost, but they are unhesitatingly rejected.

PURE LINSEED OIL

is used on account of its superior preservative qualities. The pigments ground with it are selected because experience has proved them to be best. In deciding upon paints for original painting or repainting you must remember it costs just as much to spread poor paints as it does to spread the best paints, and that in the interests of economy you should choose Masury's House Paints for the reason that they live the longest and retain their brilliancy of finish long after inferior paints have completely vanished. They are manufactured only by Charles Fries, of Spencerville, formerly janitor of the schools at that place, was before Judge Bratton in the circuit court on Tuesday. He is charged with attempted rape. He pleaded not guilty and gave bond for his appearance in court when his case is called for trial. His bond was $1,000.

Jacob Johnson, the 14 year old Garrett lad was brought in court Friday morning on the charge of stealing coal from the railroad yards. He admitted the charge and plead necessity and poverty as the cause of his act. The father works on the section at $1 50 per day and the family has ten children. The judge returned the lad to jail and now has the case under advisement.

In an automobile accident near Corunna, Sunday, several young men of Auburn were badly cut and bruised by their machine turning turtle. The auto was driven by Harry McIntyre, of Auburn, and as they were going down a steep grade the machine began to swerve sideways and the driver put on the brake with such force that the machine turned over and went into the ditch.

About a year ago Louisa J. Ford, of LaGrange, died and in her will she gave to the Methodist Episcopal church the sum of $1,750. One thousand dollars is to be used to repair the building when needed, $500 was bequeathed to the Ladies' Aid Society of the church, and $250 to the Home Missionary Society. The money was paid Saturday by County Clerk Troxel to the trustees of the church. It is understood the thousand dollars will be used this summer to repair and refurnish the building.

A Lake Shore train due at Kendallville shortly after four o'clock struck Edward McGrath, of Tiffin, Ohio, at Kendallville Friday, with the result that both limbs were mutilated so badly that it was necessary to amputate them above the knee. McGrath was without funds and he attempted to board the rapidly moving train and go back to his home. He lost his hold, and fell to the ground with the above result. It was reported that the man was a Garrett stone mason, but this was found to be false. He will be taken back to Tiffin as soon as his condition will warrant it.

The federal court has decided in favor of the state food and drug department of the state board of health the first case to come up in the state concerning the powers of the inspectors in the department to act under the federal food and drug laws. The case came up from Terre Haute, where Inspector John Owen seized a number of boxes of canned goods shipped into the state for wholesale purposes. The goods were found to be below weight. The only means the inspector had of handling the cases was under the federal laws and he thus made the seizure. The cases were contested in the lower courts and finally taken before Judge Anderson, who upheld Owen

Charles Stair, an Auburn young man who owes previous downfalls to whisky, was arrested Monday night on the court house square on the charge of larceny, the stealing of two gold rings from a Miss Baker, who rooms at the Stair home. The rings were missing and the Stair young fellow was suspected. When arrested he denied his guilt, but Sheriff Thomas searched him and found the rings in his hip pocket, carefully wrapped up. He was arraigned before Judge Bratton in the circuit court Tuesday forenoon and admitted his guilt. When questioned by Judge Bratton he told the story of the recent years of his life, where he had worked and how he had spent his money. The story brought out plainly the fact that it was whisky that had caused him to go wrong.

Margaret Collette and her father T. C. Ford, have brought suit on a surety bond against Dr. Collette, of St. Marys, Ohio, for $400 cost. These costs were made in the case in which the doctor attempted to secure possession of his children from his divorced wife.

In the circuit court John Pfefferl on Tuesday pleaded guilty in two cases for allowing minors to play pool and one case for keeping a gaming house. Judge Bratton assessed a fine of $10 and costs in each case, which Mr Pfefferl paid. There were eight indictments against him.

Through her attorney, Dan M. Link, of Auburn, Mrs Maude R Cole, of Butler, has brought suit in the circuit court to recover $300 worth of household goods which were seibed by the constable at Butler recently in obeyance to an execution issued by 'Squire Webster in favor of Samuel Noragon, of Butler, and several others in favor of a debt against Walter G. Cole.

Roy Stowe pleaded guilty in the circuit court Monday to two indictments returned against him by the grand jury, one for keeping a gaming house and one for keeping a gambling device Judge Bratton fined him $10 on the first plea and $25 on the second which with the costs will aggregate $52 90. Alfred Kelly and George Luce, of Waterloo, each pleaded guilty to betting on the last election and were fined $5 and costs, or $13 45 each.

Japan is trying to get out of debt. Her two wars—with China and Russia—left the empire with an enormous debt, and in order to pay this off in thirty years, the Japanese government is taxing her people something like thirty per cent on all they earn or possess. This tax puts the patriotism of peace to a test, but the Japanese are meeting it with the same fortitude that the Japanese troops met death on the field of battle. Japan's tax scheme seems altogether fair. In a manner it balances up the sacrifice of war.

John Hathaway, of Kendallville, is in jail at Goshen charged with bigamy. Young Hathaway, who is an attractive good looking fellow claims that "it ain't so" that the Kendallville woman is his only wife. It seems however, that he told the parents of Miss Ferda Bachman, of Elkhart, that he and their daughter were married at South Bend several weeks ago and he proceeded to make himself at home at the Bachman domicile. A scrutiny of the marriage records in St. Joseph or Elkhart counties show no marriage returns that would disprove his story.

Decoration day will be observed at Hamilton, Sunday, May 30. The state has ordered the members of the G. A. R. to hold their Decoration day services on Monday, May 31, but the question was brought before the Post at their meeting Saturday, and when put to a vote the majority decided in favor of holding their exercises on Sunday. An interesting program of music and recitations will be rendered at the M. E church. The principal address of the day will be delivered by Rev. R A. Morrison. A new feature of the exercises this year will be the decoration services in honor of the sailors and marines. This service will be held on the water, the exact place not having been decided upon as yet.

To satisfy their desire for witnessing a wreck, Joe Laisure, a small boy residing with his parents at 63 Eliza street, Fort Wayne, and a number of companions, threw a switch as a Wabash switch engine with a cut of cars approached last Thursday evening about 6 o'clock, derailing three cars and placing the railroad company to considerable expense. One big box car heavily loaded with merchandise and occupying the center of the three cars derailed, bumped along on the ties for a distance of several feet and came seriously near toppling over on one of the boys The derailment occurred on a switch near the Hanna street crossing and did not delay traffic. It was necessary to call the wreck crew from Montpelier to replace the cars on the track. The cars were not badly damaged, but it will be necessary to send them to the shops for repairs.

The Rev. W. L. Meese, well known throughout DeKalb county as the "marrying parson," will hold probably his last reunion some time in June at Clear lake. He will arrive at the resort June 15, and will hold morning services each Sunday during the season. The exact date of the reunion has not as yet been fixed, but will be announced before long. This is considered as a great meeting.

Raymond Husselman, of Hamilton, was buried Tuesday, having died very mysteriously at the home of Mrs. Girt Genagy Sunday. He had made his home in the Genagy family for a year past and at different times he had become despondent. The family went to Detroit Sunday and upon their return they found the young man in his room dead, with a revolver by his side. It is not known whether he was murdered or whether he committed suicide or was accidentally killed.

According to the statement of the Lake Shore officials Lake Shore freight engines in time will probably be run a distance of 300 miles at one stretch. Engines on the through fast freights are now run through from Englewood to Toledo, and the tests are proving satisfactory in every detail. It has been proved that nothing can be gained by running freight engines short distances, and it is the intention of the Lake Shore to get the maximum amount of power possible out of each individual engine, so it is claimed the freight engines will probably be run the entire distance from Chicago to Ashtabula, Ohio.

The cases of the state vs. George Shondel occupy a prominent place on the docket of the circuit court for this term. There are nineteen of them, all set for trial before a jury. The first is for trial on June 7, and during all of that week and the week following the cases are set for trial on different days, at the rate of two a day. In fact, they are the only cases on the docket for the two weeks beginning June 7. As will be remembered the cases are for the illegal sale of liquor, Mr. Shondel being the delivery agent for a brewing company at Garrett.

Monday, June 14, will be the one hundred and thirty-second anniversary of the adoption of the stars and stripes as the flag of the United States. On this date in 1877, congress passed a resolution that the flag with the thirteen stripes and thirteen stars be adopted, and at each incoming state a star has been increased. An effort has been made in recent years to have a national observance of the day by displaying the stars and stripes on business houses and residences, and the idea is gaining in popularity. Ministers are requested to preach sermons of a patriotic nature on the Sunday before Flag day.

AFTER SUFFERING ONE YEAR

Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Milwaukee, Wis. — "Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has made me a well woman, and I would like to tell the whole world of it. I suffered from female trouble and fearful pains in my back. I had the best doctors and they all decided that I had a tumor in addition to my female trouble, and advised an operation. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound made me a well woman and I have no more backache. I hope I can help others by telling them what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me." — MRS. EMMA IMSE, 833 First St., Milwaukee, Wis.

The above is only one of the thousands of grateful letters which are constantly being received by the Pinkham Medicine Company of Lynn, Mass., which prove beyond a doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, actually does cure these obstinate diseases of women after all other means have failed, and that every such suffering woman owes it to herself to at least give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial before submitting to an operation, or giving up hope of recovery.

Mrs. Pinkham, of Lynn, Mass., invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health and her advice is free.

The Man Who Can Talk.

There is no other one thing which enables us to make so good an impression, especially upon those who do not know us thoroughly, as the ability to converse well. A man who can talk well, who has the art of putting things in an attractive way, who can interest others immediately by his power of speech, has a very great advantage over one who may know more than he, but who can not express himself with ease or eloquence.

You may be a good singer, a fine artist, you may have a great many accomplishments which people occasionally see or enjoy; you may have a very beautiful home and a lot of property which comparatively few people ever know about; but if you are a good converser, every one you meet recognizes and appreciates your art. Everybody you converse with feels the influence of your skill and charm.

In other words, there is no accomplishment, no attainment, which you can use so constantly and effectively which will give so much pleasure to your friends as fine conversation. There is no doubt that the gift of language was intended to be a much greater accomplishment than the majority of us have ever made of it.—Orison Swett Marden, in Success Magazine.

Still Held the Grudge.

THINK HARD.

It Pays to Think About Food.

The unthinking life some people lead often causes trouble and sickness, illustrated in the experience of a lady in Fond du Lac, Wis.

"About four years ago I suffered dreadfully from indigestion, always having eaten whatever I liked, not thinking of the digestible qualities. This indigestion caused palpitation of the heart so badly I could not walk up a flight of stairs without sitting down once or twice to regain breath and strength.

"I became alarmed and tried dieting, wore my clothes very loose, and many other remedies, but found no relief.

"Hearing of the virtues of Grape-Nuts and Postum, I commenced using them in place of my usual breakfast of coffee, cakes, or hot biscuit, and in one week's time I was relieved of sour stomach and other ills attending indigestion. In a month's time my heart was performing its functions naturally and I could climb stairs and hills and walk long distances.

"I gained ten pounds in this short time, and my skin became clear and I completely regained my health and strength. I continue to use Grape-Nuts and Postum for I feel that I owe my good health entirely to their use. 'There's a Reason.'

"I like the delicious flavor of Grape-Nuts and by making Postum according to directions, it tastes similar to mild high grade coffee."

THE SOLDIERS' MONUMENT.

A monument for the soldiers!
And what will ye build it of?
Can ye build it of marble, or brass, or bronze,
Outlasting the soldier's love?
Can ye glorify it with legends
As grand as their blood hath writ,
From the inmost shrine of this land of thine
To the uttermost verge of it?

And the answer came: We would build it
Out of our hopes made sure,
And out of our purest prayers and tears,
And out of our faith secure;
We would build it out of the great white truths
Their death hath sanctified,
And the sculptured forms of the men in arms,
And their faces ere they died.

And what heroic figures
Can the sculptor carve in stone?
Can the marble breast be made to bleed
And the marble lips to moan?
Can the marble brow be fevered?
And the marble eyes be graved
To look their last as the flag floats past
On the country they have saved?

And the answer came: The figures
Shall all be fair and brave.
And, as befitting, as pure and white
As the stars above their grave!
The marble lips and breast and brow
Whereon the laurel lies,
Bequeath us right to guard the flight
Of the old flag in the skies.

A monument for the soldiers!
Built of a people's love,
And blazoned and decked and panoplied
With the hearts ye built it of!
And see that ye build it stately,
In pillar and niche and gate,
And high in pose as the souls of those
It would commemorate!
—James Whitcomb Riley.

HOW THE RAIDER ESCAPED.

IN the fall of 1864 the northern part of Virginia was in a great deal of excitement, for the raids of the Confederates had greatly annoyed the generals of the Union forces. At last the Federal commanders determined to exterminate the rangers, and, with that end in view, sent out a picked force of mounted men, eager to meet and capture an enemy who boasted that he could not be taken. It was early in the morning of a warm September day when the men in blue found their quarry, coming on them suddenly at the foot of a hill.

For a moment there was a brisk rain of bullets. Several of the men on both sides threw up their arms and fell in the dust, while their foaming, riderless steeds dashed madly down the pike. Then the Confederates broke and fled, with the yelling Yankees close at their heels.

At last a stream was reached and here the Union men succeeded in capturing several Confederates, but not the leader. He was a small, wiry man, with a frame as strong and tough as steel, one who did not know what fear or defeat meant, and he plunged his animal into the water, lifted his sword high above his head and safely climbed up the opposite bank amid a shower of bullets, accompanied by a shout of admiration from the astonished enemy. In a moment he was out of sight behind the hills.

About a quarter of a mile down the road was a farmhouse, in the sitting room of which a girl sat peeling fruit. The door was open, and just as the girl raised her eyes a horse raced into the yard with its flanks reeking with water and the rider wet from the tip of his plumed hat to the soles of his cavalry boots.

The man rode into the barnyard and left his steed in the stall, then ran into the house. At that moment the head of the Federal column came over the hill on the gallop. The Confederate saw the line of blue uniforms, the sun flashing on the sabers, and with a hurried glance around he sprang to his feet and ran to the corner, in which stood an old "grandfather's clock." In a moment he had opened the door and slipped inside, and by the time he had closed it again the Union men were trooping into the house.

They began a thorough search of the house from garret to cellar, but not a trace of the man could they find. The beds were torn to bits, the pantries explored, every closet upset and no nook or corner of the place left uninvestigated, but to no purpose. Then the barn was given a good overhauling, and, though they found the wet and saddled horse, there was no trace of the rider. At last all the Union men collected in the sitting room where the young lady sat quietly watching the proceedings and still busy in her household duties of perparing the fruit. They were nonplused and could not imagine what had become of the fugitive.

Now, it happened that the old clock was not running, but had been broken for some time, and was full of dust, which the entrance of the ranger had disturbed. In fact, he was in a great predicament. The dust had filled his nostrils and he felt creep over him the horrible sensation of a coming sneeze. A sneeze meant capture, perhaps death, but the sneeze had to come.

A bright thought flashed into the Confederate's mind, and with a quick motion of his hand he set the old wheels in a whirl and the rusty gong sounded a sonorous chime. In the cover of the noise the sneeze was born, but it was not heard. However, the sudden waking of the old clock excited suspicions, and, with a glance of inquiry, the Federal officer moved toward it. The girl was quick to take in the situation. With a fretful air she exclaimed:

"There goes that old clock again. It must really be fixed, for it is so annoying." And the officer, changing his mind, took no more notice of the occurrence. In a few moments the house was deserted and the troops had passed away in the direction of their camps, leaving the rebel to come out from his hiding place a sight to behold. The wet clothes were full of dust and his face gray with the water and mud which covered it, but he was a very happy man. In an hour he was back among his remaining troops.—Kansas City Journal.

"Under the Roses the Blue, Under the Lillies the Gray."

A Medley of Color in 1861.

When the Seventy-ninth New York highlanders paraded on June 1, 1861, to depart for Washington, all the officers and many of the men wore the kilts, while the rest of the men were dressed in handsome state jackets with red facings, blue fatigue caps and Cameron tartan pants. These, with the kilted officers and men made their appearance quite picturesque, as may be readily imagined. But by the time the regiment marched to the battlefield "our knapsacks containing our uniform jackets and tartan pants were packed up and left at camp, says the regimental historian. "If any of our men wore other than the regulation dark blue blouses and light blue pants during the campaign, it was the exception, and they were few." The costume of Duryee's corps was that of the Second regiment of the French zouaves, composed of a blue jacket trimmed with red and blue shirt trimmed with the same, full scarlet trousers with leather leggings and scarlet cap with blue tassel, partly arranged in turban form. The famous Seventh New York marched to Washington dressed in gray. The celebrated Sixth Massachusetts was also dressed in gray when it marched through Baltimore, while there were some few corps dressed in green.

Lincoln and Grant.

"The first time it was my pleasure to meet Lincoln," General Horace Porter said, "he had summoned Grant to Washington to place him in command of the armies of the entire republic. Grant came into the room late, jostled by persons who thought themselves of great importance. Lincoln spied him at once, and, turning to Mrs. Lincoln, he exclaimed: 'There he is now. My dear, this is the man who is to end all our troubles.' They were a strange picture as they stood there side by side, Lincoln and Grant, the latter short of stature, his head bowed and in dusty garments, Lincoln towering above him, his great right hand clasping that of General Grant, talking to him as a father might to his son."

Not All Gone.

A Confederate soldier whose command had run two days from Nashville had thrown away his gun and accouterments and, alone in the woods, sat down and commenced thinking, the first chance he had had to do such a thing. Rolling up his sleeves and looking at his arms and general physique, he thus gave vent to his feelings: "I am whipped, badly whipped and somewhat demoralized, but no one can say I am scattered."

Sat on a Barrel of Powder.

Among the many medals awarded by the navy department for acts of bravery during the civil war was one given to John Davis, who was on the United States steamer Valley City in the attack on the enemy's vessels and a fort near Elizabeth City, N. C., Feb. 10, 1862. When the vessel was on fire near the magazine he seated himself on an open barrel of powder as the only means to keep the fire out.

LINCOLN'S SPEECH AT GETTYSBURG.

Four-score and seven years ago our fathers brought forth upon this continent a new nation, conceived in Liberty, and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal. Now we are engaged in a great civil war, testing whether that nation, or any nation so conceived and so dedicated, can long endure. We are met on a great battlefield of that war. We are met to dedicate a portion of it as the final resting-place of those who here gave their lives that the nation might live. It is altogether fitting and proper that we should do this. But in a larger sense we cannot dedicate, we cannot consecrate, we cannot hallow, this ground. The brave men, living and dead, who struggled here, have consecrated it far above our power to add or detract. The world will little note nor long remember what we say here, but it can never forget what they did here. It is for us, the living, rather to be dedicated here to the unfinished work that they have thus far so nobly carried on. It is rather for us to be here dedicated to the great task remaining before us; that from these honored dead we take increased devotion to the cause for which they here gave the last full measure of devotion; that we here highly resolve that the dead shall not have died in vain, that the nation shall, under God, have a new birth of freedom, and that government of the people, by the people, and for the people, shall not perish from the earth.

THE GRAND ARMY.

We ain't a stand-
in' army now.
In fact, we're gray and lame.
A trifle stiff about the knees
And shakin' in our aim.

It's us that knew the bitter days;
It's us that went to die.
I guess we got a right to shout
When Glory
flutters by.

We're gettin' scarce; but, bless yer heart,
If country called for men
We'd sign the roll "age twenty-one,"
And save that flag again!
—Wallace Irwin in Collier's Weekly.

A Soldier's Fortunes.

A short time before the war a stranger giving his name as Frey asked assistance and lodging at the house of a farmer, John Gratwold, who lived near Middletown, O. Frey said he had been exiled from Germany for some political offense and claimed to have been a student in that country. He was taken into the family of Gratwold, where he engaged as a farm hand and stayed two years. In 1861 he enlisted in an Illinois regiment, had quite a brilliant military career and was promoted to the rank of major. He was taken to Libby prison and was paroled in 1865. His health was broken, and he went back to his native country, where he recovered, and in 1882 he was sent to America as Switzerland's representative. Later he became highly successful in politics, holding the position of secretary of war and other offices in Switzerland. One day Gratwold received a letter from his former woodchopper, who was then M. Frey, the president of the Swiss republic.

Detailed for Baptism.

During the Civil War the late Colonel Gabe Bouck organized a regiment, which he controlled as a dictator. It was while the army was resting after Colonel Gabe's first campaign that an itinerant evangelist wandered into camp and, approaching the colonel, asked if he was the commanding officer.

"Ugh!" snorted "Old Gabe," as he was affectionately called. "What do you want?"

"I am a humble servant of the Lord endeavoring to save the souls of the unfortunate. I have just left the camp of the ——th Massachusetts, where I was instrumental in leading eight men into paths of righteousness."

"Adjutant," thundered Colonel Bouck after a moment's pause, "detail ten men for baptism! No Massachusetts regiment shall beat mine for piety!"—Everybody's.

A Conscript Father.

J. M. Learned of Oxfordville, N. H., had three twins in the Union army. Two were in the Fourteenth Massachusetts. The third, whose twin was a girl, was in the Fifth New Hampshire.

My First Battle.

First Speaker—I say, Bill, I wish we could get into a fight with the Johnnies. I am sick of this inactivity—this eternal camp life, cleaning up, guard mounting, and dress parade. This will never put down the rebellion. What a farce, this going on picket duty when there is not a reb within a hundred miles. It's enough to drive one distracted. No wonder our hospitals are filling up with sick men. All that ails them is homesickness, caused by having nothing else to think about. My God, I want to "up and at 'em."

Second Speaker—Here, too; so do I. I'll bet we could whip h—l out of twice our number and make them hunt their holes.

Third Speaker— Oh, yes; you fellows can talk big now, while we are at a safe distance; but by the time we are at close quarters with them, their bayonets clashing with ours, and the balls flying about your head so thick you would think a whole swarm of bees were going to light on you, as it was when our old Seventh was cut up so bad at Winchester, I'll bet you'll sing a different tune, and wish you were anywhere but there. You would be the ones to hunt for a hole, and it would not be a very big one that would hold you, either. I've heard big talk before, and the ones who did the loudest talking were the ones to be the last at the front, if they ever got there, and the first to the rear. For my part, I am perfectly satisfied to stay here and do camp duty as long as it is necessary. I've had enough fighting to do me the balance of my days.

Such was the common talk while we were lying in camp at Tullahoma, in 1864. Our regiment (One Hundred and Seventy-seventh Ohio) and the One Hundred and Eighty-eighth Ohio, with a battery of regulars, were guarding the railroad between Murfreesboro and Chattanooga. But the grumblers, as well as all others, were soon to have a chance to "up and at 'em," or, rather, up and away from them, and we were not slow in our manner of doing it, either.

Our old scout came into camp one morning and reported General Hood's whole army two days' march south of us, moving toward Nashville, and that he was picking up all our small detachments along the railroad as he came north. There was plenty of life and activity in our camp that day for all able-bodied men. Ditches were dug, breastworks thrown up, and everything done to make our position as strong as possible, even to digging a trench through the burying ground, where the dead had been buried at the previous battle fought when General Bragg made a stand on his retreat from Tennessee. The dead and the living were in the trench together, perhaps to participate in another fight. After all these preparations, our commander (General Milroy), deeming it not prudent to risk a battle, ordered a retreat to Murfreesboro, where he could join forces with General Rousseau, and a lively race we had for two days. We had important business there, and had no use for Forrest's Confederate Cavalry, who tried in vain to get on speaking terms with us. I never saw a more ambitious set of men in my life. In fact we had to "get there, Eli." And we did not let our ambition cool until we were safe under the guns of Fort Rosecrans. It was then that our old Seventh comrade remarked: "Well, boys, we gave them h—l, didn't we? I never saw old soldiers more anxious to move or show more zeal, than you. Oh, yes, but then if Old Milroy hadn't got scared we'd have smashed them."

I am satisfied that our boys who were so anxious for a fight had their ardor somewhat cooled off during the retreat, and would have been perfectly satisfied to never have seen a Johnny; but such was not to be, as the sequel will prove.

Our two Ohio regiments went into camp a little northeast of the fort, and the One Hundred and Eighty-eighth was ordered out as skirmishers immediately in our front, on open ground. The Confederates had a line of rifle-pits which they were occupying. A casual firing was kept up for the most of one day, with only one man killed on our side. He, not satisfied with lying down and firing, after making several shots at one of the enemy who was firing at him, stood up and advanced several steps and fired. His adversary also did the same, and they became the objects for all beholders. The firing from all other sources nearly ceased, both skirmish lines watching these two. They fired several shots each without effect, when our man was heard to exclaim, "There! I hit him!" We looked, and saw a puff of smoke curling from the Confederate's gun, while at the same instant he was seen to throw up his hands and fall back into the pit. At the same time, our man, who had only just spoken, as above noted, fell back shot through the head. Both men fell at the same instant.

Immediately after this I saw a body of cavalry moving up a hill on our left, that we raw recruits supposed were our own men, as they carried the stars and stripes, but who proved to be rebels, and part of Forrest's Cavalry. A cluster of officers rode out in advance and stopped, and were evidently taking a view of us, when a shell from Fort Rosecrans came screeching over our heads. It must have disturbed the group of officers, for they hastily disappeared in the woods.

We were then ordered into the fort, from which we could see we were completely surrounded by the enemy. We were penned up there for two or three weeks on short rations. In order to make it appear that we had more men than we had, we were made to show ourselves on one side of the fort, then duck our heads, run to the next side, and so on until we had made the rounds. A prisoner whom we afterward captured said they estimated our force at 40,000 (it was but 10,000).

We had been reduced to a pint of meal and a little molasses, and our chances looked desperate, when General Milroy asked permission to make a dash out for the purpose of foraging some, which was granted. We went out 4,000 strong, with one battery, moving west from the fort, thence north behind a hill and in the woods, then moved in line of battle up the hill toward the east, where we found the enemy in line facing us behind a stone wall, and not rail breastworks as given in history. Our regiment was ordered to lie down while the two-gun battery went to the front and tried to rout them. While the battery was hotly engaged, our major (Greiger) rode his horse along in front of our line, encouraging us, and said: "Never mind it—dish ish noddings—we can dodge dese, but ven dem leedle tings go zip, zip, den look oud!"

The result of the cannonading was one battery-man killed and one of our boys hit in the foot.

Nothing could be effected here, so we were marched to the rear, down the hill to the level, open ground, and out toward the fort, and as we still believe, that was the intention; but when we got in good range of their two guns a shell came bounding along the ground and passed near General Milroy's horse. The general turned in his saddle and said: "By ——, I'll whip them if it takes the last man."

The order was given, "By the left flank, charge!" and then was the time that I could feel my hair prick and my cap rise on my head. I thought of home and friends, and I verily believe if there had been a hole in the ground large enough to hold me, I would not have been able to resist it, but would have had business with it immediately. When men say they are not afraid or scared, I don't believe it. I am satisfied it is only pride that keeps them at the front.

Our regiment was on the right, and our company (B) was out as skirmishers. We had to force our way through a cedar thicket, where the rebels had cut the trees part of the way through, about breast high, and then broke the tops over. It was slow getting through, and we were under a deadly fire (for an age, it seemed to us)—only a few minutes, say eye witnesses who were standing on the works at the fort.

We drove the enemy about a mile, captured two guns, killed thirty men, wounded 175, and captured 207. Our own losses I never knew, but, as the brush was a protection to us, they must have been light—I think about 150 killed and wounded, and one major killed.

"Double Slow."

A soldier in Company D, Twenty fourth Massachusetts Infantry Volunteers, quite a wag in his way, was once put into the regimental guardhouse for some trivial offense, writes Philip T. Greely in the Veteran's Advocate. The reader will remember, if he served his country during the war, how such offenders were degraded and punished by being forced to perform police duty about camp and other menial work, and how cheerfully and willingly they fell in for this service. The Company D man was no exception, as will appear by the following: He was honored one morning by being placed in command of the squad that was to sweep the company streets, and as they were to march by regimental headquarters, he resolved to show Colonel Francis A. Osburn and his associates with what alacrity and fidelity they were about to enter upon their duties. Sp just before reaching the Colonel's tent he halted his squad and called them to attention. He cautioned them to remember that they were soldiers; told them to "brace up," as they were about to pass in review; gave the order, "right shoulder shift," and then, in a loud voice, "forward, march." As the imposing procession neared the colonel's headquarters, the command was given, "shoulder arms," at which all the brooms were brought down with the regularity of clock work. By this time it had become noised about that something unusual was going on, and men ran from all directions to see the fun. The field and staff of the regiment stood in front of their tents, and quite a number of staff officers from brigade and division headquarters happened to be present. Just as all were wondering what was coming next, the commander of the broom brigade brought matters to a climax by crying out at the top of his voice, "double slow, march!" and this last order, amid screams of laughter, was strictly obeyed.

Family Likeness.

During the Civil War Col. E. J. Sherman visited Washington, and called upon his distinguished kinsman, Gen. William T. Sherman. In "Some Recollections of a Long Life" he describes the visit:

I sent in my card, and when I entered his room, he said:

"Well, Mr. Sherman, are we related?"

I answered, "Yes, general, but not near enough to cause you any special uneasiness." I explained to him just what the relationship was; that we belonged to the same "Sherman family"; that we separated four generations back from him.

"Well," said the general, "we Shermans all look alike."

After a little another card came in. The general remarked that probably the gentleman had never seen him, and asked me to take his chair, which I did, we both being in civilian dress.

As the gentleman approached, I rose and offered him my hand, and as he took it he said to me:

"I should know you, general, from your pictures."

I replied, "I cannot claim to be General Sherman. I am only a colonel. This," turning to the general, "is General Sherman.

"Well," said the general, "I had just remarked to Colonel Sherman that we Shermans all looked alike."

Sir James Crichton-Browne said recently: "The fight with the fly will be a stiff one. One fly, it has been calculated, will lay 1,000 eggs and must, on the snowball principle leave 25,000,000 descendants in a season.

CONSTIPATION MUNYON'S PAW-PAW PILLS

Munyon's Paw-Paw Pills are unlike all other laxatives or cathartics. They coax the liver into activity by gentle methods. They do not scour; they do not gripe; they do not weaken; but they do start all the secretions of the liver and stomach in a way that soon puts these organs in a healthy condition and corrects constipation. In my opinion constipation is responsible for most ailments. There are thirty-two feet of human bowels, which is really a sewer pipe. When this pipe becomes clogged, the whole system becomes poisoned, causing biliousness, indigestion and impure blood, which often produces rheumatism and kidney ailments. No woman who suffers with constipation or any liver complaint can expect to have a clear complexion, or enjoy good health.

Munyon's Paw-Paw Pills are a tonic to the stomach, liver and nerves. They invigorate instead of weakening; they enrich the blood instead of impoverishing it; they enable the stomach to get all the nourishment from food that is put into it.

These pills contain no calomel, no dope, they are soothing, healing and stimulating. They school the bowels to act without physic. Price 25 cents.

160 ACRE FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE

320 ACRES Instead of 160 ACRES

As further inducement to settlement of the Wheat Raising lands of Western Canada, the Canadian Government has increased the area that may be taken by a homesteader to 320 acres—160 free and 160 to be purchased at $3.00 per acre.

These lands are in the grain-raising area, where mixed farming is also carried on with unqualified success.

A railway will shortly be built to Hudson Bay, bringing the world's markets a thousand miles nearer these wheat fields, where schools and churches are convenient, climate excellent, railways close to all settlements and local markets good.

"It would take time to assimilate the revelations that a visit to the great empire lying to the North of us unfolded at every turn."—Correspondence of a National Editor, who visited Western Canada in August, 1908.

Lands may also be purchased from Railway and Land Companies at LOW PRICES AND ON EASY TERMS. For pamphlets, maps and information as to low Railway Rates apply to W. D. Average Milk.

It has been shown that 100 pounds of average milk contains about 87 pounds of water, 4 pounds of fat, 5 pounds of sugar, 3.3 pounds of casein and albumen and 0.7 pounds of mineral matter or salts. The composition of the milk depends largely upon the cows producing it. Both Jerseys and Guernseys give rich milk, upon which the cream quickly rises. Durhams and Ayrshires give milk of an average richness, upon which the cream slowly rises. Holstein cows are noted for giving a large quantity of milk in which there is a small proportion of fat.

Look Out for Sore Shoulders.

The shoulders and neck of the horse will be tender when heavy spring work is started. Then, too, the horses are covered with a heavy coat of hair, which will cause them to perspire easily. This makes it very necessary to keep close watch on the shoulders and neck where the collar rubs.

The collar should be a perfect fit; one too large is more dangerous than one a little small. The inside of the collar should be scraped each morning before it is again put upon the horse.

The harness should be oiled before spring work is begun, so that it will be soft and pliable. It is a good plan to bathe the shoulders with cold water every night after the harness is removed. You will also find that it will pay to remove the harness while the horse is eating his dinner.—Ex.

Inexpensive Chicken Coops.

Very good crops can be made at small cost from empty barrels, as shown in cut. First, drive shingle nails through the hoops on both sides of each stave, and clinch them down on the inside. Then divide the barrel in halves, if it is big enough, by cutting through the hoops and the bottom. Drive sticks into the ground to hold the coop in place, and drive a long stick at each side of the open end just far enough from coop to allow the front door to be slipped out and in.

The night door can be made of the head from the barrel or any solid board, and the slatted door, used to confine the hen, by nailing upright strips of lath to a cross lath at top and bottom.—D. H. F., in Farm and Home.

BARREL CHICKEN COOP.

Take Care of the Orchard.

Now and then we hear of farmers with an apple orchard who cannot see that it will pay them to take good care of it, says the Rural New Yorker. In one case a farmer sold apples enough from his orchard to buy him ten good cows for his dairy, yet he cannot see that it would pay him to spray and prune the trees. There is some scale in this orchard, and the fruit is usually wormy. Taken in hand now with oil and later with arsenic for the Codling worm this orchard would give the easiest money on the farm. We would like to shake such men up and let them see the future. The demand for good apples is sure to increase, while bearing trees are not keeping pace with the demand. Young trees are being planted, while many orchards are dying through lack of care. Do not, under any circumstances, neglect good apple trees. Stay by them with all the care you can muster.

Hauling Farm Produce.

It is said that a Pennsylvania farmer does not average more than one ton of marketing to two horses, and he must send one man with every two horses. English and Scotch farmers generally put two tons of marketing on a one-horse cart, and place two of those carts in charge of one driver. The driver ties one of these carts behind the other and walks alongside of the first one. Thus we have a foreign farmer doing with one man and two horses the work an American farmer takes four men and eight horses to do.

Old Sows.

Don't be in a hurry to dispose of the old sow. If she is a good one to raise pigs she will be profitable to keep until she is seven or eight years old.

Keep them in a thrifty, growing condition.

Keep charcoal, salt and sulphur in a clean box in every feeding pen.

Let the sows help themselves to these correctives, and they will do it every time they require them.—Farm Journal.

Fountain-Like Feed Bag.

Almost everyone has noticed the painful efforts of the unfortunate horse which is compelled to take its noonday meal out of a feed bag. In order to get the feed the horse must throw the bag and its contents into the air and catch a mouthful as he can. Besides the industry he is compelled to exercise in the pursuit of his feed, the horse loses about half the grain by reason of the fact that it is thrown over the top of the bag.

FEED BAG.

The nose bag shown in the accompanying cut is of recent invention and is designed to overcome this trouble. The feed supply is contained in a reservoir which is secured to the bridle and is suspended between the animal's eyes. The feed flows down of its own weight into a saucer-like receptacle which is held under the animal's mouth. The feed is always in reach and there is no occasion for the painful gymnastics which are so commonly seen under the circumstances.

Feeding Horses.

It might be said that grass is the natural ration for the horse, but when confined to a barn and also when worked, the animal needs a more strengthening and nutritious food. To feed properly there must be a mixed diet. The intention of the food is to supply heat and muscle, but not an oversupply of fat.

The quantity of food given should be based on the amount of work the horse has done—the more work the greater the amount of food that should be given.

The foods that are generally fed are hay, grass, corn, oats, barley, rye, bran, carrots, turnips and apples. Of the grains oats is best, with corn second, but both are improved if fed in a crushed state. Oats build up the muscles, make blood and put nerve and endurance in the horse. On account of the price, oats are not generally used, and in such cases care must be taken that the hay given is rather rich in protein.

Corn and timothy hay are of a heating nature and hard on the digestion, causing the animal to perspire freely. If corn is liberally used, some bran, with clover or some well-cured pea-vine hay, or clover with corn, will help balance up the ration and keep the digestive organs in a healthy state. In feeding green food care must be taken.

Feeding Sheep.

It is adways advisable in feeding sheep not to feed too much corn. Clover, hay and corn in equal parts, by weight, should be given during the fattening period. Except for fattening purpose it is better not to feed sheep on corn at all. Corn is said to contain about 60 per cent of starch and 6 per cent of oil, both being very digestible. Oil makes fat and the starch produces heat and also fat. On account of its heat-producing power it is inadvisable to feed corn. Because of there not being any great quantity of protein in corn it is necessary to feed something else with it—either clover or alfalfa.

Breeding Up Stock.

A Western stock breeder advises farmers to breed up stock rather than buy all pure-breds. He says that to establish a herd of pure-breds costs more money than the average farmer can afford, when the progeny is to be sold to the packers or the butchers. Good females of pure-bred beef stock bring high prices, and the farmer would need a considerable number to make a good start. But with a pure-bred bull he can in a few years have a herd of cows that will make it possible to market beeves of high grade.

Strawberries.

Strawberry beds coming into bearing should be cultivated as soon as the land is in good order, and have a top dressing of 100 pounds of nitrate of soda, 400 pounds of acid phosphate and 400 pounds of muriate of potash, applied per acre. This should be spread down each side of the rows, and be worked in with the cultivator. Mulch between the rows next month to keep the berries clean and conserve moisture, using pine tags, waste hay or other clean vegetable trash.

Cheese.

The Bureau of Chemistry of the United States Department of Agriculture has come out flat-footed in answer to the question, "When is cheese not cheese?" They say that when it is "soaked curd" it cannot be sold as cheese. Pseudo-cheese is produced by soaking the curd at a certain age in cold water, draining it and putting the curd to press. This treatment is carried on solely for fraudulent purposes.

A ROAD IMPROVER

On behalf of a number of farmers who wish to construct splitlog drags, a correspondent asks for publication of a plan. The dimensions of the several parts are indicated in the illustration. D. W. King of Missouri, who has been the most prominent advocate of this road implement, describes it as a leveler for smoothing down the rough places and packing the surface soil. Best results are obtained on clay roads. It will improve even sandy soils, though it cannot make a hard roadbed of such material.

REVIEW OF INDIANA

The discovery of oil on the farm of Peter Zimmer, four miles southeast of Sunman, is causing considerable excitement. It is expected the field will now be thoroughly tested.

Milton Fort, who was a member of the Indianapolis detective force for many years, but who was recently employed as a special officer by a large corporation, fell through an open elevator shaft at Ballard Flats and was killed.

Frank Sitter of Warsaw landed a eleven and one-half pound pike at Center lake. This is the largest fish caught in any of the Kosciusko county lakes this season. Fishermen have reported more big catches this year than any season for years and say it is due to the protection given fish by the present fish laws.

Worry over the condition of her fifteen-year-old son, who was badly wounded a few days ago by a playmate while showing him how the late President McKinley was shot, caused the death of Mrs. William F. Watson, 914 Fletcher avenue, Indianapolis. The boy is still at a hospital and it was said that he will recover. Mrs. Watson was the mother of eight other children.

The funeral services of Will C. Ulrich were conducted last week at the home of his parents in Lawrenceburg. The funeral procession was led by a band of forty pieces. Mr. Ulrich, who died from pneumonia, was a clarinet player and had been a member of many bands and orchestras in the United States. He had begun his sixteenth season as a member of the Wallace-Hagenback circus band when taken ill in Indianapolis several weeks ago.

Isaac Brown, of Rochester, well-known throughout the country as "the bird and bee man," gave a talk to the students of the Central Normal college of Danville on his favorite subject. He was up at 5 o'clock in the morning, and a little later was being followed around over the campus by ap arty of 150 students and town people, while he told of the habits and peculiarities of the different birds. Mr. Brown gave an hour's talk at the chapel exercise, and about 600 persons were present to hear him.

On his death bed, Elias B. Burns, 88 years old, of Gas City, heard his funeral sermon preached. After having been advised by his physician that he could live only a few hours more, Mr. Burns summoned his minister, the Rev. Henry Schwan, and forty of his friends and neighbors and asked them to give him the satisfaction of attending his funeral service in his bedroom. Hymns were sung and Mr. Schwan preached a sermon after reading the eighth chapter of Romans. After the service the sick man seemed stronger, but later he relapsed into delirium.

Charging a breach of contract, Jas. H. Hinsley, of Columbus, has brought suit in the Bartholomew circuit court against B. F. New asking $155 d mages, because he alleges that New sold him a "moon-eyed" horse. Hinseley alleges that he paid $140 for the horse and that the annimal was warranted to be sound and a good worker and that it was a ten-year-old. He says he soon learned that the horse was sixteen years old, that it was "moon-eyed" and that its wind was so bad it could not work. He alleges the horse was not worth over $25 so he wishes the difference between that amount and the purchase price.

One of the most puzzling cases that has come to the notice of physicians is that of Madison Klapp, who was injured in a runaway at Alexandria last November. He was thrown from a carriage, alighted on his head, and lay for several weeks partially paralyzed. He recovered and went back to work at the tin mills. He returned home one evening complaining of pains in his spine and an investigation showed that the spinal column was slowly decaying. Physicians say death is certain in a short time. The puzzling thing, the doctors say, is that the man could have worked for four months in this condition.

When Mrs. Elizabeth Helbish, of Louisville, went to Jeffersonville and was married to J. Albert Kirn, a sign writer of that city, she was a year younger than on a former visit two years ago. At that time, under the same name, she was married by Justice C. S. Ferguson to Albert R. Hawk, a grocery clerk. The date was February 26, 1907, and she said she had been born July 26, 1885, making her at that time more than twenty-one. At this last marriage, divorce having set her free and restored her maiden name in May, 1908, she was married by Justice Keigwin and in making her application for license she said she was born June 31, 1888, three years later than formerly set forth. In each case her age appeared a few months younger than the "Albert" she married.

The first home-grown strawberries were seen in Terre Haute a few days ago. The grower says that, while the crop will be later than usual, it will be a large one, and the berries will be of fine quality.

The report that has been going the rounds of the northern Indiana papers that no Boys' City would be held at Winona Lake this summer, is denied by the Winona Assembly officers, who promise to make the city greater than ever this season.

Mrs. John C. Leech, living at St. Paul, has a rooster sitting on a nest of Plymouth Rock eggs. The eggs were originally placed beneath a sitting hen, but the rooster drove her off and has since been keeping the eggs warm by himself.

An explosion of gas, followed by fire, damaged the home of Dr. C. W. Mackey, of Portland. The fire was extinguished by the doctor before the arrival of the department, but only after he had himself suffered severe burns on his hands and his hair had been badly singed.

Joseph Howard, of Hawesville, Ky., fell from the second story of a stable in Evansville and was killed.

William Popple, mussel digger of Mt. Carmel, found a forty-two-grain pearl in the Illinois river and sold it to Dr. Pepper, a pearl buyer for $1200.

"Dewey" Stewart, a well-known farmer near Newport was thrown from a wagon during a runaway. His neck was broken and death was instantaneous.

Evelyn Stoner, aged 14 years of Terre Haute, placed in a farm home by the Board of Guardians when her father was sent to prison, committed suicide with carbolic acid.

A clerk drawing gasoline in Edward Hahn's grocery in Evansville stepped on a match, causing $3,000 damage to the grocery and $1,000 damage to O. C. Hausserman's butcher shop.

A month after she sustained burns in a coal-oil explosion, which it was thought would not prove fatal, Mrs. J. C. Coss, aged 43, died at the Luthern hospital in Fort Wayne.

Harry Tyler, an escaped prisoner from the Indiana Reformatory, is under arrest at Fort Wayne. The sheriffs of many Indiana counties and the Indianapolis police have been chasing Tyler from place to place for nearly a year.

Although James Thomas earns only $9 a week, at the Marion Steam Shovel plant, his wife Myrtle, in her petition for divorce, filed a few days ago, charges him with "squandering his money in riotous living." They were married November 23, 1902, at Columbus.

Edward Rigby, forty years old, was burned to death in the Brubaker dray line barn at Elkhart. The fire is thought to have been started by tramps smoking in the barn. Five persons were rescued. The loss on the building about $500. Rigby is survived by a wife and two children, who live in Homer, Neb.

While the St. Anthony car, which is traveling over the country in the interest of the Catholic extension movement, was filled with fashionably gowned women during mass at Evansville some one stole a large glass bowl from the altar that was filled with silver and gold amounting to several hundred dollars.

Coroner Dewey, of Elkhart, was called to Goshen recently to issue a death certificate for Mrs. Woodson V. E. Messick. The attending physician was dismissed eighteen hours before Mrs. Messick died and Christian Science treatment substituted. Pneumonia caused death. The dismissed physician declined to issue a certificate.

A peculiar ailment has attacked horses in Greenfield. Last week two fine mares driven to town by Nathan Hunt, a farmer, suddenly dropped to the ground, and have been worked with constantly, but appear lifeless. A horse belonging to Oscar Groves was similarly attacked. Veterinarians can not account for the condition of the animals.

An article in an Indianpolis paper a few days ago, stated that a child born to Mr. and Mrs. Samuel White was the first Hoosier child born in the canal zone. About five weeks ago there was born to Mr. and Mrs. Hartley Rowe, of that zone, a baby boy. Both parents formerly lived near Wadena and went to Panama to live, after their marriage, a year ago. Mr. Rowe is a Purdue graduate and has a position on the canal.

Ground was broken for the soldiers' monument in the court house yard at Terre Haute, Major Frank Crawford, many years paymaster of the Vandalia road, taking up the first spade full of earth. The Rev. U. G. Leazenby, of the First Methodist church, son of a soldier, offered the prayer. The monument, which is to be of Barre granite, seventy-five feet high, with bronze figures at the four corners of the base and a bronze color-bearer on the top, is to be completed by fall.

When the trustees of the Soldiers' Home assembled at Lafayette for their May meeting, they found 104 applications for admission awaiting their attention. The number of applications breaks all records. The home is already crowded to its full capacity and applicants whose requests for admission received favorable action will be obliged to wait for months before being admitted. Usually the board is able to pass on the applications at the first session, but the number of applications was so great it was necessary to take more time to consider them. The board had an important new duty, that of awarding the contract for uniforming the members of the institutions. Under a law passed by the last legislature the tsate pays for the uniforms worn by the members of the home and it is believed this will cost not less than $6,000 each year.

Sister Borgia, aged 54, Sister Superior for the past ten years at Sacred Heart Academy, Fort Wayne, is dead. She was formerly Assistant Superioress at St. Mary's, at Terre Haute. In the world she was Mary Scherber.

An ordinance prohibiting children 18 years of age from driving automobiles, or riding motor cycles will be introduced in the city council at Indianapolis. It has been prepared by Fred R. Bonifield, police court prosecutor.

William Quinn, of Bennett's Switch, recently celebrated his one hundredth birthday anniversary. He is in good health, as is his wife, who was eighty-four years old last week. Mr. and Mrs. Quinn are natives of Mercer county, Kentucky.

I. O. Harion, of Frankfort drove an automobile through the bay window at the Middlefork residence, 12 miles from the city, into the parlor, terrifying the sleeping occupants of the house. No one was injured. The accident was due to darkness and a bad turn in the road.

Don't Poison Baby.

FORTY YEARS AGO almost every mother thought her child must have PAREGORIC or laudanum to make it sleep. These drugs will produce sleep, and A FEW DROPS TOO MANY will produce the SLEEP FROM WHICH THERE IS NO WAKING. Many are the children who have been killed or whose health has been ruined for life by paregoric, laudanum and morphine, each of which is a narcotic product of opium. Druggists are prohibited from selling either of the narcotics named to children at all, or to anybody without labelling them "poison." The definition of "narcotic" is: "A medicine which relieves pain and produces sleep, but which in poisonous doses produces stupor, coma, convulsions and death." The taste and smell of medicines containing opium are disguised, and sold under the names of "Drops," "Cordials," "Soothing Syrups," etc. You should not permit any medicine to be given to your children without you or your physician know of what it is composed. CASTORIA DOES NOT CONTAIN NARCOTICS, if it bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

"After all, my friends,' said the campaign spellbinder, "vital principles never change. Questions of expediency may arise to cloud the real and living issues from time to time, but the issues themselves are the same from generation to generation. Political parties, in the main, agree as to aims. It is a difference of opinion as to methods that divides them. For example, what one thing do we all, without regard to political affiliations, regard as one of the essentials of our civilization?"

Gentleness Versus Bluster.

I have a business friend who is as modest and as gentle as a woman, says O. S. Marden in Success Magazine, who is never obtrusive or self-assertive, but who has a most remarkable way of getting things well done, and getting people to see things his way. He does it without any noise or pretense. He does it as the tender germ of the daffodil lifts its head up through the hard turf, by gentle persistency.

No one feels conscious that this man is trying to influence him, or to get him to do a thing against his will; but, somehow, most people about him find themselves doing what he wants them to do. He is so delicate in his diplomacy, so gentle in his tact, and so strong in his self-confidence that others find themselves agreeing with him without really knowing why.

He has a large number of employes under him, yet no one ever hears him raise his voice in anger or assertive authority. He is so gentle that strangers often wonder how he manages to have any discipline; and yet everything goes like clockwork in his establishment. His employes respect him, like him, because he is always kind, considerate, and never scolds, frets or nags; but they know that when he gives an order or makes a suggestion it must be obeyed.

Glad He Quit Praying.

Little Johnnie, who had been praying for some months for God to send him a baby brother, finally became discouraged. "I don't believe God has any more little boys to send," he told his mother, "and I'm going to quit it."

Early one morning not long after this he was taken into his mother's room to see twin boys who had arrived in the night. Johnnie regarded them thoughtfully for some minutes.

"Gee!" he remarked, finally, "it's a good thing I stopped praying when I did."
